

Details of Events in Parkland Hospital Emergency Room Disclosed

By BRYCE MILLER
United Press International
DALLAS (UPI)—It is now possible to reconstruct in detail the events that took place in Parkland Memorial Hospital one week ago today shortly after President Kennedy was mortally wounded by an assassin's bullets.

The first call came to Parkland from the Dallas Police Department.
"The President has been shot. He is on the way to Parkland."
Surgical teams sprang into action.

Dr. Charles James Carro, a resident in surgery, was in the emergency room when a Secret Serviceman burst through the swinging doors. A second one, with a sub-machine gun cradled in his arms, was right on his heels.

The first agent asked for two portable hospital carts. He called them "stretchers." One for Gov. John Connally, the other for the President.

Carro wheeled in moments the portable carts were wheeled into emergency operating room No. 1 Connally was first. Then the President, with Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy walking beside the cart, holding his head, her pink suit bloody. Connally was wheeled into room No. 2, an identical 15 by 10 foot room directly across the hall.

Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson walked in, hand on chest. Sen. Ralph Yarborough, who had been riding in the motorcade with him, was in tears. At first, some feared Johnson might have suffered a heart attack.

The operating table in room No. 1 had been shoved out of the way. The doctors were moving a swiftly they did not want to take time to lift the President off the cart.

Inserted Tube
Dr. Carro, the first man in the room, forced an endotracheal (breathing tube) down the President's windpipe as Dr. Malcolm Perry, an assistant professor of surgery, dashed in. Perry decided further help in breathing was needed. The first bullet had opened the windpipe. Dr. Perry inserted a tube through the bullet hole.

More doctors rushed to Kennedy's side. There were 15 in all. Besides Perry, Carro, and Baxter, there were Drs. William Kemp Clark, chairman of neurosurgery; Robert McClelland, assistant professor of surgery; M. T. Jenkins, chairman of anesthesiology; Fouda A. Bashaour, associate professor of internal medicine; Adolph Giesecke, clinical associate in anesthesiology; Paul C. Peters, assistant professor of urology; Dr. Ronald C. Jones, senior resident in surgery; Charles Crenshaw, surgery resident; Gene Akin, anesthesiology resident; Jackie H. Hunt, anesthesiology fellow; Don Curtis, oral surgery resident; and Kenneth Salyer, surgery resident.

Remembered Deficiency
Carro remembered reading that Kennedy suffered adrenal deficiency and immediately administered hydrocortisone.

Jones began a "cut-down" on Kennedy's left arm to insert a catheter — a device to force more blood into a vein and keep the passage open. Curtis completed the same procedure on the left leg.

Lactated Ringer's solution (a crystalloid solution sometimes called white blood and used until whole blood can be obtained) was pumped in. In seconds, a technician from the blood bank arrived with "O" negative blood (universal donor) and it was started.

To feed the blood faster, hand pumps were used. By now, the cart had been elevated at the foot to help the blood get back to the heart.

Then one of the doctors noticed a frothing of the blood in the neck wound. "He's bubbling air," the doctor said. This means a hole in the lung.

Re-Expand Lungs
Peters and Baxter immediately inserted a tube into the right upper part of the chest, just below the shoulder, to re-expand the lungs and keep them from collapsing. Perry and Jones at the same time inserted a similar tube on the left.

Doctors and nurses raced in and out. Each time the operating room door opened, Mrs. Kennedy tried to look in.

"What is happening?" she would ask. "How is he?"
Clark, the Neurosurgeon, had run all the way from the medical school. He was one of the last of the team to arrive. He raced through the emergency room door not more than five minutes after the President was brought in.

Clark looked down at the President. The eyes were open, staring back, sightless.
"His eyes are fixed and dilated," Clark said.

No Hope
Any first year medical student knows this means that there is no hope for the patient.

Clark had a "torpedo" hooked up immediately to Kennedy. This is a small machine with a scope that shows a heart-beat in waves as a little green light travels from one side to another. The green light moved straight across with a hopelessly steady line.

Clark looked up at Perry. "It's too late, Mac," he said. But Perry grabbed a stool, placed his knee on it to give him leverage and began giving Kennedy closed chest massage — using his fist in a rocking, pressing motion over the breastbone to provide, if possible, a 60-70 per minute beat. He and Clark took turns.

A more sensitive cardiachyroscope was brought in by Bashour. This was his machine. He specializes in cardiology. Before coming to the United States, he was head of cardiology at Beirut, Lebanon.

Electrodes from the machine were attached to Kennedy's left arm. But the green pinpoint of light on the scope did not waver the tiniest fraction of an inch.

President Was Dead
An attendant was standing by with two rods that sometimes can shock a faltering heart into beating. He put them away. The President was dead. He had been dead for minutes, probably before he got to the hospital.

Jenkins, monitoring the oxygen equipment, turned the valves off. The President was dressed only in his trousers, shorts and brace, for his ailing back.

Baxter got a fresh sheet. He and Jenkins tenderly pulled it across the body and up over the face. Kennedy's coat, shirt, undershirt and tie had been folded and put on one of the steel shelves lining the wall. The floor was littered with empty bottles bloody bandages, boxes that had contained sterile dressings, bits of tubing. At the foot of the cart, among the litter, were the President's shoes. A doctor picked them up and placed them with his coat.

"The priest is outside," someone said.

Assassination Part of Plot, Castro Declares

MIAMI (UPI)—Cuban Premier Fidel Castro said Wednesday night the assassination of President Kennedy was part of a "plot" by more than a single killer, and aimed partly at Cuba.

Castro, in a nationwide radio and television speech monitored in Miami, also said the accused killer, Lee H. Oswald, was himself slain by nightclub operator Jack Ruby "to make sure that the supposed assassin would not talk."

Castro spoke for about two hours and 30 minutes.

Far Right Blamed
In a talk Saturday night, the Cuban leader took the line of other Communist bloc countries that "ultra-reactionaries" of the far right were to blame for the slaying of Kennedy in Dallas.

Wednesday night, speaking at Havana University, Castro said he would "refer briefly to the assassination of the President of the United States."

"Slowly being unmasked are all the double-dealing and dirty maneuvers that were behind this episode which is a plot against the peace and a sinister conspiracy... those responsible in (the United States) are becoming more and more defined," said Castro.

Price of Plot
As part of the plot, Castro said, "the reactionaries of the United States wanted to make our country the victim of an aggression even though the assassination of the president of their own country was the price."

He did not elaborate, except to say that the "intellectual authors" of the assassination had "plans against peace, Cuba, the Soviet Union, humanity and the progressive and liberal sectors of the United States."

"It will be difficult for those who are guilty to maintain themselves and this mystery in secret," Castro said.

Student Cheering On Hearing News Of Death Denied

DALLAS (UPI)—Officials of two Dallas schools have denied charges that students cheered when they heard of the death of President Kennedy and two persons who made the charges were hiding today.

The Rev. William A. Holmes of Northaven Methodist Church, who made the charges on a national television network (CBS) moved out of his home with his wife. Police guarded the house.

The Rev. Holmes, described by associates as "highly respected" and "definitely no crackpot," had received several telephone threats after he made the statement.

Joanna Morgan, a young teacher at Lake Highlands Junior High School, also could not be reached. She was quoted as saying students at her school also cheered when told of the assassination.

Profound Grief
Dan Lair, principal of the Lake Highlands School, said there was no cheering. "I said profound grief" at his school. He said there had been cheering earlier in the day, but it occurred when an announcement was made about the school's district football playoff game against Rockwall, Tex.

When the news of the President's death was given, there was only "profound grief among the student body, both junior and senior students," Lair said.

He said "We have always been proud of the type of students in our school, and nothing has happened in recent days to change that feeling."

Newsman tried to contact Miss Morgan at the school Wednesday afternoon and were told she had left two hours before the school closed for the Thanksgiving holidays because she was "feeling very bad."

Interview Refused
Lair had previously refused to allow Miss Morgan to be interviewed during school hours and later attempts to contact her were futile.

The other school involved was the University Park Elementary School, target of the Rev. Holmes' charge. Mrs. Genevieve Cleveland, chairman of fourth grade at the school, and principal H. G. Williams both denied the charges.

Williams called it a rumor and said he had no idea how it got started.

"Classes were dismissed at the regular time and there was no cheering," he said.

He said the assassination never was announced to the children.
