

Games Have Bearing on Bowl Bids

By United Press International

While most of college football's top ten are expected to have it relatively easy this weekend, Pitt, Oklahoma, Illinois and Alabama are doing some worrying.

The Panthers meet Army; Oklahoma plays Missouri; Illinois meets Wisconsin; and Alabama meets Georgia Tech. All four games could have a definite bearing on the bowl picture.

Fifth-ranked Pitt is considered a strong bowl possibility with a 6-1 record but the 12th-ranked Cadets also have bowl aspirations and could earn a bid by winning this one and the finale against Navy in two weeks.

Sixth-ranked Oklahoma is trailing Big Eight leader Nebraska by a half-game and cannot afford a loss to Dan Devine's Tigers, who have lost only one conference battle. An Orange Bowl trip could hinge on this one.

Has Bowl Hopes

Illinois, number eight, still has Rose Bowl hopes despite last weekend's 14-7 loss to Michigan but a loss to Wisconsin could ruin their chances.

Alabama, ranked seventh, net a win badly to stay in the race for Southeastern Conference honors. The Tide is 5-1 in conference play behind unbeaten Mississippi.

Top-ranked Texas pits its perfect record against troublesome Texas Christian, with the Longhorns favored by 12½ points.

Second-ranked Navy also is a two touchdown favorite over Duke, and third-ranked Mississippi is a 15½ point favorite over Tennessee.

Fourth-ranked Michigan State is a 13½ point choice over Notre Dame, which was soundly beaten in its last two games by Pitt and Navy.

Tenth-ranked Auburn, also fighting for the Southeastern Conference lead, is favored by six points over Georgia.

Rote, Kemp Contend For AFL Pass Lead

By United Press International

San Diego's Tobin Rote and Buffalo's Jack Kemp duel for the American Football League passing leadership Sunday as the Chargers try for a three-game eastern sweep and the Bills aim for a first-place tie in the Eastern Division.

A Buffalo triumph would lift the Bills (5-4-1) into a deadlock with the idle Houston Oilers, who dominate the Eastern race with a 6-4 record. A San Diego win would give that Western Division power an 8-2 mark and a comfortable two-game bulge over the Oakland Raiders (6-4), who take the day off.

Sid Gillman's Chargers are a 1-point choice to defeat the Bills before a crowd that could reach 35,000.

The defending champion Kansas City Chiefs, struggling to check a five-game tailspin, are 6½ point underdogs against the Patriots at Boston, and the host Denver Broncos (2-6-1) are 5-point favorites over the New York Jets (3-5-1) in other Sunday contests.

Heads in Efficiency

Rote, 35, and in his 14th professional season, passes the AFL's quarterbacks in efficiency — a 62.6 per cent average on 114 of 182 passes for 14 touchdowns and 1,746 yards. Rote almost played with the Bills but was traded to San Diego before the 1963 season started.

His prize target is sophomore flanker Lance Alworth, who has hauled in 46 passes for 968 yards and eight TD's. Alworth caught a record-equalling 13 passes in San Diego's 7-6 squeaker over Boston Sunday.

Kemp, 27, and a pro seven years, ranks second in the aerial derby. The former Occidental College star, who led the Chargers to Western Division crowns in 1960 and 1961 before moving to Buffalo last year, has connected on nearly half of his tosses (143 of 287) for 13 TD's and 2,307 yards.

Bork Busts All Records In Passing

NEW YORK (UPI) — George Bork of Northern Illinois, who rewrote the college record book for passing during his varsity career, added the final chapter last week when he set his regular season career by breaking every career and single season passing record.

But Bork accomplished yet another first by winning college football's passing championship and leading Northern Illinois to a perfect 9-0 record. Not since Davey O'Brien and the 1938 Texas Christian team has the nation's passing leader played for an unbeaten team.

NCAA Service Bureau college division statistics released today, show Bork finished his season by completing 43 of 68 passes in a 27-22 victory over Central Michigan Saturday and wound up his season's work with 374 attempts, 244 completions, 3077 yards and 32 touchdowns—all records.

Consistent

A model of consistency, Bork finished with a .652 passing percentage, the same figure he compiled last season.

Despite Bork's sensational record, he was outdone in touchdown proficiency by Ron Meyer, a South Dakota State sophomore. Meyer threw 17 scoring passes, second only to Bork among college division pitchers, but he got them with a minimum of throwing—88 attempts and 54 completions.

An amazing 19.3 per cent of Meyer's attempts were for touchdowns and 31.9 per cent of his completions landed in the end zone. By comparison, Bork got six points on 8.5 per cent of his throws and 13.1 per cent of his completions.

Bork might have been a one-man passing attack for Northern Illinois, but he shared the wealth with three receivers—Hugh Rohrschneider, college division leader, Gary Stearns and Jack Dean, three of the top four catchers on the small college list.

Rohrschneider and Stearns ran one-two all season, but Dean jumped into a third place Saturday when he caught 17 passes, one short of the record. Rohrschneider also fell short of a couple of records. He finished with 75 grabs, one less than his record 76 set last year and his 14 receptions for touchdowns is one better than the previous college division standard, but one less than the all-time mark of 15 set by William and Mary's Vito Ragazzo in 1949.

UCLA Bruins Encounter Washington

By HAL WOOD
UPI Sports Writer

The UCLA Bruins, whipped by every team they've played this year with the exception of Stanford, attempt to put a roadblock in the path of the Washington Huskies' run for the roses Saturday.

The Bruins, boasting a strong aerial offense, will come up against one of the weakest passing defenses in the Big Six—and it is expected that UCLA coach Bill Barnes will concentrate on that department.

"But I don't know which quarterback I'll start," says Barnes. "It could be either Larry Zeno, Mike Haffner or Steve Sindell."

All three are strong passers, so it is probable that Barnes will wait until just before game time until the right hunch hits him.

Nine touchdowns and 1,125 yards have been run up against Washington via the air lanes this year.

Kentucky Governor Winner of Award

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gov. Bert Combs of Kentucky was among six persons named Thursday as winners of the second annual Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. Foundation awards for outstanding contributions in the field of mental retardation.

Besides Combs, Sen. Lister Hill, D-Ala., and Rep. John E. Fogarty, D-R.I., also were cited for leadership in the field. Winners of the service awards were Dr. Grover Francis Powers, professor emeritus of pediatrics at Yale, and Dr. Robert P. L. Lafon, professor of neuropsychiatry at the medical school of the University of Montpellier, France. The scientific award went to Dr. Lionel S. Penrose, professor of eugenics, University College, London.

Contracts Awarded To Develop Devices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Post Office Department awarded three contracts totaling more than $1.2 million Thursday for research on development of an electronic brain to read zip coded mail addresses.

Postmaster General John A. Gronouski said the contracts went to Burroughs Corp., Detroit; National Cash Register Co., Dayton, Ohio, and Rabnow Corp., Rockville, Md.

The companies will work independently to develop optical scanning devices to read and sort 17,000 zip-coded address an hour. Gronouski said the devices would be in use within three years.

Huskies' Win Streak

The Huskies will be gunning for their sixth consecutive victory after dropping their first three. Coach Jim Owens was displeased with his defense again last week as Washington rolled over California, 39-26.

Bill Douglas, the junior magician, will be at the helm of the Husky offense.

The other games involving Big Six teams send Washington State against Stanford, Southern California hosting Oregon State tonight, and California at Utah.

Stanford and Washington State, two of the losingest teams in the conference next to UCLA, will battle at Stanford, with the Indians slight favorites to win.

The Indians have scored 110 points in eight games this year against only 64 for the Cougars.

American Farmer Given Emphasis

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI) — "Silos" can mean more to defense strategists than the concrete underground home of America's intercontinental ballistic missiles.

It also can refer to the thousands of grain silos on American farms. The American farmer has been given a new emphasis in U.S. defense planning.

Prof. Arden F. Sherf, plant pathologist at Cornell University's New York State College of Agriculture, and a military and defense expert, says farmers are a key importance in America's survival and revival in wartime. Following an attack, farmers would have to be depended on to save breeding stock, decontaminate food and get back to the business of feeding the nation.

The first thing to remember about a possible nuclear conflict, Sherf said, is that survival chances on the farm are good and rural people have time and distance factors in their favor when combating fallout.

Anyone not in the immediate area of the burst would have only radiation to combat and would have from a half-hour to four hours before fallout began. He stressed that this would give enough time to put a well made plan into operation and get to a prepared refuge.

Sherf recognizes the special problems that farmers would have with fallout in crop and livestock operations. But he says federal and state governments are dealing with the problems and are incorporating new information into regular programs of instruction for livestock, dairy, poultry and crop farmers.

By OSCAR FRALEY
United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI) — J. Walter Kennedy, president of the National Basketball Association, disclosed today that he was attempting to effect a liaison with baseball and football heads to further iron-clad all pro sports against scandal.

The dynamic former mayor of Stamford, Conn., said that he already had talked to Commissioner Pete Rozelle of the National Football League and planned to contact Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick for "mutual benefit."

"The principal manner in which we can help each other is in checking out places where athletes gather and where they may unwittingly be drawn into association with undesirable characters," Kennedy explained. "We should share this knowledge because we all are affected by the same problem."

Making use of his major league connections, Kennedy revealed that he already had set up a "relationship" with police in the various NBA cities and is receiving "wonderful assistance" in checking out places which are suspect.

Pros Too Smart

Kennedy holds that pro basketball players, who earn from $10,000 to $50,000 a season with great off-season business opportunities, are "too smart" to imperil their careers by wittingly transgressing in any manner. It is the same, he adds, with pro football and baseball players.

"There can be no parallel with the college scandals of some years back," analyzed the Notre Dame graduate who formerly traveled to 40 nations as advance man for the Harlem Globetrotters. "Many college athletes, struggling to get an education and often with wives and children, were easy prey because of their need of money."

However, he did visit every team prior to the season and warned the players of the necessity of being particularly cautious in their associations.

"By signing a contract as a professional athlete, you lose your status as a private citizen and become a special citizen," he told them. "The reason is obvious. Kids look up to athletes in all sports and are great imitators."

"I handled public relations when the league was formed in 1946," Kennedy pointed out. "Many men poured their life's savings into this league, and a lot of them lost to get the game to the status which you now enjoy."

Ex-Brown Managers Mourned

By United Press International

The baseball world today mourned the deaths of two former managers of the old St. Louis Browns, Oscar (Little Giant) Melillo and Herold (Muddy) Ruel.

Melillo, 64, a record setting second baseman during his playing days, died in his Chicago home Thursday, Ruel, 67, a batterymate of the late Walter Johnson, died Wednesday night in his Palo Alto, Calif., home.

Both were small men in size, but great defensive ball players.

Melillo managed the Browns in 1938. Ruel managed the last-place Browns in 1947, shortly before they moved to Baltimore and took on a new name.

At some time

Both had been ailing for some time, and both succumbed to heart attacks.

Ruel was hospitalized early last year with a severe heart attack, but recovered.

The funeral for Melillo will be Saturday morning. Services were pending for Ruel.

Melillo had his greatest year in 1930 when he handled 971 chances at second base, only 17 fewer than the record. His .991 fielding mark in 1933 stood for a decade as a record.

Melillo broke into the majors in 1926 and played with the Browns until he was traded to the Boston Red Sox in 1935. He retired in 1937, went to the Browns briefly, and then to Cleveland in 1939 as coach.

He stayed loyal to manager Oscar Vaitl during the Indian player rebellion and later the "boy manager" Lou Boudreau, kept him on. He became a Cleveland scout in 1945 and managed the Indians' Dayton, Ohio, club before retiring in 1949.

Shows No Mercy

A forceful speaker, Kennedy also made it clear that anyone who stepped out of line would be shown "no mercy," that he would "throw the book at them" — and that he alone had the power to suspend "without right of appeal."

Feeling that pro basketball is spottier and that all his work in "ring" these lines "prejudicial," Kennedy believes that his greatest chore now is to make NBA players cognizant that they "must be extremely careful of their language and conduct on the court."

"Basketball is a game of high emotion and is played in closer proximity to the spectators than any other game," he explained. "Any words that are said in heat reach many rows deep. Thus an obscenity or a gesture cannot be retracted, and the damage is irreparable."

Eight With Washington

Ruel played 19 seasons in the American League, eight with Washington during which time he was Johnson's No. 1 receiver. Like Melillo, Ruel was a defensive standout, participating in 24 double plays in 1924. His lifetime batting average was .275.

Ruel was with the Chicago White Sox from 1934 to 1944, and he coached at Cleveland from 1948 to 1950. He became Detroit farm director in 1952 and Tiger general manager in 1954, and assistant to club President Walter O. (Spike) Briggs until 1957.

Ruel was a graduate of the Washington University Law School.

Southern Oregon Plays Santa Clara In Season Finale

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — The University of Santa Clara football team will close out its most successful season since the school's return to the gridiron five years ago against Southern Oregon College Saturday night, Nov. 16, in Buck Shaw Stadium. Kickoff is at 8 p. m.

Al Atkins' Red Raiders from Ashland, Ore. will bring a 5-3 record to Santa Clara, including a 20-7 victory over College of Idaho last Saturday. The Raiders, Oregon Collegiate Conference champions in 1961 and '62, wound up second in their league this season with a 3-1 record, having dropped a 20-19 contest to Portland State College.

Santa Clara, also with a 5-3 mark after dropping a 27-14 nod to UC at Santa Barbara last week, will be going all out for a victory to insure a 667 season, the Broncos' best since returning to football in '59.

A top offensive battle looms as both teams are ranked nationally in total offense in college division NCAA statistics. The Broncos have a 398 yards-per-game average while the Red Raiders are listed 24th with 373 yards a game.

Both teams boast top forward passers. Leading Santa Clara is Ron Calcagno who has 71 completions in 134 attempts for 1,255 yards. Bill Bailey, the main S. O. Oregon passer, has 87 completions for 170 tosses for 911 yards.

A running battle also is in the making between the Broncos' fine sophomore left halfback Bob Miranda, 893 yards in 136 carries for a 6.6 average, and the Raiders' fullback Mike Hood, 576 yards in 86 attempts, and left halfback Doug Olsen.

Probable Lineups:
