Women Make Good Swimmers.

The records of the humane societies on both sides of the Atlantic show that of late years a fair proportion of their meduls fall to the lot of girls. There were several notable instances of rescue from drowning last summer by girls under twenty. Many women are accomplished swimmers. This is but natural. As those of men, and their flesh more buoyant, they have less difficulty to overcome in acquiring the art. Some of them could float at their first attempt, if they could acquire the requisite faith in the power of the water to hold them up. Swimming is very much an art of faith, for it is generally the case that when a person believes sufficiently in the buoyancy of the water to trust to it his precious body, lo! he is a swimmer. There were young girls at Newport, last summer, who could float on the surface of the ocean with no more difficulty than they experienced in lying upon a sofa. They could have floated for hours, if necessary. Some of the most famous swimming feats have been accomplished by very young women. - The

A Mixed Diet Is Best for the Omniverous Animal, Man-Water During the Heated Term - Concerning "Appetizers"-Berries-Soup-Cold Meals

While undentably a mixed diet is the best for man, there is a mistaken notion, which prevails to a great extent, that meat should largely enter into the same. As a consequence, much more is eaten than is needed or can properly be dis-posed of in the system. Never eat meat oftener than once a day, and very sparingly in summer. Men of sedentary habits might with safety for several days etables, fruits, milk, breadstuffs and foods of like coaracter, which are easy of himself on the sofa, and the whole group digestion. For those who have good reason to believe that their "kidneys are weak," a diet largely made up of meat is fil advised. Those organs are intimately concerned in its disposal in the system, and hence are overtasked if it is taken in too great a quantity. Some drink too freely of water, especially during the heated term. There is, however, a class largely made up of women who do not at any time drink sufficiently of that eminent essential to health. As a rule they suffer from contheir bones are generally lighter than stipation. Every one ought to drink about two quarts of water daily to meet the needs of the system. "Water is fattening" is an expression of some truth. Very fleshy people are proverbially thirsty, and when they attempt a reduction in weight, to lessen as much as possible the quantity of fluids habitually taken is one of the recognized rules of treatment. But a rigid adherence to it is dangerous for many, if not all. Un less advised by a physician to do dif-ferently, they should drink all they crave, within reason, excepting during the hour before and the hour after meals. With the food only the smallest quantity of fluids possible is allowable.

On the one side you have the old schools of medicine, born in obscurity and reared in ignorance, with whom mediocrity ranks as genius and fossilized conservatism is the acme of wisdom. They are the product of a parched imagination and a stunted intel-tect. They are the result of the dark ages and the thumbscure of much and a k ages leet. They are the result of the dark ages and the thumbscrew of myth and mystery, of astrology and alchemy. Their great boast is antiquity – but the title is disputed by Balaam's ass. On the other side stands the Histogenetic system of medicine. It is the off-pring of modern thought, of modern investigation, of modern experience. It is the result of research, the triumph of reason. Like Mi-nerva, it sprang from the brain of modern Jupiter-science. Its challenge is investi-gation; its passport is truth. Which side will win?

A heavy burden -all the ills and ailments that only female flesh is heir to. It rests with you whether you carry it or lay it down. You can cure the disorders and derangements that prey upon your sex, with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It's a legitimate medicine, carefully compounded by an experienced physician, and adapted to woman's delicate organization.

For all organic displacements and weaknesses, accompanied by weak back, bearing-down sensations, and for all uterine diseases, it's a positive specific. It's guaranteed to give satisfaction, in every case. If it doesn't, you've only to ask for your money and it's cheerfully refunded. If it does, you'll want to ask for nothing more. It's the cheapest medicine you can use, because you only pay for the good you get. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, invigorates the system, and produces refreshing sleep, a man should make a meal essentially on one course, varied only by a piece of pie or something of the sort. The greater the variety the better as long as a proper selection of the food is made. Soup is, by people generally, considered indispensable at dinner. It stimulates the stomach and makes that organ ready for the work before it. For that purpose clear soup may properly be indulged in by nearly all; there are, however, com-paratively few who do not find soup thickened by stock meat, vegetables, etc., a tax upon digestion if "hearty" foods are eaten after it. It "sours on the stomach," and hence should be forbidden dyspeptics, for whom only clear soup is allowable.

TROUBLE WITH FATTY FOODS.

The digestive organs find an admixture of several fatty foods difficult to dispose of. The man who has fried fish, bacon, steak, eggs and dry toast for breakfast is made uncomfortable, and feels dull and heavy for several hours afterward unless he cats very sparingly. With the butter, which is, of course, an essential, there are in such a meal as generally prepared five different kinds of fat. And they are still more indigestible when taken hot.

In this country there is a most decided prejudice against cold meals. Of course some foods should be served warm, but none hot. Americans are scarcely satisfied with tea or coffee unless it is near the boiling point; potatoes, also, must be steaming hot. Dyspepsia is the natural consequence. The English in this respect are a delightful contrast. People who are forced to be early in the morning at their labors would be much better did they eat cold meats for breakfast, and how much such a custom would lessen the burden of their poor, overworked wives.

The question what shall we cat may be best answered by simply quoting the fact that man is an omniverous animal. Why and how much we shall eat can be set forth tolerably well by saying that it is impossible for an engine to make steam without coal or water and that no competent engineer would make his machine carry 100 pounds of steam when fifty pounds would do the work in hand. An important duty of those who work with engines is to see that the fire is freed from clinker and ash. So waste must be regularly eliminated from the human system. The skin, the kidneys and the bowels are the main channels for the es-cape of this, and when these sleves fail to act, the state of affairs in the body is very parallel to what would occur should a fireman fail to clean the grate, and presently the fire will cease to burn. - Boston Globe.
