

500 ICBMs in U.S. Declared Aimed at Specific Target

High Steel Production News Fails to Boost Weak Market

NEW YORK (UPI)—Stocks failed to get off the ground today. Motors showed some improvement following reports that Studebaker, which has been losing money on its automotive operations but showing a profit on its 12 other divisions, moved up a point in initial response to the news but lost more than half of this gain in later dealings.

DOW JONES AVERAGES
NEW YORK (UPI)—Dow Jones final stock averages: 30 industrials 759.08, off 1.17; 20 railroads 173.06, up 0.23; 15 utilities 137.04, up 0.24, and 65 stocks 265.00, off 0.07. Sales Monday were about 4.43 million shares compared with 4.83 million shares Friday.

Missiles Equipped With Nuclear Tips, Air Force Reports

NORTON AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (UPI)—The Air Force disclosed Monday it now has 509 operational intercontinental ballistic missiles within the United States—all armed with nuclear warheads and aimed at "a specific target."

But it emphasized that these missiles are deterrent weapons to be used only for retaliation in the event of an enemy nuclear attack on the U.S. "They are purely defensive," stressed Col. Arthur Snowden, a spokesman for the Air Force's Ballistic Systems Division (BSD) here.

By the first of the year the number of these rockets will swell to 550, and to "well over 600" by mid-1964.

All of these missiles—which include Atlas, Titan and Minuteman—are capable of hitting and devastating any possible enemy target.

Although the military and government cautiously refuse to identify "the specific target," it is commonly known to be the Soviet Union.

U.S. Ahead

"What was a serious race between the U.S. and Russia a few years ago now has turned heavily in favor of this country as far as the number of missiles is concerned," said Snowden, who is in charge of BSD plans and policy.

BDS is the headquarters management agency for all of the nation's ICBM's.

Snowden said that Minuteman "instant ICBM" missiles are in mass production and are being put into underground silos at the rate of one a day. He said that by the late 1960s the U.S. will have 900 operational Minuteman poised in firing position.

Another leader in the space-missile field, Maj. Gen. W. Austin Davis—who is the BSD commander—told United Press International:

"We are going to have a tremendous missile force in the field in the near future. One of our follow-on efforts will be to field weapons as fast as we can build and develop them."

Race Goes On

But Davis pointed out that this country's big lead in the number of missiles does not mean an end to all aspects of the missile race.

The Air Force acknowledges that a new rivalry has emerged between the world's two mightiest powers. Both nations now are waging a race to develop invincible anti-missile systems and at the same time working on missile deception techniques for penetrating enemy defenses.

Early last month Russia displayed a rocket which it said was an anti-ICBM capable of intercepting missiles. Later in the month the U.S. said its Nike-Zeus anti-missile missile had scored its 10th successful intercept on one of our own ICBM's in the Pacific.

In addition to an anti-ICBM systems, Davis said the U.S. must "improve its re-entry vehicles to give us a better capability in this field." He said this meant learning how to increase the capability of re-entry vehicles to fulfill their missions.

The re-entry vehicle is the nose cone section of the ICBM that is designed to hit an enemy target with a nuclear warhead.

"We must try to stay ahead of any defensive system that an enemy might have," he said.

Several Ways

At the present time, he disclosed, the U.S. is exploring several missile "penetration" techniques.

One is the decoy method. The BSD commandant said this would be the sending of a nuclear-laden missile with an escort of possibly as many as five decoy "birds" to confuse an enemy. The deadly missile could theoretically reach its target before all of the rockets could be intercepted.

Gen. Davis also noted that the U.S. already has electronic decoys on its Titans which give the impression that more than one missile is approaching to confuse defenses in the target area.

He said another method under study was "low observability."

"This means a missile could be made so slim that it would be virtually impossible to be seen on a radar screen," he explained. "The nature of radar is such that this is possible. Radar has a limitation on how small an object it can display."

As for its own defenses at present, the U.S. has nothing to worry about, the general said.

"The missile units now operational, in combination with the Strategic Air Command's manned bomber forces, constitute the most powerful deterrent force which any nation has yet been able to create."

Lodge Ponders Eisenhower's Proposal To Seek Nomination by Republicans

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (UPI)—Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge said Sunday he would "consider seriously" a proposal from former President Dwight D. Eisenhower that he seek the Republican presidential nomination, although he has no plans at present to run.

Lodge, vice presidential nominee in 1960, said he had no direct word of Eisenhower's appeal and declined to say how he would reply to it. But there were strong indications that whatever his response, Lodge would not leave his post here until well into the new year.

"I have not received any such message," he said when asked about reports that Eisenhower wanted him to return immediately to the United States and begin campaigning. "If I did receive such a message," he added, "I would consider it and take a good hard look at it."

The 61-year old ambassador said that at present "I have no intention of running" for president. He said he feels he can do the most good by continuing to serve here.

Informed sources here said Lodge, who took up his post at the end of August, would not consider resigning for several months because of the critical situation in Viet Nam.

He has worked closely with the new military junta, in power only six weeks, and is believed to want to stay here until South Viet Nam's effort against the Communists has improved with the change of government.

Foreign Briefs

DIEHARD PHEASANT SHOTS WOMAN

DITCHINGHAM, England (UPI)—Mrs. Helen Smith was peppered in the posterior with bird shot Sunday when a diehard pheasant fired her husband's shotgun.

The bird, presumed dead, had been hung over her husband Henry's shotgun stock when the accident happened. Smith said it apparently kicked the trigger in giving a death twitch.

A hospital official said Mrs. Smith was "fairly comfortable." Her thick sheepskin jacket probably saved her life.

ITALIAN WANTED TO ATTRACT ATTENTION

BRESCIA, Italy (UPI)—Police today questioned a young Italian bus driver who admitted throwing a Molotov cocktail at the door of Pope Paul VI's birthplace.

Alessio Bonifati, 24, told police he tossed the fused bottle, filled with gasoline, at the Papal birthplace Sunday "because I wanted to do something sensational that would attract attention."

He said he meant no harm to the Pope.

KALININ HOCKEY TEAM GETS HEAVE HO

MOSCOW (UPI)—The army newspaper Red Star said the entire Kalinin army hockey team has been thrown out of the USSR national championships for "holliganism and drunkenness."

KARACHI-MOSCOW AIR SERVICE INAUGURATED

KARACHI, Pakistan (UPI)—Regular Karachi-Moscow air service was inaugurated Sunday when a Soviet Ilyushin 18 Aeroflot airliner took off for Moscow, via Kabul and Tashkent, with 13 passengers.

Aeroflot will operate one flight weekly on the route in each direction.

Senators Continue Bobby Baker Probe

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Senate investigators resume today their probing of former Senate Democratic Secretary Robert Baker's outside business activities with a further look at his role in vending machine company contracts with defense contractors.

Chairman B. Everett Jordan, D-N.C., of the Senate Rules Committee plans to hear Stanley Lee, general manager of Capitol Vending Co., and Aaron Goldman, president of Macke Vending Co., testify during a closed door hearing.

Capitol Vending has filed a $300,000 civil damage suit in U.S. district court here against Baker; a vending machine firm named Serv-U; Ernest G. Tucker, Baker's law partner and a Washington contact man for North American Aviation Corp.

Capitol said in the suit that it had paid Baker $5,600 for "services in securing and retaining" a $300,000 annual contract at Melpar, Inc., a defense plant outside Washington, but that the franchise was shifted to Interstate Vending Co. of Chicago. Serv-U sold 100 vending machines to Interstate.

Long Time Seen for Christian Unity

CORFE MULLEN, England (UPI)—Father Bernard Basset, a Jesuit priest spoke in an Anglican church Sunday night and told the congregation it would be a long time before the Christian faiths are united.

"If I were an Anglican," the Roman Catholic priest said, "I would be suspicious of being sucked into the Pope's control. We feel the same about you."
