Prince Asks Withdrawal Of Military Aid

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (UPI) — Prince Norodom Sihanouk made another statement over the weekend "to clarify the situation" on the future of U.S. aid to Cambodia, but it had American officials here as puzzled as ever.

The prince said the United States must withdraw its military mission from Cambodia and cut all strings attached to military aid.

There was no comment from the U. S. Embassy, but officials were concerned over the reasoning behind the latest statement on his position.

Informed sources said his anti-aid policy indicates to them that he fears the activities of the U. S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and is afraid it is plotting to overthrow him.

They said Sihanouk is convinced the CIA was behind the coup in neighboring South Viet Nam and that a similar fate could be in store for him.

Sihanouk called a news conference Saturday to clear up a series of conflicting statements.

A man noted for his changeability, Sihanouk switched position several times in the past two weeks about American military and economic aid.

Sihanouk had rocked Western chancellories first by declaring that Cambodia would renounce neutralism and end all Western economic aid if the United States did not silence by next Dec. 31 radio broadcasts by rebel forces who he said are plotting against him in neighboring Thailand and South Viet Nam.

By design or coincidence, the broadcasts stopped almost immediately.

Nationalized Trade

Then on Nov. 10, Sihanouk announced that starting next Jan. 1. the nation's export-import business would be nationalized.

Then, on Tuesday Nov. 12, Sihanouk decided to cancel American aid after all, starting next Jan. 1, a move that would cost Cambodia $10.4 million yearly in U.S. economic help and $18.8 million in military aid at current rates.

"We'll be poorer, but we'll be more independent," Sihanouk said.

But two days later, he said that American military aid could continue if it was offered without strings attached. He added that cultural or project aid also would be acceptable provided the United States helped Cambodia halt the activities of the "Free Khmer" rebels. He apparently remained convinced that the rebel group is being sheltered in South Viet Nam and that it would be a simple thing for the United States to stop it.

However, Sihanouk's real views are uncertain.

CUT-RATE HAUTE-COUTURE

There's a new, booming industry in the U.S. today which is so hush-hush that one of its leaders calls it "the industry which isn't an industry" and adds flatly, "We don't like any publicity at all."

The business already runs into hundreds of millions of dollars a year, is now spreading from New York, heart of the fashion industry, into cities across the nation. Yet, it's so secret that every segment in it — manufacturer, retailer, customer — resents publicity, advertising is next to zero, many advertising media won't accept its ads or even mention the industry's existence and no hard statistics are gathered or revealed.

This secret business is cut-rate haute-couture — the sale of the highest fashion, most expensive, original dresses, suits and coats in unfashionable, plain pipe-rack shops at prices often below wholesale and representing savings from the initial prices running to hundreds of dollars per item.

In New York City alone, at least three new high fashion discount stores have opened in the past 12 months and more are planned. The two largest chains — Loehmann's, biggest and oldest in the business, and Bolton's-Forman's — now have a total of 10 stores in the city and suburbs. Bolton's-Forman's has boosted its annual gross from $189,000 in 1954, the year the company was formed, to $2.4 million today, expects to expand its present four-store chain to Washington and Chicago soon.

If you walked into one of these modest, unassuming stores located well off the gold-plated clothing track, you'd see an unforgettable sight: dozens of beautifully dressed women pulling dresses off iron pipe racks, trying them on in crowded community dressing rooms, having whispered conversations with salegirls about the identities of designers of particular dresses, then checking out their final purchases at cash registers as though the costly items were bags of groceries.

If you are fashion conscious, the designers' names and price tags would stun you, for you'd find samples from the greatest names in United States fashion: Trigere, Norman Norell, Dior. You'd see a new, undamaged Oleg Cassini dress priced in a top-name shop at $110 tagged here at $49.95; a three-piece Ben Zuckerman suit priced at $795 on Fifth Ave. tagged here at $499.95; a Molly Parnis dinner gown advertised at $125 tagged here at $69.95.

Prices at these cut-rate shops range from $12 to $1,200, average $40-$60, and the markdown on each is usually at least 40 per cent.

Where do these clothes come from? They come from designer - manufacturers who have produced more than they can sell to their preferred outlets, the big-time buyers for the nation's top stores. Either because they've produced too many dresses in a specific size or color or have misjudged the market, the manufacturers have clothes left over. Instead of scrapping them, they let the discounters buy the clothes at rock-bottom prices. The discounters, in turn, clip out the labels to protect the manufacturers from possible retaliation by the big-time store buyers. Although Bolton's-Forman's stocks 30,000 items at all times, Murray Forman says frankly, "Our customers must understand that they can't necessarily buy what they want when they want it. They may find sizes, seasons and styles slightly off."

Who are the customers and how do they know they're getting the real thing without the guidance of labels? While some customers simply walk in off the street and don't know what they're getting, a spokesman for Loehmann's reports, "There is a large body of sophisticated women who know feminine fashions inside and out, who can tell who designed a dress from its lining. They know how to shop. They read the fashion press and can recognize the real thing without name tags or labels."

Many of the customers — fashion models and editors, diplomats' wives, clothes-conscious career girls — first window-shop the top stores to study styles and prices, then go to the discounters to buy. Some visit the stores weekly to check on any new big-name bargains.

Despite the plea, "Don't give us any publicity!" this story is too good to hide. If you can find a cut-rate haute-coutre outlet, if you know high fashion and don't mind pipe-rack shopping, see for yourself what bargains there are for you.

Former Portland Broker Slugged; Robbed of Gems

NEW YORK (UPI) —A wealthy Wall Street banker who is a former resident of Portland, Ore., was pistol-whipped Sunday by two bold burglars who fled with $35,000 of his wife's jewelry.

The robbery was the latest in a series of major Manhatten jewel thefts. This time police said they had "good" information about the bandits.

The two men, one about 40 and the other about 28, overlooked even more valuable gems in their haste to flee the Park Avenue apartment of John Gurian, 62, a vice president of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith, the country's largest stock brokerage firm. Gurian lived in Portland for 50 years and headed the firm's office there before his transfer to New York in 1955.

Carried Flowers

The pair forced an elevator operator to take them to the 12th floor apartment where Gurian and his wife, Stella, were having a wedding anniversary breakfast. They carried a bunch of flowers, as a blind.

Gurian was slugged with a pistol when he slowed his step while taking one of the gunmen from the dining room to the bedroom where the gems were kept. Meanwhile, his wife bolted from under the gun of the second man.

Earlier this month, a bandit entered the east side hotel suite of comedian Jack Benny and took more than $200,000 in jewels at gunpoint from his wife, Mary Livingston. On Nov. 8 a team of holdup men took some $3.5 million in gems from a messenger service truck, but most of the loot was recovered by police.

State Bar Rejects Fund for Clients

PORTLAND (UPI)—Members of the Oregon State Bar have voted against setting up a fund to reimburse clients who were victimized by unscrupulous attorneys.

The association reported Saturday that a secret vote showed 1,079 attorneys opposed to the fund and 658 in favor. Another 109 said they were undecided.

The security fund would have been used to pay clients who lost money to an attorney through embezzlement, conversion, or other misappropriation.

GETS A BIRDIE

FRESHWATER, Isle of Wight (UPI) — Golfer Charles King got a birdie—a thrush in flight —with his tee shot on the 12th hole here Sunday. The bird was killed.

Theft Charge May Postpone Wedding

CHICAGO (UPI) — Frank Vercillo and Ann Farrell may have to postpone their wedding Saturday.

Police scheduled a hearing for them Thursday on charges of theft after Vercillo sold a $100 wig to a female police investigator.

Authorities said the wigs were stolen from the Victory Beauty Supply Co., by Miss Farrell, an employe of the firm. Police said she told them she needed money to finance her marriage to Vercillo.

MEMO TO ADVERTISERS

Advertising is news, too!

People buy this newspaper for news of the world, the country and our community in particular. Our readers are also interested in news about food, clothes, entertainment, automobiles, furniture and all of the necessities and luxuries that have to do with daily living.

Through advertising in this paper you can give our readers the up-to-date news about your merchandise and services. Each one of your advertisements can be a newspaper within a newspaper.

Of course you should know all about the circulation of the newspaper that is carrying the news of your business. How many people buy the paper? Where are they located? How was the circulation obtained? To give you this information and many other facts that you need and have a right to know when you buy advertising space, this newspaper is a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Established in 1914, the Bureau is a cooperative, non-profit association of nearly 4,000 advertisers, advertising agencies and publishers. Its purpose is to furnish advertisers with verified reports on the circulation of its publisher members.

At regular intervals one of the Bureau's large staff of experienced auditors makes a thorough inspection and audit of our circulation records, just as the bank examiner makes a check of your bank's records. The information thus obtained is published in official A.B.C. reports. When you buy space in this newspaper our A.B.C. report tells you just what, in circulation values, you get for your advertising investment.

This newspaper is a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Advertisers are invited to ask for a copy of our latest A.B.C. report.
