

Ordinance Drawn Up Concerning Close-Out Sales

A proposed ordinance relating to close-out sales has been prepared by a committee of the Medford Chamber of Commerce in cooperation with the City of Medford, Medford City Manager Robert Duff has announced. The proposed ordinance will repeal the present ordinance governing close-out sales. The aim of the proposal is virtually the same as the existing ordinance, but it places more stringent controls on businesses to prevent the public from being misled by merchandisers. Medford City Attorney William Mansfield has reviewed the proposal and forwarded his opinion and interpretation to Duff for his approval and possible revision. The revised ordinance will be submitted to the Medford City Council. One section of the proposed ordinance prevents a merchant from advertising a bankruptcy sale of merchandise he has purchased from another bankrupt merchant, and selling it at a lower than retail price, but at a considerable mark-up over the actual purchase price. Another section limits a person to conducting a close-out sale where one has been conducted in the same business during the same year.

Water Resources Board Sets Hearings

The State Water Resources Board has announced the schedule of hearings to be held in the matter of water resource programs for river basins in this state. They will be held Jan. 16 in Room 6 of the State Capitol, Salem, beginning at 9:30 a.m. Of particular interest to this area will be the hearing on modification of the Rogue River Basin program adopted Oct. 12, 1959. The modifications proposed would permit use of waters for livestock purposes and restricted irrigation, power, mining and industrial purposes. Any person, public agency or civic association desiring to be heard upon this matter, may present views at the Jan. 6 meeting, according to Don J. Lane, executive secretary of the State Water Resources Board. Anyone wishing additional information regarding the hearing is advised to write Lane. The address is 500 Public Service Building, Salem, Ore., 97310.

Ashland Jaycees Set Children's Tour

ASHLAND—Jaycees are having a busy week as they check Christmas home lighting and supervise a shopping tour for 25 youngsters. Both events have become traditional with the group of Ashland business men. Winners of the Christmas lighting contest were chosen by a jury who visited homes of all contestants. To Mr. and Mrs. William Marsh Jr., 620 Harmony Lane, will go the Jaycee plaque. Their home displayed a colorful arrangement of lighted greenery about frosted picture windows and a miniature church with organ music which featured the porch. Presentation will be a part of the Thursday evening post-shopping party when the children gather with their sponsors for refreshments in the Women's clubhouse on Walnut Way. Chosen for the shopping trip are youngsters who would otherwise have no funds with which to buy presents for their families.

Christmas Program Planned by Church

EAGLE POINT—The choir of the Eagle Point Community Bible Church will present a Christmas Cantata at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Dec. 26. The Cantata will feature both ladies and mens choirs. After the Cantata, the young people of the church will go to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Don Pulley to pack treats for the Sunday School children. The church is located on South B Street, Eagle Point.

Off-Street Parking Suggested at University

EUGENE—A national traffic expert has recommended that the University of Oregon provide an additional 2,600 off-street parking spaces within the next three years, and that plans be formed to add additional future facilities. The report was made by E. A. Barton and Associates, traffic, parking and planning consultants of Cleveland, Ohio. The report envisions parking facilities at the edges of the campus, with much of the interior of the campus closed to ordinary vehicular traffic. Three parking garages and several surface lots are included in the recommendations.

Witness Tells of Seeing Shooting of Beatty Woman

KLAMATH FALLS (UPI)—A witness testified Wednesday that he saw Archie Foster, 26, of Salem pick up a rifle and shoot into a car containing Mrs. Richard Biss April 22 at Beatty. Marvin Thompson said the incident occurred in mid-afternoon in front of his home. He testified at the first degree murder trial of Foster. Mrs. Biss, 37, was found dead in her car parked beside her home later that night. She had been shot through the head. Thompson said the car also contained Wilma Williams, with whom Foster had been having a scuffle. The Williams woman invoked the Fifth Amendment six times before being excused from the witness stand Tuesday. "I could see she was hit because her head dropped to the side," Thompson said of Mrs. Biss. He said her car and another containing Foster and another man then drove off. Coleen Chavez, 12, of Beatty told of finding Mrs. Biss' body in her car after she and her mother went to the Biss home later that evening. Mr. and Mrs. Tony Shoulderblade, who live across a driveway from the Biss home, testified that they noticed the car several times during the afternoon. They said they thought someone was sleeping in the vehicle. Mrs. Shirley Foster, the estranged wife of the defendant's elder brother, Danny, testified she had been to the Biss home about 4 p.m. and had not seen the vehicle. The defense has indicated it will attempt to show the slaying did not occur until about 10 p.m.

In the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS

In East Chicago, a barge loaded with 12,000 barrels of toluene sinks in the ship canal that leads in from Lake Michigan. The barge went down by the stern, with the bow sticking up. The toluene began to pour out and spread over the water. What's toluene? It's a blend of gasoline that is used to increase the quality of ordinary motor fuels. It is also a component of TNT. As the stuff spread over the water, the whole canal became "like dynamite," as one fireman put it. The explosive condition spread for three-quarters of a mile. For 14 hours, the people of East Chicago lived in fear of a holocaust that might have dwarfed the big Chicago fire that started when Mrs. Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over the lamp back in 1871, 82 years ago. One match could have done it.

HOW was it prevented? Firemen poured 75,000 M on the canal. Smoking was rigidly banned. They finally got a hose into the hold of the barge and pumped the toluene out into waiting tank cars. Fourteen hours after the fire started, the city's fire chief gave the ALL CLEAR signal. What a sigh of relief must have gone up!

D'OWNS in Atlanta, they're having trouble with starlings. What's a starling? It's a black songbird with a long sharp bill. It multiplies very rapidly. It also has unsavory personal habits. It has a reprehensible habit of roosting on handsome public buildings—especially white ones. It is quarrelsome and will use its long sharp bill to drive other birds away. The starlings have been messing up the handsome Georgia state capital building. So the secretary of state, Ben Fortson, decided that something had to be done about it. This was his scheme: Every few minutes, eight selected marksmen fired shotgun into the swarming birds, killing thousands of them. The idea, the secretary of state explains, was to SCARE the birds—not to kill them off.

HOW did it work? Mr. Fortson says this morning: "We might just as well have put out a sign reading NO STARLINGS ALLOWED. Every time we'd shoot one starling, ten more would come in from somewhere."

HOW did the starlings get in the U.S.A.? Well, back in 1890, some people who thought that New York ought to look like London imported 60 of the birds from England and turned them loose in Central Park. They've since spread all over the country—finally showing up here in Oregon. In Portland, they've souled some handsome buildings. Worse still, they have a bad habit of roosting in commercial holly groves, where they mess up both the herry clusters and the bright green leaves. In Eastern Oregon and Idaho, there are complaints that they appear in huge flocks in the feeding lots and consume a lot of feed designed for the cattle. So far, no bitter complaints about the starlings have come from our own Southern Oregon.
