Seaport, Border Courtesy Said To Result in Dividends

NEW YORK (UPI)—Seaport and border cities usually are hospitable to visitors in times of peace, not only during holiday seasons such as the present but in less festive periods. They know it is good business.

A good indication of the value of encouraging visitors, even reaching out to get them, was given last week in the semi-annual report on the United States Travel Service, given to the President and Congress by Secretary of Commerce Luther H. Hodges.

Part of his report dealt with the amount of money spent in this country by overseas visitors, and with the amount spent abroad by U.S. citizens.

Go West
Needless to say, it was not merely the seaports, or even the major airport and border cities which got all the benefits from foreign visitors to the United States. Many of those who come here want to get into the interior, to visit the American West, to go beyond the seaboard states if their time permits.

Basing its total on what it said was an average expenditure of $375 per visitor, the report said that between June, 1961, and June, 1963, the 1,229,102 tourists and businessmen who visited from overseas had put $460,913,000 into the domestic economy.

Big Increase
The report mentioned this as a measure of the success of the USTS; it said the number of visitors was 274,993 more, and the number of dollars $103,122,000 more than received during the previous two years. A good part of the increases could be attributed to continued prosperity abroad, along with normal market growth, the report said, although it found that the United States' share of the world travel market was increasing.

There was another and less favorable side to the travel picture. Increasing prosperity also encouraged U.S. citizens to go sailing or flying out of the country on vacation and business trips.

On the basis of preliminary figures for the first six months, the 1963 travel deficit probably will be more than $1.5 billion, the report noted, and said that an energetic "Visit USA" campaign could keep this part of the dollar gap from getting bigger.

Yanks Leave Home
Revised estimates showed that in the calendar year 1962, the travel deficit was $1.43 billion. Americans paid $446 million more in fares than did the visitors coming to the United States; and spent $984 million more abroad than did all of those who visited the states from beyond the nation's borders.

In the first six months of 1963, there was a less than average increase in transatlantic traffic, particularly from Great Britain and France, the report noted; and while the typical traveler from Latin America or from the Pacific nations tends to be in the higher economic brackets, large part of the visitors from Europe are in middle or upper-income groups. These, the report noted, cannot afford more than an occasional visit to this country. Some of those who stayed home, however, are saving up for a 1964 or 1965 visit to the New York World's Fair, the report said.

Grange Notes

BELLEVUE GRANGE
ASHLAND — Christmas was celebrated last week by the Bellevue Grange members and their families. Included in the festivities were a dinner, entertainment and a tree with treats for everyone.

Frank Malin led in community singing of carols and William Turner narrated the Bible story of the first Christmas. Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Baughman gave readings on the true meaning of Christmas, and songs and recitations were presented by Dave and Gary Rickenbach, Bobby Lindsay and Alan Hoadley.

In tune with the festive spirit of the festive season, we send glad greetings to you and yours. Have a very merry Christmas!
