Hearing on Election in South Talent Zoned Area Continued

A hearing on whether there should be an early election on the south Talent interim zoning was continued last night by the Jackson County Court so it could consider the testimony presented.

A raised hand vote showed that 18 of the 25 south Talent people present favored holding an election on the zoning question as soon as possible.

Jameson D. Selleck, a partner in the Lithia Drive-In Theater, of south Talent, and an Ashland resident, was the only person opposing the election. He said he represented the people opposed to the election who were unable to attend the meeting in the courthouse auditorium.

Medford Lawyer Russell DeForest, representing those calling for an election, said petitions indicated that 45 per cent of the 227 registered voters living in the area favored an early vote.

Signatures Verified

Of the 164 signatures on the election petitions, 104 were verified by the county elections department as registered voters and area residents, he said. Fifty-six other signatures were of residents living outside the area, non-registered voters and some signatures could not be read to be verified, he said.

Selleck said Donald Grimes, a leader of the area residents opposing the election, polled 58 of the 104 people who had signed the petitions. Thirty-eight were for zoning, 18 were doubtful and two were against zoning, Selleck said. This means 65 per cent favor zoning, 31 per cent do not know and 3 per cent are against zoning, he added.

County Judge Earl M. Miller

Answering remarks from the audience, Judge Miller said the County Court does not control establishment of a wrecking yard. The Oregon Department of Motor Vehicles issues the license and does not have to consult the County Court.

Vandals Damage Car, Store Windows

Milo Glenn Barnes, 2447 Happy Valley Drive, told Medford police that vandals had damaged two windows in his car sometime Monday afternoon while it was parked under the freeway viaduct near Eighth Street.

Barnes said the windows were apparently damaged by B-B guns.

Proprietors of Patterson Plumbing Company, 827 W. Jackson St., reported to police that their windows had been broken, apparently with B-B guns, sometime Sunday night.

said six people had notified him yesterday afternoon indicating they opposed the election.

Group Is Divided

DeForest said the South Talent Voters' Association, which he represents, as an organization is not favoring or opposing zoning. The group is divided on that issue, he said. But it does feel that the zoning should be put to an early vote because of serious problems and some inequities.

"Whether it is a final ordinance or not, south Talent residents are living under it and it does have an immediate effect," he said.

The county judge had explained that the interim ordinance was established following a public hearing of the area residents, a number of whom had petitioned for the zoning. It expires Nov. 1, 1964.

A public hearing will be held before Nov. 1 when a comprehensive development plan for the zoned area will be presented. George Brenner, Jackson County planning director, explained the plan will show proper location of commercial, industrial and residential areas within the south Talent area. After the County Court has ascertained the feeling of the people of the area, the County Court decides whether to re-establish the zoning or allow it to expire.

Would Not Serve Purpose

Selleck said many of the people signing petitions for an election thought they were signing petitions for adoption of zoning for the area. An election before the zoning expires would not serve any purpose. If voted down it would leave the area unprotected and another wrecking yard could be established, he said.

Other members of the audience said a minority group petitioned for the interim zoning and said the majority should have a right to vote on it.

Taxed As Commercial

William B. Jessen, area resident, said his property is now zoned as residential farm property and taxed as commercial property. He said he has had five offers to sell it as commercial property, but due to the zoning was unable to do so. Adjacent property was sold at a sheriff's sale because of the zoning, he said.

Jessen said he had not attended the public hearing before the zoning was established and had not sought a variance from the planning commission. "I would not stoop to that," he declared.

He sharply criticized the planning commission, the state legislature, and some of the people who had sought the zoning.
