

PRODUCT OF THE POPPY.

Nearly $500,000 Spent Yearly for Opium in New York.

It was for the purpose of giving an accurate and interesting account of how 9,000 Chinamen spend $488,379.75 annually just for the pleasure of "hitting the pipe," that the Chinese reporter made a thorough canvass of the various haunts of Chinatown.

There are at present about twenty-five Chinese firms that deal in refined opium, both wholesale and retail. There are eleven private Chinese joints, where opium is sold at $2.25 per ounce. These joints do not now admit white smokers, on account of the frequent raids made upon them by the police, but the stores sell to both Chinese and whites, although the latter must be well known smokers.

Otherwise he has to suffer for the want of opium—which, according to all accounts, is even worse than to see "snakes." Great tears would gush out of his eyes, big drops of perspiration constantly moisten his brow, while his nostrils would act as if he owned a small sized fountain somewhere in his head.

Six pills or pipes, about the size of a green pea, would restore him to his normal condition of life, which would last him for about as many hours. A regular "feed" will consume about an ounce per day, which is $2.25.

The sensation while smoking is indeed soothing. No matter how fatigued or oppressed in mind, a few whiffs of the pipe would put a man in the best of social spirits. It has strange medicinal properties, and is said to cure all kinds of fevers and ague, consumption and palpitation of the heart. Most Chinamen are driven to it through business reverses and other troubles, while not a few contracted the habit through sociality, just as an American would do on their "take a drink" with a friend.

It takes just about the same length of time to get the opium habit as to get the drinking habit. The latter destroys the mind, and makes a man irresponsible for his actions, while the former destroys the body but makes a keen thinker of the victim. It is estimated that there are something over 1,000 Americans in the city of New York who are now using opium in the same manner and form as the Chinese. Most of these are said to be well known and fashionable people, and indeed no other but people of means and of leisure could ever be able to contract such a habit.

The opium dealing firms sell from two to five cans per day, each can weighing about four ounces. Most of the wholesale orders come from towns and cities in and around New York state, and only now and then the native American customers from up town come in to buy their supply. Say they only sell an average of three cans per day. At wholesale rates, which is $8.35 per can for China imported goods, but when retailed out by the fifty cents' worth at $10 to $11 per can. At $10, which is the lowest possible price per can, sixty-six cans amount to $660 per day, or $240,000 per year.

There are eleven joints. The majority of these import their own opium, said to be direct from China, but the greater part of which comes from Victoria, B. C. One of these places, which is the best Chinese joint in town, sells at retail on Sundays alone from ten to twelve cans, while the second best place sells from eight to ten cans on Sundays. On an average these joints dispose of five cans a day. These prices calculate to make from $2 to $8 on each can of Chinese imported opium, but they are able to make more when they mix the Victoria in with the pure. Thus it can easily be seen how nearly $1,000,000 changes hands for opium each year.

According to Chinese San Francisco papers they paid over $500,000 for custom house duties for the Chinese year just ended on opium alone.—Wong Chin Foo in New York World.

Talking of patent medicines—you know the old prejudice. And the doctors—some of them are between you and us. They would like you to think that what's cured thousands won't cure you. You'd believe in patent medicines if they didn't profess to cure everything—and so, between the experiments of doctors, and the experiments of patent medicines that are sold only because there's money in the "stuff," you lose faith in everything.

And, you can't always tell the prescription that cures by what you read in the papers. So, perhaps, there's no better way to sell a remedy, than to tell the truth about it, and take the risk of its doing just what it professes to do.

That's what the World's Dispensary Medical Association, of Buffalo, N. Y., does with Laziness of the Cuban Monsters.

The Cuban monsters' indolence grows rather out of overproduction than inherent laziness. He does not require and grab and wear his life to shreds to get great store by. No condition be ever known required that. He has no love for luxury. Hence he is in no wise distressed or distracted. He has no envious longing for broad acres, for one acre will suffice. If he owns half a dozen, his unnecessary wealth rests heavily upon him. He needs no fuel to warm him, for a loving sun all ways does that. He needs but little clothing to protect him, for he lives in an endless summer. He requires no barns and great storehouses, for all the world he knows is his very door. He needs no grand house, for the whole flower blossom island is an odorous bed chamber eternally. He may herd cattle, or work on the sugar plantations for a few months of the year; but, if he does, a negro or guajiro is his slave for the rest.

The whole active, prompting element of need is eliminated from the monster's life. You must know this before you can know him. Getting a little closer to his home life and thought, he may be said to exist in perennial serenity. He marries because his father did. He rears children because they come. They are welcome to come, to stay, to go. The wife attends to her few duties happily; she has no "mission" to become frenzied over; and the yams come on the table at the right time. So in the monster's, there is a better light than in some of our pretentious American homes.—Edward L. Wakeman.

A Biologist in China.

As we pressed down the street my appearance seems to stir the population up to a pitch of wild excitement. Merchants dart in and out of their shops, people in tees, people in caps and people in gorgeous apparel, buzz all about me and hit blither and blither like a nest of stirred up wasps. If curiosity has seemed to be rampant in other cities it passes all the limits of Occidental imagination in Kiangsu-foo. Upon seeing me, everybody gives utterance to a peculiar spontaneous exclamation of surprise, reminding me very much of the monkey's notes of alarm in the tree tops along the Grand Trunk road, India.

By the time we are half way along the street the whole city seems in wild tumult. Men rush ahead, peer into my face, deliver themselves of the above mentioned peculiar squeak and run hastily down some convenient alley way. Stall keepers hastily gather up their wares and shopkeepers frantically snatch their goods inside as they near the tumult and see the mob coming down the street. The excitement grows apace, and the same wanton cries of "Fankwae! Fankwae!" that followed me through Kan-tchou-foo are here repeated with wild whoops and exultant cries. One would sometimes think that all the devils of Dante's inferno had gotten into the crowd and set them wild with the spirit of mischief.—Thomas Stevens in Outlook.

A New Standard of Length.

Scientists have long sought for a fixed and invariable standard of length. The measures in common use are mere arbitrary lengths, and, if the original standards should be destroyed, could not be accurately replaced. The French meter is supposed to be a ten-millionth part of the quadrant of the earth; but the accuracy of the original measurements has been seriously called in question. The so-called wave lengths of light have been suggested as furnishing an invariable numerical magnitude, but their excessive minuteness and the difficulty of accurately measuring them have heretofore been an insuperable objection to their use.

Messrs. Michelson and Morley have now devised a method of measuring these wave lengths, which they claim is probably accurate to one ten-millionth part. When it is considered that a wave length of sodium (yellow) light is only about one forty-thousandth of an inch, the delicacy of this method becomes apparent. Whatever theory may be held as to the nature of light, the numerical values called for convenience "wave lengths" are actual and invariable magnitudes of something, and, if the new method of measurement proves reliable, there will be no difficulty in obtaining a fixed standard of length which can be reproduced at any time or place.—Popular Science News.

The Club as a Weapon.

From the earliest times, the club was a favorite military weapon, its primitive form being simply of a straight stick, much heavier at one end than at the other, and adapted for use either by one or both hands. With improvements in other styles or weapons, however, came the mace. The mace is a shafted weapon, consisting of a wooden handle fitted into an iron head, the latter being of many different styles. Some maces have phalanges on the sides; others are round like an orange, and furnished with sharp projecting points; while others again are in the shape of two imperial crowns joined base to base.

The mace was a horseman's weapon, usually fastened to his saddle during the march, and, in an action, suspended by a cord round his wrist. It was a favorite weapon for fighting ecclesiastics, of whom there were many during the middle ages. Priests, by a canon of the church, being forbidden to use the sword, the mace, the lance, the halberd and several other weapons of this description, were allowed to take the place of that weapon, which, in all ages, has been typical of war. A modification of the mace was a plain hammer or maul, frequently carried by long bowmen. It was a simple mallet of wood or iron, with a handle 4 or 5 feet long, used as an offensive weapon at close quarters.—Globe Democrat.

The Work of a Ranchman.

A ranchman's work is, of course, free from much of the sameness attendant upon that of a mere cowboy. One day he will ride out with his men among the cattle, or after strayed horses; the next he may hunt, so as to keep the ranch in meat; then he can make the tour of his outlying camps; or, again, may join one of the round ups for a week or two, perhaps keeping with it the entire time if he is working. On occasions he will have a good deal of spare time on his hands, which, if he chooses, he can spend in reading or writing. If he cares for books, there will be many a worn volume in the primitive little sitting room, with its log walls and huge fire place; but, after a hard day's work, a man will not read much, but will seek to and fro in the flickering firelight, talking sleepily over his success in the day's chase and the difficulty he has had with the cattle; or else may simply lie stretched at full length on the elk hides and wolf skins in front of the hearthstone, listening in drowsy silence to the roar and crackle of the blazing logs, and to the moaning of the wind outside.—Theodore Roosevelt in The Century.

A THRILLING EXPERIENCE.

Remarkable Statement of Personal Danger and Presidential Escape.

The following story—which is attracting wide attention from the press—is so remarkable that we cannot excuse ourselves if we do not lay it before our readers, entire.

To the Editor Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat:

Sir, On the first day of June, 1881, I lay at my residence in this city surrounded by my friends and waiting for death. Heaven only knows the agony I then endured, for words can never describe it. And yet, if a few years previous any one had told me that I was to be brought so low, and by so terrible a disease, I should have scoffed at the idea. I had always been uncommonly strong and healthy, and weighed over 200 pounds and hardly knew, in my experience, what pain or sickness were. Very many people who read this statement realize at times that they are unusually tired and cannot account for it. They feel dull pains in various parts of the body and do not understand why. Or they are exceedingly hungry one day and entirely without appetite the next. This was just the way I felt when the relentless malady which had fastened itself upon me first began. Still I thought nothing of it; that probably I had taken a cold which would soon pass away. Shortly after this I noticed a heavy, and at times neuralgic, pain in one side of my head, but as it would come one day and be gone the next, I paid little attention to it. Then my stomach would get out of order and my food often failed to digest, causing at times great inconvenience. Yet, even as a physician, I did not think that these things meant anything serious. I fancied I was suffering from malaria and doctored myself accordingly. But I got no better. I next noticed a peculiar color and odor about the fluids I was passing—also that there were large quantities one day and very little the next and that a persistent froth and scum appeared on the surface, and a sediment settled. And yet I did not realize my danger, for, indeed, seeing these symptoms continually, I finally became accustomed to them, and my suspicion was wholly disarmed by the fact that I had no pain in the affected organs or in their vicinity. Why I should have been so blind I cannot understand.

I consulted the best medical skill in the land. I visited all the famed mineral springs in America and traveled from Maine to California. Still I grew worse. No two physicians agreed as to my malady. One said I was troubled with spinal irritation; another, dyspepsia; another, heart disease; another, general debility; another, congestion of the base of the brain; and so on through a long list of common diseases, the symptoms of many of which I really had. In this way several years passed, during which time I was steadily growing worse. My condition had really become pitiable. The slight symptoms I had at first experienced were developed into terrible and constant disorders. My weight had been reduced from 207 to 130 pounds. My life was a burden to myself and friends. I could retain no food on my stomach, and lived wholly by injections. I was a living mass of pain. My pulse was uncontrollable. In my agony I frequently fell to the floor and clutched the carpet, and prayed for death. Morphine had little or no effect in deadening the pain. For six days and nights I had the death-premonitory hiccoughs constantly. My water was filled with tube-casts and albumen. I was struggling with Bright's Disease of the kidneys in its last stages!

While suffering thus I received a call from my pastor, the Rev. Dr. Foote, at that time rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, of this city. I felt that it was our last interview, but in the course of conversation Dr. Foote detailed to me the many remarkable cures of cases like my own which had come under his observation. As a practicing physician and a graduate of the schools, I derived the idea of any medicine outside the regular channels being in the least beneficial. So, solicitous, however, was Dr. Foote, that I finally promised I would waive my prejudices. I began its use on the first day of June, 1881, and took it according to directions. At first it sickened me; but this I thought was a good sign for one in my debilitated condition. I continued to take it; the sickening sensation departed and I was finally able to retain food on my stomach. In a few days I noticed a decided change for the better, as also did my wife and friends. My hiccoughs ceased and I experienced less pain than formerly. I was so rejoiced at this improved condition that, upon what I had believed but a few days before was my dying bed, I vowed, in the presence of my family and friends, should I recover, I would both publicly and privately make known this remedy for the good of humanity, wherever and whenever I had an opportunity, and this letter is in fulfillment of that vow. My improvement was constant from that time, and in less than three months I had gained 26 pounds in flesh, became entirely free from pain and I believe I owe my life and present condition wholly to Warner's Safe Cure, the remedy which I used.

Since my recovery I have thoroughly re-investigated the subject of kidney difficulties and Bright's disease, and the truths developed are astounding. I therefore state, deliberately, and as a physician, that I believe more than one-half the deaths which occur in America are caused by Bright's disease of the kidneys. This may sound like a rash statement, but I am prepared to fully verify Bright's disease has no distinctive features of its own, (indeed, it often develops without any pain whatever in the kidneys or their vicinity) but has the symptoms of nearly every other common complaint. Hundreds of people die daily, whose burials are authorized by a physician's certificate as occurring from "Heart Disease," "Apoplexy," "Paralysis," "Spinal Complaint," "Rheumatism," "Pneumonia," and other common complaints, when in reality it is from Bright's disease of the kidneys. Few physicians, and fewer people realize the extent of this disease or its dangerous and insidious nature. It steals into the system like a thief, manifests its presence if at all by the commonest symptoms and fastens itself in the constitution before the victim is aware of it. It is nearly as hereditary as consumption, quite as common and fully as fatal. Entire families, inheriting it from their ancestors, have died, and yet none knew or realized the mysterious power which was removing them. Instead of common symptoms it often shows none whatever, but brings death suddenly from convulsions, apoplexy, or heart disease. As one who has suffered, and knows by bitter experience what he says, I implore everyone who reads these words not to neglect the slightest symptoms of kidney difficulty. No one can afford to hazard such chances.

I make the foregoing statements based upon facts which I can substantiate to the letter. The welfare of those who may possibly be sufferers such as I was, is an ample inducement for me to take the step I have, and if I can successfully warn others from the dangerous path in which I once walked, I am willing to endure all professional and personal consequences.

DR. DARRIN'S SUCCESS.

Three More Prominent People of This City and State Testify to the Efficacy of the Electric Cure—Deafness Cured in Ten Minutes.

The same marked success that has followed Dr. Darrin for the past four years suffers no diminution. His rooms at No. 704 Washington St., Portland, are crowded in night and day, and many have to go away without seeing the Doctor, or make appointments for the future. It is not often that any known remedy will reach such a large number of chronic, acute and private diseases as does electricity. There seems to be no boundary to its utility in treating disease as well as its application to machinery. The three following cards speak volumes for the Doctor and his new system in curing the ills of which we are all unhappily afflicted:

Editor Oregonian: Jan. 17, I came to Dr. Darrin for treatment for deafness and ringing noises in my ears. I was cured in ten minutes, as well as ever in my life. The treatment was by electricity and other methods. Refer to me at 86 Oak St., Portland. ANDREW DOUGLASS.

Lee McGrew's Good Luck.

Editor Oregonian: I have been under Dr. Darrin's Electric treatment for three months for nervousness, kidney troubles and other ailments. I am cured and recommend him and his treatment by electricity. My place of business is 145 G Street, Portland. I have gained 14 pounds in the time. LEO MCGREW.

Another Soul Made Happy.

Editor Oregonian:—Dear Sir: It affords me pleasure to testify to the excellence of the electric treatment given by Dr. Darrin. For several years I have been troubled with kidney troubles and inflammation of the neck of the bladder, for a while unable to get out. A few months' home treatment has put me on my feet again, for which I am truly thankful to Dr. Darrin's great skill. D. E. HOLLOWAY, Newberg, Or.

DISORDERS WHICH AFFECT THE KIDNEYS.

Are among the most formidable known. Diabetes, Bright's disease, gravel and other complaints of the urinary organs are not ordinarily cured in severe cases, but they may be cured by timely medication. A useful stimulant of the urinary glands has ever been found in Hensley's Cathartic Bitters, a medicine which not only relieves the requisite stimulus when they become inactive, but increases their vigor and secretory power. By increasing the activity of the bladder this medicine, in addition to its additional effect of expelling from the blood impurities which it is the peculiar office of those organs to eliminate and pass off. The Bitters is also a powerful and efficient purifier of the blood, an invigorant of the stomach and a matchless remedy for biliousness and liver and spleen. It counteracts a tendency to premature decay, and sustains and comforts the aged and infirm.

BWARE OF OINTMENTS FOR CATARRH THAT CONTAIN MERCURY.

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a mercurial, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is also put up in a smaller form, and is sold by F. J. Cheney & Co.

Sold by druggists. Price, 75 cents per bottle.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE BLIND.

Dr. La Grange wishes to make known his New Treatment for the cure of all diseases of the eye—Catarrh, Inflammation, Ulceration, etc., and for the cure of all diseases of the eye, whether of long or short standing. The remedy is applied by the patient, and is simple, safe and sure in its effects, strengthening the muscles and nerves of the eye, removing pain almost instantaneously. It is a marvelous discovery and a blessing to the sufferer. For further particulars address with stamped envelope R. J. La Grange, M. D., 23 Powell St., third door from Green St., San Francisco, Cal. OVARIAN TUMOR REMOVED BY ELECTRICITY.

Miss Wickert of Peru, La Salle county, had been suffering for the last five years from a large swelling in her left groin. Six different physicians in Peru and La Salle told her it was a rupture, and used trusses on it. The pain caused by it finally became so great that she could scarcely walk. She then consulted Dr. Toel of Peoria, who immediately discovered that it was a tumor of the ovary. As it was partly cystic, the doctor first performed electrolysis by means of his galvanic battery on the cyst, and after it had shrunk and the growth become more movable he finished the operation by removing the whole tumor. The tumor measured 7 by 5 inches. The wound is entirely healed, and Miss Wickert left for Peru last week.—Peru Herald.

Dr. Toel is now located in Portland. The tumor, with hundreds of other cancers and tumors successfully removed by him by electricity without loss of blood, can be seen in his office.

THINK FOR YOURSELF.

Do Not Ask Your Neighbor to Think for You He Usually Knows Less Than You Do.

PORTLAND, Or., January 29, 1891.

My wife was a great sufferer for over ten years with a complication of disorders, from which it seemed she was doomed, as try what we might in the line of doctors appeared a failure. They were good doctors, too. Dr. Agnew of New York, who is world-famed, told her that without an operation that would cost her $1,000 the case was incurable, and that even with an operation the chances were even only. This was practically the statement of all prominent physicians of the continent.

The principal trouble was an absence of action and distress in the region of the kidneys. There was a constant hemorrhage; we thought she would bleed to death; her chest was as sore as a boil, and she was partially paralyzed, besides having catarrh of the bladder. We prepared for the inevitable, when Dr. Price of Seattle told us that he knew of some remarkable cures by Dr. J. Eugene Jordan with his new system of medicine. We, therefore, gave him a trial, and the result is that my wife has completely recovered. It is evident that Dr. Jordan's system surpasses in theory and practice the best and the future. F. H. C. Vapor Engine Co. 215 CLAY ST. S. F. California.

POISON IN A PIPE.

Few smokers fully realize the danger of smoking new or improperly cured Tobacco. The medical staff of the German army discovered this was a fruitful source of throat disease. The subsistence department of the U. S. Army have adopted Seal of North Carolina Plug Cut as the Standard Smoking Tobacco for the army. Beware of Imitations. The genuine "Seal of North Carolina" costs you no more than poisonous imitations.
