

Hood River Glacier.

HOOD RIVER, OR., JUNE 13, 1891.

REMARKABLE PERCEPTION.

Last week the GLACIER in a short editorial commented on the character of a man compelled to go to a neighboring town to get a newspaper to indorse his character. It mentioned names, and no places, but the "Two weeks old" editor of the Sun who evidently thinks he is also running the earth, with a keen perception really remarkable for one of his infantile age, immediately applied our article to the individual whom it thought it would fit best. We commend his judgment, and cheerfully acquiesce in his conclusion, for he made no mist. In this connection we would say that as far as the Sun's choice of boon companions, and subjects for praise, is concerned, it is a matter in which it can suit its own taste, but as far as the particular individual whom it fits our article to, with the judgment of a connoisseur, is concerned, the less said the better. We only know of him that he pleaded guilty of selling liquor without a license, after having sworn in The Dalles that he had not, and that he had had only six bottles during the year. We know of him, that with the malice of a fiend, he put up a job to ruin the character of a defenseless woman; a job in which he failed most ignominiously, because no one would believe him. We know that he and his night after night have been spying around decent peoples houses, and slandering them. We have no use for him, and would gladly leave his name in that oblivion in which it belongs, but he himself is determined to be before the public, and as long as he is, the GLACIER however unwilling to even mention his name, will see that he does not sail under false colors. 'Time was, when a Virginia gentleman would hesitate long before prostituting his talents, and honor to the upholding of this kind of a character, but the times are out of joint, and even Virginia honor is on tap for coin. As for the Sun's "two weeks old" slang, we do not care for it, but can assure our infantile contemporary, that Johnny does not need even a 22 calibre gun when hunting "two weeks old" game, that don't understand English well enough to know when a remark is applied to it or some other thing. We simply add that the Sun has our consent for all time, to indorse all the criminals, slanderers, defamers of women, and all around scurvy, and that whether from Hood River or otherwise, it sees fit to, but we respectfully decline to indorse its action in doing so.

AN EXCURSION.

There will be an excursion up from Portland the 21st gotten up by T. J. Watson for the purpose of showing Portland people Idlewild and other Hood River property. That our visitors will be pleased with our climate our location, and our scenery is a foregone conclusion, for none of them can be excelled; and yet they will not see Hood River at her best. We are glad to know though that this section is getting well advertised, for it is a dead moral certainty that when its merits are known it will settle up rapidly, and farm property as well as town property will go up to figures representing more nearly than at present, the actual value of the lands. When it is shown that our strawberry lands will yield easily from five hundred dollars a year up, per acre, and that we have the finest orchard lands in the state the beggarly prices which have heretofore prevailed will give place to fair values, and places which have been a drug in the market, at next to nothing an acre, will find eager purchasers. The heavier clay soil of the east side is peculiarly adapted to the growing of apples, pears and prunes, and is in many respects superior to the west side. The influx of capital will infuse new life into the valley, will bring the water out on each side of the valley, and will make it one vast orchard. This is bound to come in time, but a little judicious advertising, such as Mr. Watson is giving it, and the bringing people here to see for themselves, will accomplish this result many years sooner than it otherwise would be.

The editor of the Wasco Sun says: "Poor 'we,' editorily only two weeks old, has stirred up more dirty linen than he ever imagined was in the country." The editor seems to forget that dirty linen is an entirely natural concomitant of "two weeks old" kids; and while in his little world it seems a vast quantity of dirty linen, older people recognize the article as a clout, and avoid both the infant and his weapon.

While the above is a very good cut of Grace U. B. church of this place, it fails to do justice to the building because it does not show the surroundings of green slopes, big oaks, and magnificent views. This church was erected this year, being just completed, and was designed and built by Rev. W. H. East. It is cruciform, and modeled after the Gothic style of architecture, having four gables, and presents a handsome appearance from every point of view. The outside dimensions over all are, ground 40 by 52 feet; walls 14 feet; gables 34 feet; spire 82 feet. The entrance is in three compartments. The auditorium has four transepts, with recess back of the pulpit. The ceiling is 23 feet from the floor. The nave is arched over with four drop arches, resting on four Corinthian pillars at each corner of the nave. The lecture room is 12 by 25, eleven feet high, and opens into the auditorium by two arches, 8 by 9 feet. The vestibule is 10 by 10 feet connected by silent upholstered doors. A porch covers the entrance. The interior is finished with ceiling in natural grain, panelled with moulding, finished in mahogany stain. The cost including furniture, is about 2,300. The building is handsomely painted, and would be a credit to a place of much greater pretensions than Hood River. In fact there is not a prettier church in the state, and its pastor and members can take an honest pride in it. Its design and workmanship, speak in the highest terms of Mr. East's ability both as an architect and workman. The church will be dedicated one week from tomorrow, and will no doubt be filled to overflowing.

The Oregonian in order to make cheap capital and cheaper argument for a gold standard, makes a dirty fling at the state of Nevada where it says "life dies and death lives." The truth is that Nevada is possessed of vast agricultural resources, which in the near future under proper management of the mountain streams and building of reservoirs, will be developed. The foot hills raise apples, peaches, cherries and pears, equal to any in the world, and the valleys are of rich alluvial soil, with unlimited capacity for growing cereals, grasses, potatoes and sugar beets. For the latter it is pre-eminently fitted and these industries all lag, simply because the lack of water leaves the land unproductive. Portland and the Sound draw largely on Nevada for their supplies of beef, and Nevada last year, alone prevented a potato famine on this coast. Nevada has been under the thumb of the Central Pacific, just as Eastern Oregon has been and is under that of the Union Pacific, and has been taxed the full value of her products for taking them to market. She has been treated by San Francisco, as Eastern Oregon has by Portland, and like Eastern Oregon will yet come to the front.

Sir John A. McDonald died at Ottawa, Canada, June 6th. He was Canada's greatest statesman but not her greatest friend. For nearly fifty years he has been in active political life, thirty-five of which he may be said to have been the head of the government. His policy has left Canada almost bankrupt, and it is to his efforts that Canada is not dealing with this country under a reciprocity treaty. That there will be a reciprocity agreement between the two governments is now only a question of time, for no other Macdonald can arise in time to defeat it.

The editor of the Wasco Sun says: "Poor 'we,' editorily only two weeks old, has stirred up more dirty linen than he ever imagined was in the country." The editor seems to forget that dirty linen is an entirely natural concomitant of "two weeks old" kids; and while in his little world it seems a vast quantity of dirty linen, older people recognize the article as a clout, and avoid both the infant and his weapon.

ESTRAY.
Came to my place about the middle of November 1890, a two year old red heifer, has a little white on sides, and tail half white, and two small hoies in left ear. Owner will pay charges and take her or she will be disposed of according to law. F. C. SHERBIEB.

$10. REWARD.
I have lost a lay mare with white strip in face, branded "circle D" on left shoulder. Will pay the above reward for information leading to her recovery. James Wishart, Hood River, O.
