In Violation of Law.

HOOD RIVER, July 8, 1891. EDITOR GLACIER: It is a well-known fact that there is a law in the State of Oregon strictly prohibiting the dumping of slabs or sawdust into any stream. yet this law is being violated every day by the millmen along Hood river.

Slabs and sawdust are dumped in in quantities sufficient to completely dam the stream, thus making it not only difficult for fish to ascend, but almost impossible to drive the river. Hood river must not be allowed to lose its reputation as a trout stream, but this it will surely do unless this sawdust is kept out. If it is not done, it should be reported and the law used to compel millmen to dispose of their refuse in
