

Scores of Whales Drown in Florida

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Drawn by some mysterious force of nature, scores of pilot whales charged toward the shore here Sunday and drowned in heavy surf.

The air-breathing mammals, some weighing a ton, churned the Atlantic Ocean into a field of white foam as they battled breakers and undertow to reach the beach.

Police and volunteers, recalling an incident four years ago when a school of 75 pilot whales did the same thing here, abandoned the idea of going into the treacherous waters to try to turn back the whales. However, a crew from Marineland at St. Augustine saved five of the whales and took them back.
