Adventist Ceremony Weds Pair

ASHLAND — Wedding vows were exchanged by Barbara June Newman and George Russell Maderash in an evening ceremony December 22 at the Seventh Day Adventist Church.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Loren Newman, 2710 Highway 99 South, Mr. Maderash is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Maderash, Kelowna, British Columbia.

For her wedding the bride chose a floor length gown with train and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums.

Baskets of white chrysanthemums and roses decorated the church and the Bellview Grange hall where the reception was held.

After a honeymoon in Southern California Mr. and Mrs. Maderash will make their home in Ashland where both are students at Southern Oregon College.

The bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Maderash, Kelowna, and Albert Manguz of Alberta were among guests from a distance.

The couple made their wedding trip to the coast. The bride wore a white knit suit with cranberry red accessories.

The bride attended Medford High School and both attended Southern Oregon College. The bridegroom attended Cottage Grove High School.

The rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents at the Medford Hotel.

Attending from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Strom, Vancouver, B. C., Canada; Mr. and Mrs. Teasley, Eureka, Calif.; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Bell, Vancouver, Wash.; Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Roberson, Deborah and Wendy, San Jose, Calif.; Mr. and Mrs. John Reed and Aaron, Eugene; Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Kopperman, Springfield; and Mr. and Mrs. William Brahs, Yreka, Calif.

Grants To Aid in Study Of Child Welfare Work

WASHINGTON — How does the fact of adoption affect a child's personality as he approaches adolescence? How can foster care help a mentally retarded child?

Answers to these questions, among others, are anticipated in the award of 14 federal grants totaling $485,663 announced today by Mrs. Katherine B. Oettinger, chief of the Children's Bureau of the Welfare Administration.

Under the Child Welfare Research and Demonstration Grants program administered by the bureau, these are the fourth series of grants going to nonprofit organizations for projects showing promise of substantive contributions to child welfare work.

Nine of the grantees will use the money for new projects: The Friendly House, Inc., in Portland, Ore., $14,665 to show how professional social work guidance can be used to get suitable family day care for children whose parents have to work.

The Florence Crittenton Association in Chicago, Ill., $29,527 to develop a system of reporting characteristics of unmarried mothers.

Fisk University in Nashville, Tenn., $45,644 to study the development and adjustment of Negro children.

The University of Chicago, $24,526 to investigate legal and social work practice in the termination of parental rights for adoption.

The Child Welfare League of America in New York City, $16,620 to evaluate the adoption of American Indian children by Caucasian families.

The Family and Child Services of Washington, D. C., $52,198 to study the personality development of adopted children during their middle childhood and early adolescence.

The National Association of Social Workers in New York City, $11,733 to study research approaches to the manpower in-

Medford Mason To Participate In Ceremony

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Lue left Friday morning for Portland where Mr. Lue has been invited to take part in the conferral of the thirty-third degree of Scottish Rite Masons.

Six Oregon Masons have been elected to receive this honorary degree. They are Judge William Dickson, Walter Richardson and Lewis Starr, all Portland; Raynor Eller and Judge Will Nordeau, Baker and Harold Lounsbury, Eugene.

Medford has two thirty-third degree Masons, Fred Purdin and Mr. Lue.

Before returning to Medford the Lues will visit relatives and friends in Vancouver and Longview, Wash.

Visitors

ASHLAND — Mr. and Mrs. Martin Tucker and three sons, Auburn, Wash., have been holiday visitors at the home of Mrs. Tucker's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Miller, 1059 Park Street.

Mental Illness Discussed

By Gay Pauley

NEW YORK UPI—They are a group of children apart from the rest of the world.

They are the ones who are described, by the director of one school caring for them, as "the silent ones who stare into space; the gentle ones who hide their faces and turn from all human contact; the restless ones who wander, whirl or rock aimlessly, the agitated ones who scream out in savage fury; the explosive ones whose wild tantrums and panic are just a step away from chaos."

They are the children who suffer from schizophrenia, unable to distinguish between reality and imagination.

What causes their illnesses and can they be cured? A publication out from the Public Affairs Committee, a non-profit educational organization, discusses these matters. The publication, "Serious Mental Illness in Children," is the work of Harry Milt of the National Association for Mental Health N.A.M.H.

It was reviewed before publication by psychiatrists, psychologists, pediatricians, physicians, and by health and family advisory divisions of the Public Affairs Committee.

Baffling illness The committee stressed that publication was with a warning to parents against assuming that all irrational or inexplicable behavior of children indicated mental illness. Fortunately, it said, the number with schizophrenia is small but the need for better psychiatric and educational facilities is "very great."

Milt wrote that, "it is known there are tens of thousands of children suffering from the schizophrenias. Some estimates reach as high as half a million. It must be considered as one of the grave diseases of childhood."

The symptoms of childhood schizophrenia are hard to list, said Milt. It was Carl Fenichel, director of a school for mentally ill children, who spoke of "the silent ones who stare into space; the gentle ones . . ."

Fenichel spoke also of "those who speak endlessly but never communicate to anyone but themselves, and others who talk to anyone and everyone in a desperate and futile attempt to find their own identity in time and space."

Theories on Cause Milt said psychiatrists offered several theories on cause of this disease among children. Some believe it is a "disorder which results from detrimental emotional experiences in childhood."

Others say the causes are "primarily biological and organic . . . a fundamental defect in the neurological and glandular mechanism." A third approach combines these two theories, but places greater stress on the biological. "The author suggested that perhaps each of these theories is correct "for a particular type of childhood schizophrenia, not for others."

But on cure, he said authorities are pretty much agreed that "only the victims . . . can be helped to achieve any substantial degree of normal functioning. Another third can be relieved of the most severe and disturbing symptoms but must remain in a protected environment. The rest cannot be helped at all, except to subdue the most disturbing symptoms such as agitation, hallucinations and delusions.

Treatment is of two kinds—the psychological in which the therapist works with the child, sometimes with the parents, sometimes with both, and the physical, using tranquilizers and anti-depressants.

Milt said present facilities for caring for these children were entirely inadequate.

Antique Bracelet Is Worn By Bride

When Miss Judith Ann Bell became the bride of Herbert Lee Kopperman December 22 she wore an heirloom gold bracelet set with rubies which had been worn by her paternal great grandmother, Mrs. Samuel Mitchell at her wedding in Illinois, September 2, 1880.

The bride, a teacher of the second grade in the Eugene Public School System, is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Bell, 1119 Queen Anne Avenue, Medford. The bridegroom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Kopperman, 1305 Girard Avenue, Cottage Grove, who were here for the ceremony. He is studying chemistry at the University of Oregon, Eugene.

Dr. D. Kirkland West officiated for the double ring rites performed at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon in Medford First Presbyterian Church.

Bride Wears Satin The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length sheath gown of satin with elbow-length sleeves and scoop neckline. A bow accented the waistline and a back panel was of matching satin. Her elbow-length imported English illusion veil was held by a crown of seed pearls, and her long white gloves also were of satin. The bridal bouquet was of white roses and stephanotis centered with a white orchid. She wore pearl earrings which were a gift from the bridegroom.

Miss Bonnie Van Dyke was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Mrs. Douglas Collier, Klamath Falls and Mrs. Larry Derry, Grants Pass.

Their matching satin dresses were in emerald green made with bell skirts and the V-shaped necklines at the back were trimmed with bows and long streamers. Their headpieces were circles of matching green satin which held short veils and their slippers were also of the green satin. They carried white fur muffs to which were attached sprigs of holly and green velvet streamers.

Miss Cynda Kesler, Phoenix; Miss JoAnne Bell, Vancouver, Wash., and Miss Deborah Roberson, San Jose, all cousins of the bride, lighted the candles.

Their matching frocks were of cranberry red satin trimmed at the waistlines with bows. Their satin headpieces and shoes matched their gowns and they carried white candles decorated with red poinsettias and velvet streamers.

Denton Weaver, Ashland, served as best man and ushers were Gary Schmitt, James Bell, a brother of the bride, and Mr. Derry.

Baskets of white chrysanthemums combined with red poinsettias and pine boughs decorated the altar. White bows with holly sprigs were used to mark the pews.

Mrs. Norman Thames was organist and Mrs. John Kesler, aunt of the bride, was soloist.

Reception Follows Rites Some 175 guests attended the ceremony and reception was given by the bride's parents in Girls Community Club.

Presiding at the guest book was Mrs. Schmitt, and at the gift table were Miss Gwen LaHaie and Miss Lou Elsa Voegtly.

The bride's mother was dressed in a gold brocade suit with gold accessories and the bridegroom's mother wore a silk print frock in beige, aqua blue and green shades. Her accessories were beige. Both had white orchid corsages.

Silver candelabra with spirals of stock decorated the bride's
