HOOD RIVER, OR., JULY 11, 1891.

THAT SHAM BATTLE.

The Dalles seems to have considerable trouble in finding out why they did not have a sham battle. On the face of things it is apparent that the sham battle took its place, and the bottle is mightier than the battle. The majority of C company got drunk and the quelling of the disturbance by I and D companies, caused so much hard feeling that it was concluded best not to have the sham battle. We understand the sergeants of the respective companies met, and agreed not to assemble their companies if ordered so to do, for the reason that they feared serious consequences should the sham battle be fought. We are informed that Col. Houghton did his best to have the battle take place, and only gave it up when he found it impossible to get the men to consent. The sergeants would have lost their stripes rather than assemble their companies, and the Colonel was made to understand this. The plain truth seems to be, that neither Col. Houghton nor the Fourth of July committee were to blame, each acting in good faith; and the blame lies entirely with C company. When the disappointed public understand that the feeling engendered by the arrest of C company was so strong as to make the other companies afraid to participate, and that in all probability some one would have been killed or hurt, it should feel thankful that the sergeants took the course they did. With the taking of wine to the grounds we have nothing to do. If it was a violation of orders those taking it should be punished, but if it was, it does not excuse the drunken carousal that followed its theft. The best thing our contemporaries of The Dalles can do is to drop the subject for there is neither money honor nor glory in its discussion; and as Don Quixote remarked to Sancho Panza, at the falling mills, "the more you stir it the worse it smells."

The eastern papers have again gone to commenting on the New York method of killing criminals. As usual, they disagree as to the humanity of the method, and some of them condemn it as being brutal and inhuman. We can see no objection to the method. The object, the death of the condemned, is accomplished instantaneously, and as painlessly as possible. It may be that an overcharge of electricity burns the features somewhat, but this is immaterial, as the subject is dead, and in most cases, at least, the slight burning, according to orthodox belief, is an appropriate introduction to their future condition. It might be well to continue the application of the electricity until the body was cremated. At any rate, the method seems much better than the brutal hangings, with their occasional horrors. There is no sensational gushing at the final scene, and this alone should be a strong endorsement of the lightning plan.

Hon. Hannibal Hamlin, died at his home in Bangor Maine, on the night of July 4th. He was vice president during Lincoln's first administration and is the last of those who were his advisors during those troublous times.

NEWS NOTES.

The organization of a State Alliance was completed at Portland Wednesday. Seventeen counties were represented. The platform is quite long and in most respects is an able document.

The funeral of ex-Vice President Hannibal Hamlin took place at Bangor, Maine, Wednesday, and was largely attended.

Cincinnati had a million-dollar fire Wednesday. It started in a new eight-story building on Fourth street, which was occupied by A. E. Barkland, dealer in furs. The stock was valued at $600,000 and building at $300,000, both being a total loss. Besides the stock, many valuable furs, the property of private individuals, which were stored there for the summer, were destroyed.

Four murderers were executed in the prison at Sing Sing, N. Y., Tuesday morning, by electricity. Death was instantaneous in each case. Smiler's body was claimed by his wife, and it is said that when the box in which it was received was opened, the face presented a horrible sight, being burned and scarred as with a hot iron.

The State has at last taken charge of affairs at Franklyn, Washington, and dismissed both the miners and Sullivan's dirty hirelings. Col. Haines, with a company of militia, is in charge of the company's property.

Portland still leads in the base-ball contests, with Spokane a close second. Bellevue, Idaho, was visited by a severe hail storm Tuesday. The hailstones were over an inch in diameter and did great damage.

W. H. Gladstone, eldest son of the Grand Old Man, died Sunday and was buried at Hawarden Wednesday.

Twelve Indian renegades attacked a mining camp in Arizona Tuesday. A company of cavalry is in pursuit of them.

The Missouri river is at flood, and if any additional rise occurs great damage will be done.

J. W. Kenna gives notice that he is here to stay, and is prepared to do painting in all its branches. Decorating, gilding, polishing, graining and staining. Treatment of interior wood work and furniture a specialty. Carriage painting done. Office at Mount Hood hotel.

THE PRESS MEETING.

Inquiry has been made by the Secretary of the Oregon Press Association concerning Hood River, with the object of having their annual meeting here. The meeting will take place, we understand, early in August, and every effort should be made to have it take place here. We think arrangements could be made for taking care of the crowd, and we know that the Association will find no more pleasant place for their meeting. We have written Mr. Pentland, Secretary of the Association, and will have full information as to members, dates, etc., in our next issue.
