Barren New Mexico Hills Are Turned Into Palestine View

By ROBERT E. HUBER
United Press International

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI)—Ebenezer Scrooge would have found life even more unbearable in New Mexico at Christmas than in Dickens' London.

That's because Christmas here is a mixture of Indian drums and dancing feet, luminarias and pinatas, streets filled with singing processions and holiday fun.

The atomic-age visitor who isn't on guard sees the barren New Mexico hills turn into a view of ancient Palestine. Lonely shepherds tend their flocks as they did 2,000 years ago in the Holy Land. Narrow dirt roads wind up hillsides to adobe villages that could be Bethlehem.

A 'bah humbug' attitude is hard to find.

In the pueblos and villages around Santa Fe during the festive season, natives enact Los Posados—the Processions. In one of the oldest Spanish traditions, groups of children go from door to door carrying torches and seeking shelter for nine days. The answer for them is the same as it was for another procession long ago: "There is no room here."

In the Indian pueblos on Christmas Eve natives recite the prayers taught them 300 years ago by the Spanish priests who came with the conquistadors. After the midnight Masses in the dirt-floor churches, the Indians begin their day-long dances that tell of the coming of Christ. Others light the pinon-wood bonfires to guide the lost Christ child to the village.

In Santa Fe, Christmas is not a one-day, trim-the-tree event. Homes gleam with hundreds of luminarias — sand-filled paper bags with a candle inside. Roaring bonfires light the annual miracle plays. Families gather to break pinatas—colorful clay figures filled with candy, hung from the ceiling and broken by blindfolded children.

Early in December the luminarias go up to the flat roofs and walls of homes. These traditiona lights lead the way for the lost Christ Child, El Nido Perdido, who walks among the faithful at Christmas.

The age-old fiesta of the Virgin of Guadalupe begins Dec. 11 to honor the Catholic patroness of the Americas. The nine-day re-enactment of the Holy Family's search for the inn at Bethlehem follows.

In the tiny Rio Grande villages, folk plays with local casts are performed. Stories of the ancient shepherds—Los Pastores—will be retold for the thousandth time; while the churches, centers of village life, will be illuminated with incense candles made by the villagers.

And on Christmas Day Santa Fe bursts with fiesta gaiety. In homes the roast turkey is stuffed with pinon nut dressing. In some homes there will be the traditional marranito, roast suckling pig. The traditional 'fixings' are corn, rice, squash, tortillas and a bottle of sugary chokecherry wine.

In Scrooge's London, he was forced finally to say, "Merry Christmas." In Santa Fe he would say it much earlier, a Feliz Navidad."

Section 4 provides generally, that unpatented mining claims located after July 23, 1955 shall not be used for purposes other than prospecting, mining or processing operations or uses reasonably incident thereto; that such claims will be subject to the right of the United States to manage and dispose of the vegetative surface resources thereof, and to manage other surface resources thereon; and that, except to the extent required for mining operations and uses reasonably incident thereto or to provide clearance for such operations or uses, claimants of such claims shall not use or dispose of vegetative or other surface resources thereof, and that, except for clearance for such purposes, any permitted severance or removal of timber must be in accordance with sound principles of forest management. Said section 4 also provides that any use of the surface of any such mining claim by the United States, its permittees or licensees shall be such as not to endanger or materially interfere with the prospecting, mining, processing or reasonably incident uses by the mining claimant.

Harvey Allowed Year To Control Fluorides in Air

PORTLAND (UPI)— Harvey Aluminum's reduction plant at The Dalles has been given one year to come up with a control system 100 per cent effective in taking fluorides out of the air, a federal judge here ruled Tuesday.

U.S. Dist Judge John F. Kilkenny, in a 14-page opinion filed Tuesday, ruled on a suit brought by 20 growers in The Dalles who claimed fluorides were hurting their crops.

Judge Kilkenny said the present control system is only 90 per cent effective and that if it is not improved he will issue an injunction.

He called for the installation of proper hoods around the company's vertical stud soderberg cells and electrostatic precipitators "in usual, advantageous and proper places in the plant."

The control system could cost up to $2 million, according to the brief. Kilkenny noted that the record shows approximately 1,300 pounds of fluorides enter the atmosphere each day from the reduction plant.

He did not attempt to assess monetary damages to growers in his opinion, but said the required improvements should entirely eliminate the problem.

Crown Zellerbach Plans Pilot Plant

CAMAS, Wash. (UPI) — A pilot plant to produce dimethyl sulfoxide (DMSO) for use in medical research is being constructed by Crown Zellerbach Corp. here.

The building, only 24 feet square, will house distillation and other special purification equipment to prepare the chemical produced by the CZ plant at Bogalusa, La., for research.

Recently the State Board of Higher Education and Crown Zellerbach signed a contract to test the medical potential of DMSO. The research is being done at the University of Oregon Medical School.

In addition agricultural experts at Oregon State University are testing the product for use in controlling plant diseases such as potato blight.
