

Regional Roundup

By Cleve Twitchell
Regional Editor

There was something like 16 inches of snow at the Mt. Ashland Ski Area this morning, but a lot of people wish it weren't there so soon. The snow is building up a good pack for the coming skiing season, but it is slowing down the construction work at the ski lodge.

Three of the four towers have now been hoisted into place. The fourth one was scheduled to go up today. It originally was slated to be up last week, but the 30-ton crane brought in from Eugene for the job broke down, and another crane had to be summoned.

The hole in the roof where the fourth tower will go, and the spot which will be occupied by a chimney have left enough of an opening to let a fair amount of snow into the lodge building. A temporary wall has been put up to keep the snow from blowing in from the sides, but it has still been coming in from above.

Delinquent Taxes

The Phoenix School board will probably hold a special meeting sometime next week to conduct further discussion of the Rogue Valley Manor tax situation. The school district has not received any property tax revenue from the manor for the past two years. It is our understanding that the Phoenix board is now awaiting an official explanation from the manor.

The board will also be faced with considering what steps to take next regarding the proposed addition to the Talent Junior High School. At a meeting last week, the board rejected all eight bids which had been submitted on the project.

Smother Surface

We paid Eagle Point a brief visit Monday, going in on the back road that becomes South B Street. We were pleased to note that it had been paved since the last time we had driven on it. The ride was considerably smoother than before.

We realized it had been a little while since we had last been on that road, but it surprised us somewhat when our Eagle Point correspondent, Gaynell Krambeal, mentioned that the paving job was done at least six months ago.

Time catapults by. One day during October we instituted a search for a story we remembered seeing in the paper "a couple of months ago." We finally found it — in an issue during March.

SUCCESSFUL IN CONTEST — Burton Weast, left, student body president at College of the Siskiyous, Weed, and Lynn Warren, editor of the college annual, pose on the teeter-totter used by students to break all previous records in continuous hours of teeter-tottering — current had among certain California Junior Colleges. The students were perhaps too busy to attend English classes; they misspelled the word teeter-totter on the sign in the photo.

New Record for Teeter-Tottering

By CHARLOTTE DAVIS

WEED — Breaking all previous records in a current fad among junior colleges, that of teeter-tottering, is the distinction of the student body of the College of the Siskiyous at Weed. At 8 a.m. yesterday the southern Siskiyou County college had achieved 170 consecutive hours, beating the previous record set by Shasta College of Redding, of 169 hours.

Yuba College of Marysville and American River College of Sacramento are others who have contests going.

Started A Week Ago
Bright and early on Nov. 13, Burton Weast, student body president, and Lynn Warren, editor of the college annual, "Silver Eagle," climbed on the teeter-totter, marking the beginning of the race against any other contenders.

The students at COS were determined to break Shasta's record by teetering 180 hours straight, or perhaps even longer, if participants were willing. The rugged looking teeter-totter, consisting of a packing box, a rounded half log and a plank, was set up in front of the John Mantle Student Center, so all passers-by could notice. Another identical one was set up in the college garage for night use.

The icy winds and the rain came, so permission was obtained to move the main unit to the inside of the large student center building.

Administrators, instructors and office personnel show as much interest as the students themselves, although they do not actually participate. The elders show concern for the students by helping take pictures, advise them on news releases and are concerned for their health and endurance. Thus far no ill effects on class attendance have been noted, as all show good self-discipline.

The entire student body is participating in the venture, girls as well as boys. Since there are two units, individual student contests have been going on. Thus far Hal Whipple and Ed Biasotti, both students

Prospect Rural Fire District Board Selects Officers
PROSPECT — Officers were elected and length of term of office was determined by members of the board of directors of the Prospect Rural Fire Protection District at a meeting Nov. 11.

The district was formed by a vote of the people here earlier in the year.

Officers elected were Rexford A. Norman, president; H. Douglas Kimmons, vice president; Mary M. Poole, secretary-treasurer, and John I. Davidson and Jack DeRosier, directors.

Three of the directors, newly appointed fire chief Frank Artire and the district's attorney Robert D. Heffernan were present at the meeting.

New Reading Program Subject Of Discussion

CENTRAL POINT — Methods for an expanded reading program were demonstrated and discussed in an all-day session when Miss Muriel Benson, regional textbook consultant from Salem, visited Central Point Elementary School recently.

In conjunction with the common level reading program since the sixth week of school, teachers met with Miss Benson and also observed three reading classes in action.

The observation classes were taught by Mrs. Viola Laird, Mrs. Lois Webb and Mrs. Audrey Beman.

The main objective of the common level reading program is to develop reading abilities, habits and favorable attitudes in a continuous process adjusted to meet the needs of the individual child.

Miss Benson pointed out that teachers should be aware of the total group through an analysis of individual needs and that they should teach according to the weaknesses of children within the group.

Teachers felt that Miss Benson's visit was particularly helpful to them through the discussion of new trends, philosophies and methods. An examination of some of the problems facing the children as they learn to read helped each teacher to re-evaluate daily planning, methods of instruction, and materials being used.

Snyder To Address Gold Hill Chamber

GOLD HILL — John Snyder, former Medford mayor, will be guest speaker at a meeting of the Gold Hill Chamber of Commerce during a no-host luncheon Thursday at Rogue Riviera restaurant.

He will talk of Medford's sister city, Alba, Italy, and tell of experiences while on a recent trip to that country. All members and other interested people are invited to attend.

A 1964 membership drive proposal will be considered at the meeting. Previous plans were discussed during the November 7 session.

At that time the possibility of getting new businesses to locate in Gold Hill was discussed. It was announced that two business buildings are now available on Second Avenue in the city center. Owners of the buildings, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bell, former residents, now reside in Phoenix, Ariz. The couple was recently here to look after their property and it was stated they will sell or lease.

ACCIDENT REPORTED
PROSPECT—Another accident occurred recently on the bridge over the Rogue River south of Prospect, scene of a crash a month ago which injured two persons. The latest collision involved a dump truck and logging truck. No one was seriously injured, but the cab of the logging truck was nearly torn off.

Phoenix Council Adopts New City Zoning Ordinance

By BERTHA HANSCOM
Mail Tribune Correspondent
PHOENIX — Two ordinances were passed by the Phoenix City Council Monday night, one putting a zoning plan into effect, the other re-annexing Phoenix High School and the Phoenix Cemetery to the city.

Public hearings were held on both ordinances before they were adopted. No one appeared at the meeting to comment on either measure.

The annexation ordinance was considered primarily a technicality. The school and cemetery were annexed some time ago, but because of an error found in the ordinance, the move had to be done all over again.

The zoning ordinance divides the city into four districts: Class I, single family dwelling district; Class II, multiple family dwelling district; Class III, commercial and Class IV, industrial.

These districts are shown on a city zoning map. The map includes some areas outside of the city limits, but until such areas are annexed the ordinance is not intended to regulate use of such areas.

Some of the provisions of the ordinance are as follows: "No building shall be hereafter erected, enlarged, structurally altered or moved to premises, or any land or building be used for any purpose other than as permitted in the District in which such building or land is located. No building shall be altered to exceed the height or bulk limits established for the District in which the building is located. Every building hereafter erected shall be located on a 'lot' the term 'lot' is defined."

There are regulations on Single Family dwellings, and Multiple Family dwellings. "There shall be a side yard of not less than five feet width, there shall be a back yard having a depth of not less than five feet from the back property line or alley. The front yard shall have a depth of not less than 20 feet."

Persons violating the ordinance will be subject to a fine of up to $250 or jail sentence of up to 30 days, or both.

In other matters Monday, the council discussed the possibility of buying a strip of land between U.S. 99 and Bear Creek Drive from the state to use as a park and play area.
