

Graduates Urged To Support Education System

EUGENE—New graduates of the University of Oregon were urged Friday by Dr. Roy E. Lieuallen, chancellor of the Oregon State System of Higher Education, to speak out in support of education.

Dr. Lieuallen was a speaker during the first fall commencement of the university, when a class of 292 undergraduate and graduate candidates were eligible for degrees.

The new fall commencement convocation is one of four which the university has scheduled during the academic year in order to ease the load on the traditional June commencement, and to make it possible for students to receive their degrees with little delay. The program is part of an over-all program for year-around use of university facilities.

"It is the responsibility of the educated laymen of the state and the nation to be the advocates of education," Dr. Lieuallen declared.

"We who are in the business of education are not the most effective advocates of the educational enterprise. Our words are discounted and our purpose is questioned since when we, as administrators, urge public support for education, there is always the suspicion of self-interest."

"If you, who have received the benefits of our educational system do not support it, to whom can education turn? A great responsibility is placed today upon America's educational system—and we, who are called educators, need the help of you and every educated man and woman in meeting it."

He listed several reasons why graduates "should feel the obligation to ensure a free and dynamic system of public and private education in this country."

He pointed out that there is a national shortage of highly trained personnel, and that the economy of the country depends upon the production of highly trained professional people.

Firms Accused of Illegal Lockout

SEATTLE (UPI)—The National Labor Relations Board has accused four major timber-products firms in the Northwest of conducting an illegal lockout last summer which involved 15,000 workers and lost-wage liabilities of $15 million.

Named in the complaint were Weyerhaeuser Co., Crown Zellerbach Corp., Rayonier Inc., and the International Paper Co. The complaint also named the Big Six association in the liability case. The named four firms plus U.S. Plywood Corp. and St. Regis Paper Co. are members of the Big Six.

Thomas P. Graham, regional director of the board, scheduled a hearing Feb. 17 in Seattle on the complaint before a board trial examiner. The firms have 10 days to file an answer to the complaint.

Reprisals Claimed

The complaint comes nearly six months after a strike last summer with the Big Six companies and the International Woodworkers of America. Those two unions struck U.S. Plywood and St. Regis plants June 5. The other four firms in the Big Six then locked out their employees in what the complaint terms "reprisals for the strikes." The lockout ended Aug. 7. It affected 23 plants in Washington, 13 in Oregon and two in Northern California.

The complaint says the four firms illegally discriminated against their employees and deprived them of their rights.

The case is the largest ever filed in the Northwest in view of the number of workers and potential wage liabilities involved. It is one of the 10 largest ever filed in the United States.

It is expected the case will take three to four years to resolve and that it will be appealed to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. After the trial examiner has heard the case and made recommendations, the case may be appealed to the five-man labor board, and then to the Circuit Court and then to the U.S. Supreme Court.
