President Decided On Slow Motorcade DALLAS (UPI) — President Kennedy himself made the decision that gave an assassin the chance to kill him. The original plans for the Dallas tour called only for a fast ride from the airport to a lunch at the Trade Mart. But Democratic leaders urged him to ride in a motorcade through the heart of the city, to give the voters a smile and a wave. Some advisors had misgivings remembering the violence that greeted U.N. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson last month. The final decision was up to Kennedy. He approved the slow-moving motorcade that carried him to a date with a sniper's bullet.
