State Board Given Choice In Dispute

SALEM (UPI)—It's up to the State Board of Education to decide whether it wants to take an official stand in the controversial Yamhill-Polk County Rural School Board dispute.

The Polk County school superintendent had contended that the state board was required to approve a proposed joint administrative district regardless of the failure of the Yamhill County board to consent.

THE SIGN MEANT WHAT IT SAID—This no parking sign meant business, as a sorry motorist in Atlanta, Ga. found out last week. The tree on which the sign was posted toppled over as if to punish the motorist for disobeying the parking regulation. Technically, it was a storm accompanied by heavy winds which caused the tree to fall, but the sight gave one cause to wonder. (UPI)

THE WEEK IN CALIFORNIA

Governor Brown Proposes Memorial Service on Dec. 22

By United Press International—Many sought solace in the words of the great, the near great, or the anonymous figure who in the end always has the final word—the man in the street.

But even he couldn't believe it. Much less express it.

Thus a classic silence reigned last week, a silence broken only by the futile efforts of a nation attempting to express its shock, its disbelief, its grief, and in some cases a love many didn't know they had, for John F. Kennedy, the man and the president, and the legend that surrounded him.

The state, along with the rest of the nation, went into official mourning on Monday, the day of the president's burial. The state's public life came to a halt: schools, public offices, most stores, shut their doors. It was a time of sadness and reflection in the wake of one of the greatest shocks of the century.

Flags hung at half mast on high buildings; some hung from makeshift staffs nailed to battered garages. Churches were filled for memorial services Saturday, Sunday and Monday, and some continued through the week. Women wept, and so did men, some in private, some in public. Some in Folsom prison.

On the steps of the capitol, more than 3,000 teenagers, summoned only a few hours before, gathered with candles cupped against the wind, to pray and express their grief. Civil rights leaders in Los Angeles either postponed or called off demonstrations. Leaders of both political parties urged a cessation of partisan-political speeches until the end of the year.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown, who attended the president's funeral, and the brother of the late Sen. Robert A. Taft, R-Ohio, Charles P. Taft, proposed a candlelight memorial service across the nation on Dec. 22, the last day of the official national mourning period.

Gov. Brown, tears in his eyes, expressed his grief at a news conference a few hours after the president's death. "One of the great American presidents has died."

By the end of the week federal and state investigators in Dallas were still asking why. And so were the people.

Elsewhere, there were these developments:

Anderson—Before stepping into St. Paul's Episcopal Cathedral in Los Angeles Monday for memorial services for the late president, Lt. Gov. Glenn M. Anderson said he saw a "fearful sign" in America. Anderson said "Recent events in our nation are a fearful sign of growing immorality—a frightening lack of courage to express and act upon what we know is right. It has come to an outrageous climax in the sorrowful events of these last days. Bigotry and hatred are evils that grow and fester in ugly darkness."

Huxley—Aldous Huxley, philosopher and novelist, died of cancer at his home in Hollywood and was cremated following private funeral services. He was 69. Huxley, widely known for his 1932 novel "Brave New World" had recently completed his last work, "Literature and Science." Only members of the immediate family attended the services for the English-born writer, whose death came the same day as the assassination of President Kennedy.

Kawakita — Tomoya (The Meatball) Kawakita, 42, was ordered freed from McNeil Island Federal Prison in Washington state in one of President Kennedy's final acts. Kawakita, born in Calexico, went to Japan in 1939 to study and when war broke out became an interpreter for the Japanese at prisoner-of-war camps. In 1948, he was convicted of eight acts of treasonable brutality inflicted on American prisoners.

He had been arrested by a former prisoner who recognized him, and denied the charges despite testimony by 35 survivors of the Bataan Death March that he abused them in a prison camp, that his treatment was so brutal that some prisoners died or went insane. It was revealed last week that President Kennedy had allowed Kawakita's release on the condition that he leave the country and never return.

Rocket—The Air Force fired its 22nd Minuteman Missile from the West Coast and it traveled 5,000 miles downrange into the Pacific. The rocket was fired from an 85-foot deep silo and carried a mock nuclear warhead in a training launch for a Strategic Air Command missile combat crew.
