Threat to Children Brings Confinement

ERIE, Pa. (UPI) — A man who allegedly threatened to kill the children of the late President Kennedy was committed to a mental institution for examination by court order Monday.

James R. Johnson, 45, of Erie, originally from Malden, Mass., was arrested Dec. 12 on charges filed by his father following a domestic row.

Erie County Dist. Atty. Richard Scarpetti, who petitioned the court for commitment, said the elder Johnson quoted his son as making the threat during the quarrel.

Scarpetti said his information was obtained from Paul Usher, agent in charge of the Secret Service in Pittsburgh.

Two doctors who took preliminary tests on Johnson told the court they felt commitment would be in order.

Evaluation Asked Of Press Relations

SALEM (UPI) — The governor's office has asked the capitol press corps—the handful of reporters who cover the capitol full time—to evaluate the work being done by state agency information officers.

Announced purpose of the evaluations "is to make certain we are doing that which is important and doing it in such a way that it effectively meets your needs."

In a memo distributed to the press corps Monday, it was announced Gov. Mark Hatfield had scheduled meetings with state department heads for Jan. 7, 14, and 21, and that information officers would attend.

The memo advised the press corps "we would appreciate the benefit of your thinking on the functions of these information officers. We will particularly be grateful for constructive criticism, with examples where possible."

Problem of Alcoholism in Area Discussed at Chamber Lunch

"The hardest thing for a man to say is, 'I am a drunk,'" Jackson County District Judge Loren L. Sawyer told the Medford Chamber of Commerce Roundtable Monday.

Judge Sawyer discussed the problem of alcoholism in Medford and Jackson County in a talk he titled, "Revolving Door Drunks." Those he referred to were the individuals he encountered in his court repeatedly. Some of them, he said, knew him well enough to call him by his first name.

Medford has an alcoholic problem, the Judge continued. There are approximately 800 problem drinkers in the city. Of these, 10 per cent are "revolving door drunks," he said.

Financial Problem The financial burden these people place on the community each year is estimated in excess of $100,000. Daily lodging costs and welfare payments to dependents are included in the estimate, he said.

Many area citizens thought that by eliminating many of the taverns, the problem itself would vanish. "It is like hiding one's head in the sand to think this way," the Judge said.

Alcoholics Anonymous, which he continued, has done a great deal to help solve the problem. Also helping are the Jackson County work projects, and a limited program conducted by the county mental health department, but they are not sufficient, he said.

Attends Conferences

Judge Sawyer has attended conferences, studied, and has instigated some rehabilitation in a program conducted each Wednesday evening.

Each week those lodged in the county jail are invited to a group therapy session. Attending the sessions are representatives of Alcoholics Anonymous and other qualified personnel to counsel and advise.

Free literature is distributed, and each week more literature is being read and taken back to the cells by inmates, Judge Sawyer said. Some literature is even smuggled into the cells where felons are lodged, he said, which is the best way to get them to read it.

Mandatory Treatment

—Mandatory treatment for habitual offenders. If forced to remain sober for a given length of time, he said, he feels the deep-seated difficulties that apparently make them alcoholics can be found more easily.

—Establishing half-way houses. Such facilities can be an important step toward total rehabilitation, he said. When initial therapy has been done the half-way house can provide continuing therapy, work projects, and an acceptable community for them, Sawyer continued.

Public's Attitude

The public's attitude toward problem drinkers has to change before much can be done through legislation as well as through rehabilitation within the community, he added.

Three Accidents Checked by Police

Three vehicle accidents were investigated Monday by Medford police.

A vehicle driven by Carl Jackson Whitmore, 53, of 3250 N. Pacific Highway, and a car operated by Dennis Michael O'Keefe, 20, of Route 1, Box 609A Klamath Falls, were involved in an accident between Fourth and Fifth Streets about 5:35 p.m. Monday, police reported.

The Whitmore car was pushed into a parked car registered to Annabelle Avila Leiby, Route 2, Box 694C, Central Point, police said. Police cited Whitmore for failure to yield right of way to vehicle on a through street.

A car registered to Verna Barbara Cunningham, 504 Edwards st., skidded 300 feet, struck a parked auto, and a power pole, about 10:25 p.m. Monday on Crater Lake Ave. near McAndrews Road, police said.

The parked car was registered to Jack Wesley Little, 805 W. Second St. The driver of the Cunningham vehicle left the scene of the accident before police could question him, according to police.

Vehicles driven by Marvin Graham Albert, 304 S. Peach St., and Harley Henry Tosh, 456 Villas Road, Central Point, collided at the intersection of Third and Bartlett Streets at 3:25 p.m. Monday, according to police. No citations were issued.

Experts recognize that alcoholism is a disease, and that will power is not the primary problem, he stated.

Rehabilitation, though initially expensive, can benefit the entire community by lessening tax burden, and by making useful citizens he said.

Safety Award Won By Medford Schools

The Medford School system has received the National Safety Council's annual School System Safety Award for the sixth year, the Safety Council has announced.

The award indicates that 90 per cent or more of the schools in the system are participating in the Council's National School Safety Honor Roll.

The honor roll system was initiated in 1944. To qualify, a school must present a detailed report of its safety program to a committee composed of the school principal, the president of the local Parent Teacher Association, a student, a local city leader, and the school system's safety education supervisor. The director of safety education in the Medford School District is Lee Ragsdale.

If the committee reports favorably, the NSC lists the school on the honor roll, and sends the school a Certificate of Exceptional Merit. The quality and extent of the school district's student safety program have received several prior national citations in conjunction with reports on safety practices from the City of Medford.
