Formerly tobacco chewers in Oregon purchased their tobacco by the plug without considering its weight, but emigrants from the East, where Star tobacco is universally used, refused to take these short-weight plugs and demanded Star Flug, which is not only the best tobacco, but each plug is a full sixteen-ounce pound, and now most chewers in Oregon use Star.

FEAUTY IN THE BOXES.

Lovely Women Who Crowd the The Front Rows in the Opera.

was at the opera the other night. "Fanst" was on the bill and the honse was crowded with the beauty and wealth of the town. Standing up between the acts I swept the boxes with my opera. glass, and the sheen of the diamonds outshone the glare of the bright lights. The white and bare shoulders of the women rose along the front scats like the tops of soft white waves, and their uncovered arms were as ripples of foam that relieved the bright colors of their costumes.

Clear complexioned, bright eyed and aggressive in their beauty, many of them leaned over the front of their boxes and sent their sparkling eyes careening through the house. They were lovely specimens of the feminine form divine, and the world has not left them in ignorance of that delightful fact.

Take almost any of the boxes and the story of its occupants' lives will point the moral of the subject that came to me that night.

Never mind the particular box, but there was one that drew my attention. Three women on the first row, superbly built, cherry lipped and alabaster skinned. With faces serene, health perfect, and contentment marked on every line of their well cut countenances. They had swept into their places long after the performance had begun and gazed about with superb indifference after throwing off their wraps.

The well rounded outlines of the oldest of the three, and the repose that ran through her every motion, marked her out as a woman to whom care was unknown, and satisfaction an everyday romance. She might have been 40, but she looked 25. The other two were younger, but both were pictures of absolute physical beauty. They were one family, and may have been mother, daughter and sister. The three were magnificent evidences of the development and culture that are building up the rich women of New York, and giving an inheritance of health and beauty to the new generation that is growing

And the husband? for he was there, too, The wife turns occasionally in a careless," half indifferent way and says a word to some one who sits in the rear of the box, and in the half dimness can be seen the man whose money makes all this loveliness possible.

Is he, too, developing and rounding out his life in pleasant ways and without weighing cares? Look at him even in weight; he is many pounds lighter than is the magnificent woman he calls wife, and who glances back at him sometimes almost pathetically. The furrows along his cheeks are cut deep and his eyes are sometimes weary and often heavy, even when Marguerite sings her sweetest strains.

The world has been wrestling with him for a quarter of a century, and his office has seen him every day during all that time. He has delved for wealth and he has found it, but his bent shoulders and shrunken figure tell the story of the strained anxiety that has covered his life for years. Unceasing work during the day and uncertain rest in the quiet of the night have laid the mark of 60 years upon him, though he has not perhaps

He has fought for the place in the opera where his proud wife sits. He has strugto keep her in the splendor that befits her beauty. He toils along, holding to his accumulations and lavishing "That man must have lots of time to them upon her, while her loveliness and stateliness grow with advancing matronhood, and the years of middle manhood bring to him the weariness and decrepitude of oid age.

Homes for Working People.

An interesting experiment has recently been made at Haarlem, in Holland, in the way of lodging working people, which may suggest similar action in some American cities.

Five years ago three co-operative societies undertook the construction of a new quarter that now comprises 289 houses and is traversed by several streets. Every house has been promptly rented, and in twenty years will become the property of the tenants. Each of the latter pays from forty to fifty cents a week rent, and in return enjoys the use of two rooms with alcoves, a kitchen, a cellar and a garret, besides a small garden. Every house has separate water pipes, etc. The only obligation resting on the tenant is to pay his rent regularly for twenty-five years. This condition speaks volumes for the stability of Dutch institutions .- Paris Cor. New York Star.

A Cause of Colds.

We find in neck wraps a common cause of "colds." If during winter one was certain to wear much the same wrap at all times when in the open air, there would be less danger from it. But the chances are that on some occasions when it should be worn it will be left off, either purposely or forgotten, and a cold is the The silk handkerchiefs with result. which many men adorn themselves cause more sore throats than any other influence. The Musquito's Poison.

Formic acid is the substance which ants, wasps, etc., deposit under the skin. and which produces the intense burning and itching which accompany wounds inflicted by them. This acid is a powerful poison, and if a musquito was large enough to contain much more of it the bite of that creature would be very dangerous.-Chicago News.
