Preventive Health Fund Lack Rapped

PORTLAND (UPI)—Dr. Forest E. Rieke, president of the State Board of Health, Monday criticized lack of funds to engage the board to do an adequate job in preventive health. "We can't spend money for our state health needs if the federal government has all the tax dollars," he told the annual conference of Oregon health officers and sanitarians here. Dr. Rieke said, "There is only so much money available as health dollars and these could be better spent if the public would wake up and realize where their health money is going."

The Medical Roundup

By Walter Alvarez Emeritus Consultant in Medicine Mayo Clinic Emeritus Professor of Medicine Mayo Clinic Register and Tribune Syndicate, 1963.

Thousands of Girls Must Die Muriel Davidson, in a paper in the Ladies' Home Journal (for November, 1963) says that in this next year more than a million girls and women with unwanted pregnancies will risk their lives by asking an ignorant amateur to perform an abortion. As Miss Davidson points out, there are two main types of abortionists: one, a graduate physician, who will perform a curetment (scraping of the contents out of the womb) an operation which, with proper precautions, is not dangerous. Certainly the doctor should have sense enough not to push the curet through the wall of the womb; only a very clumsy operator will do that. It is the perforation of the womb that causes many of the deaths that follow an abortion. In every city of any size there are abortionists of the graduate medical type.

Group Opposes Stockpile Cuts

SPOKANE (UPI)—The Northwest Mining Association has lashed out at any attempt to reduce stockpiles of strategic minerals and metals. The resolution calling the government's stockpiles of strategic minerals and metals "national assets of great value...insurance against future emergency requirements" was one of a number passed at the 68th annual session. The resolution said, "we urge that present stockpiles be used only for national security purposes."

Journalism Seminar Set for Teachers

EUGENE — The University of Oregon's School of Journalism, for the third time, will offer a seminar for high school journalism teachers during the 1964 summer session, under the sponsorship of The Newspaper Fund.

The Newspaper Fund, a foundation supported by The Wall Street Journal, selected the UO as one of 14 institutions in the nation to conduct such a seminar.

Open to teachers and publications advisers at Northwest high schools, the three-week session is designed to improve the teaching of journalism in secondary schools, to upgrade student publications, and to provide career information which will later attract more bright youngsters to journalism careers.

Teachers will be granted Newspaper Fund study grants to enable them to attend the seminar.

Paul S. Swenson, executive director of The Newspaper Fund, who visited the university last year, made the announcement.

Salvage Operations Start on Freighter

ASTORIA, Ore. (UPI)—Salvage operations were to begin today on the freighter C Trader which was aground in the Columbia River six miles west of here.

An evaluation was made Sunday to see how much work would be needed before attempts could be made to refloat the 256-foot vessel.

The ship, which had taken on a cargo of lumber at Raymond, Wash., was en route to Los Angeles Friday night when it lost its steering and electric power and began sinking. It was taken under tow by the Coast Guard cutter Mallow near Willapa Bay, Wash., and the tow was transferred to the commercial salvage vessel Salvage Chief north of here early Saturday.

The ship reached the mouth of the Columbia about 8 a.m. Saturday and proceeded across the bar. She continued to settle in the water and then ran aground in the harbor inside the bar. Tugs pulled the freighter further up onto the sand so that salvage operations could be performed.
