District Requests City's Assistance To Correct Trouble

The Rogue River Valley Irrigation District has requested the City of Medford to cooperate in correcting a flood problem along the Hopkins Canal from the Grandview area to McAndrews bridge.

In a letter directed to City Manager Robert Duff, the district argued that the city is responsible for work, material, and costs needed to correct the problem.

The area was in a flood stage last Dec. 2 and inflicted minor damage to a nearby residence.

The proposed project includes construction of a supplemental spillway at McAndrews Road and Bear Creek, and building up the bank along the north side of Hopkins Canal east of Biddle Road.

It includes increasing the capacity of crossing under the ditch on the south side of Grand Avenue, and building the bank near the Johnson Street bridge.

Installation of a 15-inch culvert under the ditch at Roberts Road to take street water out of the canal also is requested.

The letter stated in part: "The irrigation district feels that its basic responsibility is to maintain the Hopkins Canal to proper standards as an irrigation facility and that the district is not obligated to provide additional facilities to handle flood and storm water brought on by improvements in the City of Medford."

The letter suggested that the City of Medford work with the district in sharing financial, equipment rental, and manpower.

Medford City Attorney William Mansfield and Public Works Director Vernon Thorpe met with two representatives of the district last week to discuss the problem. The cost of the project has not been determined.

Henry U. — My brother is acting like an idiot over this girl.

Bernard U. — I want some fun out of life before I'm too old to enjoy it.

Henry U. — Talk about the seven-year - itch! Bernie must be having a 27-year-itch and it'll be fatal unless he finds the right cure. He's been married that long to a beautiful, loving wife. Even as her in-laws, my wife and I respect and admire her. But Bernie fell for the flattery of a young secretary he met at a convention in Atlantic City. He takes her dancing in night-clubs, tells me he'd like to marry her.

Bernard U. — I'm 56 but feel like 36. My wife is the same age but might as well be 86 from the way she spends her time. I didn't realize how fast I was turning into an old fogey until I met Renee, who proved to me that I was still light on my feet, still ready for new ideas and adventures. My wife's big evenings consist of a walk around the block, warm milk, and early bedtime. That's for an old-age home, not for me.

* * *

The Council: Boys will be boys, and so will middle-aged men who are plagued with self-doubts. The quickest way for them to feel like a boy again is to find a girl again. And there are always girls around who are smart (and compassionate) enough to perform this little act of mercy, convince the old buck that the calendar lies, the mirror cheats, the stethoscope and sphygmomanometer falsify. He's the pride of the draft board again. This is the time for all good brothers and wives to get the guy to a guidance expert to translate what's happening into simple English: Is it a new marriage you want, Bernie? Or would you settle for reassurance that old-age is a long way off, that "life" is not passing you by? Mrs. U., conscientious as she is, will require some briefing so as to do her part, both by letting her husband discuss his misgivings with her and by seizing upon opportunities to convince him of his attractiveness. Gradually his need to recapture his youth should recede.

Hereford Group Scheduled Meeting

The Cal-Ore Hereford Association will hold its annual Christmas party at 7 p.m., Tuesday, Dec. 17, in North's Chuck Wagon restaurant, according to President Eddie Meeker.

A gift exchange will be held. A discussion on this fall's bull sale will cover possible sale improvements, change of date, tighter bull selection.

Some of the consignors feel there should be a change in sale procedure.

What's so different about "Astro-Sonic"? A new process, Solid State Circuitry, has replaced the conventional use of vacuum tubes. Through Solid State Circuitry, Magnavox has developed an instrument that exceeds all previous advancements in the re-creation of music. Only through this unique acoustical system can you achieve such a clear, undistorted sound. Listen to Magnavox "Astro-Sonic" and you'll understand why more people buy Magnavox than any other make.

What Is Solid State Circuitry? The conventional stereo has many vacuum tubes which create heat, sometimes become noisy and are the main cause of trouble. Most service calls and expensive repair bills are due to the wearing out and burning out of tubes. However, with Solid State Circuitry there are no vacuum tubes. These are replaced with non-vacuum tubes (transistors) that never burn out, become noisy or create heat.

Does this new "Astro-Sonic" use more current than other stereos? The "Astro-Sonic" transistorized 100 watt amplifier uses less than 60 watts of current—about as much as one small light bulb.

How many speakers does the "Astro-Sonic" have? Four, with the effectiveness of 22 speakers. Why? Because the two front firing 1000-cycle treble horns are equivalent to 20 10" cone type speakers in mid cycle and high cycle sound reproduction. Even the difficult tones of piano and percussion instruments are played back with a perfection that cone speakers can not attain. The two high efficiency 15" woofers at the side of the set were specially designed to handle the bass tones of the powerful amplifier. The placement and the power of these four speakers re-creates music to breathtaking perfection. The high and low notes are so perfectly separated, you feel as if you're in the front row of a magnificent concert hall.

Has Magnavox improved the record player, too? Yes. Magnavox has been famous for years for the precision of their Micromatic record player. But now, in keeping with the powerful "Astro-Sonic" components, Magnavox has developed the Synchromatic automatic record player. It's not just the best—it's the only precision mechanism now made. Not just a claim, but a fact. It "plays" and changes records quietly and with loving tenderness. It doesn't damage them, wear them or scratch them. The pickup tracks at only 1/10 ounce touch.

Water Resources Bill Is Sent To Full Committee

A bill that will help solve the water problems in the Fourth District was sent to the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee last week, Congressman Robert B. Duncan (D-Ore.) has announced.

The Water Resources Research Act of 1964, one of the three most important conservation bills before the House this session, was reported from an executive session Thursday, and was sent to the full Interior Committee for its earliest consideration.

"This bill will be of particular help to the Fourth District," Duncan said. "In Southwestern Oregon only 137,041 acres of farm land out of a total farm area of 2,437,478 acres is currently able to be irrigated. We also have a continuing problem of water pollution," he added.

Duncan said he had long been worried about the future supply of fresh water in the entire state. "Oregonians tend to take their water supply for granted. We can no longer afford to do this as it is becoming more scarce and more polluted by the day," he said.

Would Finance Research

This bill, if enacted, would provide up to $950,000 for each state over the next 10 years to finance a research center to conduct investigations, experiments and the training of scientists in the fields of water and

The center is to be located at of resources which affect water, the state's land grant college.

"We should have had a similar bill many years ago. We can't afford to waste any more time in finding solutions for our water problems," the Congressman said.

Duncan noted that the bill would probably be sent to the House this session. "The Interior Committee under the chairmanship of Wayne Aspinall is one of the finest of the House committees and has an outstanding record this session," he pointed out.

"Of the three major conservation bills sent for its consideration this year, the Committee has reported two of them to the Floor and has only this water bill left," he said.

Duncan referred to the Public Land Laws Revision Commission Bill which was sent to the House this week and the Land and Water Conservation Fund bill which was noted from the Committee in November. The Committee has also reported 76 other bills to the Floor this session.

The case of Jacquelen Ruth Kephart, 28, of 340 Granite St., Ashland, also known as Mrs. Lee Spencer, has been continued in Jackson County District Court until Wednesday, Dec. 18, at the request of her attorney.

Mrs. Spencer was arrested Saturday, Dec. 7, by Jackson County Sheriff's deputies on a Snohomish County, Wash., warrant charging her with obtaining signatures under false pretenses.

She was arraigned in district court Dec. 9 on a fugitive charge and bail was set at $1,000.

According to sheriff's deputies, Mrs. Spencer is wanted in Mountlake Terrace, Wash., in connection with soliciting advertising for bowling score sheets. Information received here showed that more than $8,000 worth of advertising is involved.
