

Family Council

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor, and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Clarice M.—Once we were an ideal couple. Now we fight every day. Jerome M.—She changed once she put the ball-and-chain on me.

Clarice M.—Everyone, including us, felt Jerry and I were made for each other. Now, after only a year of marriage, we're expert at making each other miserable. I thought he admired me, but all I hear now is how clever other wives are. We argue over money, over my relatives, over his pinocchio games. What chance have we?

Jerome M.—For two years before our marriage, Clarice was polite, considerate and comforting. Now the kid gloves are off and the boxing gloves are on. Hardly a day goes by that she doesn't prophesy I'll never get anywhere. And if I take the wrong lane on a highway, or make a bad buy, her "I-told-you-so" goes on for days.

The Council: Remember Diogenes who spent his days searching for an honest man? Well, we heard a man report that he had an equally hard time finding a happily married couple. He and his wife wanted to charter a yacht and invite a pleasant pair along. "Believe it or not," he said, "we went through our address book and couldn't find any of our friends who wouldn't be sniping at each other most of the time!" So, let's reassess the Ms. Marriage. It is hard. A happy marriage is a tremendous achievement, as differentiated from an endured one. Since there was real love at the start of yours, the problem now is one of more giving — i.e., giving in, giving up, and forgiving. . . . A reader sent me a list entitled: "101 Ways to Wreck a Marriage." Fortunately you've only dipped into a handful of them. How about concentrating on a new list, jointly drawn, of 101 ways to strengthen a marriage? Here is a start, as Ogden Nash puts it in "Everyone But Thee and Me": — as forwarded by a Florida reader — "To keep your marriage brimming, with love in the loving cup, whenever you're wrong, admit it; whenever you're right, shut up."

Clarice M.—Once we were an ideal couple. Now we fight every day. Jerome M.—She changed once she put the ball-and-chain on me. Clarice M.—Everyone, including us, felt Jerry and I were made for each other. Now, after only a year of marriage, we're expert at making each other miserable. I thought he admired me, but all I hear now is how clever other wives are. We argue over money, over my relatives, over his pinocchio games. What chance have we? Jerome M.—For two years before our marriage, Clarice was polite, considerate and comforting. Now the kid gloves are off and the boxing gloves are on. Hardly a day goes by that she doesn't prophesy I'll never get anywhere. And if I take the wrong lane on a highway, or make a bad buy, her "I-told-you-so" goes on for days.
