

Rail Unions To Challenge Board's Decision

Suit To Be Filed Over Arbitration On Work Rules

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Five unions involved in the railroad work rules dispute announced today they would file suit this week challenging the decision of an arbitration board that would eliminate thousands of rail jobs.

The unions said railroad management would continue to ask Congress to send labor disputes to arbitration if the board's decision is allowed to go unchallenged or unchanged.

The arbiters ruled Nov. 26 that 90 per cent of fireman jobs on freight and yard locomotives could be eliminated gradually. They also set up an arbitration system to determine size of most train crews if renewed negotiations could not settle that issue.

In Management's Favor

In announcing formally their decision to file law suits challenging the award, the five unions said "this precedent of labor compulsion is weighted heavily in management's favor."

The union—representing firemen, switchmen, engineers, trainmen and conductors—said disputes over other issues and wage demands could again be placed before Congress so long as the railroads found compulsory arbitration "so palatable."

Negotiations on other issues in dispute—pay systems, work jurisdiction and seniority districts—are scheduled to resume Wednesday after a recess since Nov. 22. Both sides have indicated no progress has been made on these issues and a strike is possible if there is no settlement by Feb. 24.

To Challenge Law

The rail unions also authorized their attorneys to challenge the constitutionality of the law that set up the rail arbitration board last August to avert a threatened nationwide rail strike.

Concerning that aspect of their legal fight, the unions said:

"Compulsion in the railroad work rules dispute would force 200,000 railroad operating employees to work under conditions far inferior to the conditions bought and paid for through collective bargaining. At the same time, the railroad corporations would make a handsome profit at the expense of their employees' freedom. This is not democratic, just, nor constitutional."

Pope's Document Grants New Powers To Bishops

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Pope Paul VI, in a historic document read to the Ecumenical Council, today granted bishops sweeping new powers dealing with such varied subjects as outdoor Masses and marriages between Catholics and non-Catholics.

The council fathers already had voted, at the invitation of the pontiff, to extend their powers and share the right of governing with the Pope.

But Paul VI, apparently bypassing the council in the interest of speed, decided to issue a document dealing with the matter. As the pontiff sat on his red and gold throne in St. Peter's Basilica, Pericle Felici, secretary general of the council, read a decree titled "Pastorale Munus" (Pastoral Office). The title is taken from the opening words in Latin.

The proclamation listed 40 powers which the Pope gave the bishops on a permanent basis. It also listed new personal privileges that they may exercise.

One of the powers concerning marriage is the right of a bishop to give special dispensation for mixed marriages between Catholics and others. Prior to the papal decree bishops had this power, but it had been given to them at regular intervals on a temporary basis. Now it is permanent.

Ceremonies today also marked the 40th anniversary of the Council of Trent in the 16th Century, the Council of Trent sought to defend the Catholic church from the Protestant reformation.

The current session finished its 1963 working sessions Monday and will recess Wednesday until September.

The pontiff's document was dated Nov. 30, 1963, the day of the feast of St. Andrew the Apostle.

6 Yanks Face Court Martial In Slaying of Serviceman

EVREUX, France (UPI)—Six American soldiers, five of them Negroes, appeared before a court martial today accused of the unpremeditated murder of a white airman.

But four of them were granted a separate trial, and the court martial proceeded with two defendants.

Three of the defendants were granted a separate trial when they requested that enlisted men sit on the court martial. The present court is made up of 11 white officers.

Another defendant, PFC Franklin D. Waddell of Philadelphia, won a separate trial when his defense attorney charged that Waddell's former commander made prejudicial remarks about him to an investigating commission. The lawyer said the commander, Maj. Robert Hill, called Waddell a "known troublemaker."

A re-investigation was ordered. The French press has raised an outcry that the victim died because of racial antagonism among American servicemen.

fight was a drunken brawl that stemmed from rivalry between Army and Air Force personnel. The court martial started at the U.S. Air Base near Evreux, about 50 miles west of Paris. It is expected to last a week.

The six soldiers, charged in the death of Airman 1st Class Robert Padgett, 23, of Woodlawn, Va., face a possible maximum penalty of life in prison upon conviction.

The French press said that the Evreux, where cafes and bars are "voluntarily" segregated, was an "Alabama in Normandy." Newspapers claimed the town's segregation policies were behind Padgett's death.

Both colored and white airmen at the base refused to discuss the death as a racial matter. Most of them shrugged off questions and blamed Padgett's killing on a servicemen's barracks fight.

Padgett died Sept. 6 in a hospital. Witnesses said he and four other men in his barracks were attacked by soldiers wielding nine-inch steel bars taken from bunks. The four other airmen were hospitalized and then released.

The defendants are members of the 557th Quartermaster Company, an aerial parachute supply unit, based near Evreux with 3,200 members of the U.S. 322nd Air Division. About 15 per cent of base personnel is Negro.

The others accused are: PFC PFC Edward Spears of 203 Edward Spears of New York City; PFC Raymond C. Bost Jr. of Pittsburgh; PFC Richard C. Parker of Eckman, Va.; PFC Robert C. Burrell of Philadelphia; and PFC Allen Gernard of New York City.

Spears, Parker and Gernard requested and were granted a separate trial.

COMBS AND SCALP DISEASE

O. Can scalp diseases be "passed around" by using the same comb or hair-dresser?

A. Infectious scalp diseases can be transmitted among people using the same comb and perhaps among people using the same hairdresser. Hand-dryer-acquired infections, although possible, probably occur rarely.

DECAFFEINATED COFFEE

O. Certain coffee products are advertised as having little or no caffeine. Is this true?

A. Some decaffeinated coffees are labeled "97% caffeine free." Since the average cup of coffee contains about 0.1 gm. (1/10 gr.) caffeine, this means that by comparison, the decaffeinated coffee would contain only 0.003 gm. caffeine per cup.
