A LOUISIANA CUSTOM.

CELEBRATING THE CUTTING OF THE LAST STALK OF CANE.

Vigorous Work at the Last Acre—An Evicted Man—Banners of All Sorts—A Long Procession of Happy Darkeys. Negro Oratory—Supper.

A time honored custom among the hands on a sugar plantation is the celebration of the day when the last load of cane is hauled from the fields to the sugar house.

The planter has supplied the negroes with banners of all sizes. The cane carts are decorated with these, and the three or four mules in every cart have a bright rosette, surmounted by a small United States flag...

There is a great shrieking of whistles, roaring of machinery, crashing of cane mingled with the sounds of song and cheering, while toasts are drunk in every variety of wit...

Money is given to the leaders to treat the crowd, and the planter has to use every expedient in his power to prevent himself being hoisted upon the shoulders of the joyous negroes.

We are waiting on de Lord, and then the carts come lumbering home holding a half intoxicated, wholly happy crowd.

Yer got ter keep de pot bilin' less'n hit'll rust. Yer got ter keep hit full less'n de fire crack hit.
