

Southern Coalition Still Under Way Despite Grumbling

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
 United Press International
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — The political marriage of convenience known as the Republican-Southern Democratic coalition has not been put asunder, despite some public grumbling by a member of the wedding.

Reports suggesting there may be a crack in the informal, bipartisan alliance of congressional conservatives arose from a speech last week by Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga.

Russell, the South's foremost legislative strategist, and other

Dixie congressmen have had frequent occasion in the past to make common cause with Republicans to oppose liberal programs.

The Georgia Democrat heaped ridicule on House Republican Leader Charles A. Halleck, Ind., for helping President Kennedy extract a compromise civil rights bill from the House Judiciary Committee.

In what could be construed as a veiled "turncoat" charge, Russell pictured Halleck as "adorned in the leather shirt and tasseled moccasins of the New Frontier."

Wallace Ponders Being Candidate In Two Primaries

DALLAS (UPI)—Gov. George Wallace of Alabama, puffing on a cigar and greeting everybody in sight, arrived in Dallas Sunday night and said he might run for the Democratic nomination for President in the Indiana and New Hampshire primaries.

"I'm not thinking of running to help Barry Goldwater," Wallace said, "but I'm not going to help the Kennedys either."

"Anybody would be better than Kennedy," Wallace said.

Excellent Reception
 Wallace said he was thinking about running in the northern primaries because of "the excellent reception" he had on his recent speaking trip.

"They weren't just appreciative—they were enthusiastic," Wallace said.

Wallace is scheduled to hold a press conference today and make a speech at a public affairs club lunch.

"I think the Kennedys are the worst thing that has happened to the nation," he said, "and if I run, I intend to show the people the truth."

"We don't want anybody coming in from the outside to tell us how to run our affairs," Wallace scoffed at foreign press criticism of racial incidents in Alabama and Mississippi, saying, "we shouldn't care what they think, they should care what we think."

"If India gets rid of her untouchables," Wallace said, "then maybe they can begin criticizing segregation. We can't just change our system of individual freedom for the sake of the Hottentots in Africa."

Will Show Interference
 Wallace said a Dallas County (Selma, Ala.) grand jury investigating the use of a Justice Department car by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. to transport him from Birmingham to Selma "should expose the Justice Department for what it is."

"They will show the world how the federal government is interfering in our local affairs," he said.

He said he did not think any charges would arise out of the hearing unless "a Justice Department official lies before the grand jury."

Never Existed
 In any case, the Russell speech could not signal the end of Republican-Southern Democratic cooperation on civil rights because it never really existed in that field.

The coalition has operated successfully in opposition to many spending and social welfare proposals but it has been the South against the field when civil rights was the issue.

It is true that some conservative Republican senators have voted with the South against attempts to shut off debate, but so have some western Democrats. When the showdown votes on civil rights were counted in 1957 and 1960, Republicans in both House and Senate were much closer to united support of the bills than the Democrats.

In other fields, there is reason to believe that the coalition actually is stronger today than it was two years ago. The heyday of the North-South coalition was in the last years of the Eisenhower administration, when the conservatives stood fast against the efforts of congressional Democrats to pass liberal programs exceeding the President's requests. Federal aid to education and an increased minimum wage were two proposals that the coalition stymied.

Rare Fish Landed In L. A. Harbor

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A rare 10-pound fish known scientifically as an Allothunnus fallai (it looks something like Charlie the Tuna) was landed in a bait net in Los Angeles Harbor over the weekend.

Richard McCann, 22-year-old fisherman from Downey, Calif., hauled up the 28-inch "tunny fish" which experts say is the first of its kind ever caught in the Northern Hemisphere — and the tenth in the world.

The tunny has no scales on its lower side and very fine scales on its back.

ON THE WALL of a building near his residence, Mike Nichols noticed a chalk inscription one morning that read "I LOVE GRILS." The next morning a line had been drawn through this declaration and a new line printed below that read "I LOVE GIRLS." The third day that line had been crossed out, too, and a third line substituted—in letters twice as large. It read, "WHAT ABOUT US GRILS?"

Sir John M. Stow, K.C. M.G., the extremely popular governor of the island of Barbados in the British West Indies, tells of the moment, during Winston Churchill's visit there, when a photographer for the local newspaper, The Advocate, said respectfully, "I hope, Sir Winston, I'll have the privilege of snapping you again when you celebrate your hundredth birthday." "No reason you shouldn't," replied Sir Winston, "if you just take good care of yourself."

Multnomah Park Project Considered

PORTLAND (UPI) — A joint City-Multnomah County study committee has initiated an investigation into the feasibility of developing a 600-acre tract of woodland in the Tyron Creek area as a park.

About 414 acres of the proposed park are in Multnomah County with the rest in Clackamas County.

A Tyron Creek Park committee has been set up by the Multnomah County-City of Portland Study Committee on Parks and Recreation to investigate feasibility, land ownership, value, access and other problems of developing the area.

David Eccles, Multnomah County commissioner, said riding trails, picnic areas, hiking and swimming facilities are being considered for the potential park.
