Full Text of the President's Thanksgiving Proclamation-Puyallup Indian Reservation.

It was expected that the vexed ques tions regarding the Puyallup Indian reservation at Tacoma would be settled by the commission which was sent out there by an act of the last Congress, but it seems that this commission has not done what they were expected to do, and the question at issue is as far from settlement as before. The Indians have bargained away some of their most valuable lands. Their lands are needed for the development of Tacoma as a city, and they are useless to the Indians, except for what they can get for them. The matter of the individual and tribal rights of the Indians was supposed to be determined by the commission, also the with the Indians for their lands, but the commission's rept ct, now with the Jewish farmers.

The Diamond Market.

It was rather an innovation to the old time jewelers to discover in some of the leading magazines and newspapers advertisements offering their wares at prices which strike the casual reader as being remarkably cheap. One of the oldest houses in New York, for instance, has offered to sell diamond rings, which 'are fit for the hand of any lady or gentleman in the land," at prices varying from $55 upward. The high standing of the house naturally stamps such an offer as being sincere an honest, but certainly most men would be impressed with the idea that a diamond ring for that amount of money could not present many points affecting the stability of ten banking

> A slight investigation shows that the general cheapening agency of machinery is at work in this branch of trade as in all the others. What formerly required the work of a single man for nearly a day-that is, the metal part of the ring -is now stamped out and fitted ready to receive the stone with a rapidity which is astonishing. The only cost to be considered is the rent of the machine and the value of the crude gold. Inserting a cheap diamond in the surface of the ring is about all the manual labor involved. The journeymen jewelers do this work with great rapidity, and practically there is very little cost to the jewelry firm beyond the first cost of the gold and the diamond.-San Francisco

Argonaut. Imprisonment by Deputy.

The Paris correspondent of The London Daily News, telegraphing recently, said: "A curious attempt to shirk imprisonment by substitution came before the Paris assizes this afternoon. M. Dubuse, landlord of a cafe, was sentenced the other day to forty-eight hours' imprisonment for having held concerts on his premises without a license. In France a defendant who is a householder is not taken from the court to prison, but is allowed a respite of two or three weeks or a month at his discretion. At the end of this period he receives a polite letter to call at his earliest convenience in order to serve out the sentence.

M. Dubuse during this respite found a pauper, who had just been discharged from Nanterre, and induced him to go to prison for 20 francs. Boislachethis was the man's name-went off to the Petite Roquette, introduced himself as Dubuse, which name he signed on the visitors' book, and was locked up in a cell. His ragged appearance, however, aroused suspicion, and detection speedily followed. Boislache was prosecuted for forgery and M. Dubusc as his accomplice.

The jury, however, acquitted them both." He Got the Quarter.
