Bankrupt Stock.
Clothing, dry goods, girl's cloaks, etc. This stock is now displayed at Marvin Rand's store near the depot, and will be sold today and Monday regardless of cost.

School Directors.

There is no office the duties of which seem to be so thoroughly misunderstood as that of school director. We venture the assertion that there is not a board of school directors in the state outside of a few of the larger cities that perform their duty according to law. There seems to be a general idea that bills can be allowed, work ordered done etc., simply by two of the directors agreeing to it. This is not the case. These things can be done legally only when the board of school directors meet as required by law. The clerk must be present, and a record kept of all business transacted. Bills must be presented in writing, and the minutes of the meeting must show all the proceedings of the board. The school directors can no more do business on the street than the county commissioners can. The general practice in nearly all the districts for two directors to attend to the business of the district whenever, or wherever they may happen to meet, and while we call attention to the matter in a friendly way we have not the least idea that this article will cause any change in the mode of doing business.

A Narrow Escape.

Sunday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Calkins and son Tommy, Mrs. Haynes and Esther Howe, who had been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Locke, were returning to their home when an accident occurred that only by the greatest good luck did not cause the death of Mr. and Mrs. Calkins. At the foot of the grade this side of the planer, Mrs. Haynes and the children got out of the wagon to walk up the hill and just above where the flume crosses the road, there is a sharp curve near the top of the hill around a point of rocks, the road being but a few feet wider than the wagon track and the bluff being at least sixty feet, with a steep incline from its base to another precipice of thirty feet or more. When the horse had just reached this narrow place, he became frightened and commenced to back. Mr. Calkins told his wife to jump, which she did immediately, and Mr. Calkins followed as the hind wheels of the wagon went over the bluff. Mrs. Calkins caught him by the coat and thus saved him being carried over. The wagon and horse went over the bluff, slid down the incline, fell over the precipice, and rolled on a distance of between three-hundred and four-hundred feet, landing with his head between a big boulder and a fir tree root, the wagon staying with him. Mr. Calkins saw the animal struggling, and went around to him pulled his head out from between the boulders and tree, and was astonished to see him get up. He was led down the hill where a goat could hardly go, and outside of a few scratches was uninjured. The wagon is simply kindling wood.

Since writing the above the distances have been measured and it was found that the horse fell clear, 75 feet and that his hip was badly injured.

The Stock Increased.

At a special meeting of the Hood River Armory Association held Monday night, ninety shares were represented and the question of increasing the number of shares from 120 to 220, and the capital stock from $1,200 to $2,200 was up for action.
 The meeting was presided over by Joseph A. Wilson, and after some discussion as to the right of certain subscribers to stock, to vote, the motion to increase the capital stock was put and carried by a vote of 62 to 13. Captain A. S. Blowers having some doubt as to his right to vote the 15 shares owned by D Company declined to vote them. After the result was announced, on motion of Captain Blowers it was decided that all those who had subscribed stock, and who were dissatisfied with the increase, might withdraw their subscriptions, and four shares were withdrawn. It looks now as though the armory would be built at once.

The school.

The "destrict school" which began and closed its term last Friday night in Armory hall, was a decided success from a financial standpoint, yielding we understand, $44. The hall was packed and there being no ventilation except such as was caused by opening the front door, those in front of the house were nearly suffocated, while those in front of the door of whom the writer was one, nearly all caught on a cold of large size and phenomenal meanness. The play, if play it could be called, had no merit, and the lack of scenery, furniture and room, would have prevented its proper presentation if it had. In one point, and one only, it resembled the old-time school, and that was that there was a feeling of joy all around when it was dismissed. We regret exceedingly that we cannot find something pleasant to say concerning it, but regard for truth compels us to say that we cannot. With those who took part we have no fault to find, for there was nothing in the piece, and it requires more than amateur talent to make, to use a homely expression, "a silk purse out of a sow's ear." The object was a worthy one, and we are glad that it was a success financially, but we believe we voice the sentiment of all who went, when we say that the vacation should extend over several years.

Grand Masquerade Ball.

At Armory hall Thursday evening, the 26th inst., by Idlewild Lodge, No. 107, I. O. O. F., the most successful ball ever given in Hood River took place. Shortly before 8 o'clock the maskers began to arrive and by 8:30 there were sixty of them on the floor, and the grand march commenced. Those appearing in mask were as follows: Frank Jones, fireman; Hattie Delt, red white and blue; Sarah Wilson, nun; Mrs. Hardwick, Annie Rooney; Mrs. Ellison, Auntie Chloe; John Daly, P. H. Miller, Jack Neely, dominoes; Will Rankin Indian chief; A. B. Jones, mosquito kicker; J. B. Hunt, fireman; D. E. Rand, clown; Mrs. A. B. Jones, daughter of the Golden West; Miss Henry, female devil; H. E. Wiley, sailor; Mr. David, Spanish cavalier; A. W. Vance, lady; H. Gray, fat boy; Mr. Cantop, negro boot black; Wm. McKenley, old time gentleman; L. Presey, Count; O. T. Russell, Spanish cavalier; P. Paulsen, mask; W. Haynes, hay seed; J. R. Nickelson; clown; Alex Watt, ballet dancer; Wm. Straehn, sailor; Mrs. Perry, snow flake; W. B. Perry, simple simon; Ida Foss, night; Miss Reed, domino; Mrs. Watt, domino; P. Yettie, what is it, Mr. Kiddale, mask; C. L. Morse, Uncle Sam; Francis McCoy, Japanese lady; W. F. Hubbard, national colors; Mrs. Wolfard, Greek lady; Mr. Lake, old lady; Bess Isenberg, queen of hearts; Hattie Oiler, queen of diamonds; Lenora Hinrichs; clothehan; Ethel Cook, country girl; Mrs. Mathias, school girl; Wm. Ellison, Bavarian officer; A. Ganger, mask; Cush Luckey and Bert Stranahan, colored gentleman and wife with kid attached; Mrs. Kelan, Gipsy; Mrs. S. Howe, Spanish girl; M. P. Watson, tramp; Mrs. Eva Tuckey, domino; W. P. Church, colored gentleman; R. F. Hardwick, sailor; Jeff Mosier, mask; Mrs. Mosier, stars and stripes; Mrs. Champlin, post office.
 The judges were Mrs. McLenn, Mrs. Allen and Messrs. Harrison, LaFrance and Button, who at 10:30 having arrived at a decision, and the rooms being warm, masks were removed and the following persons awarded prizes: Mrs. A. B. Jones, best dressed lady; Miss Lenora Hinrichs, best sustained character; Will Rankin, best sustained character; L. Presey, best dressed gentleman. It will be seen from this that prizes were well scattered, two going to Hood River; one to Cascade Locks and one to Mt. Hood. There were quite a number present from The Dalles as well as from the Locks, among them our old friend Emil Shutz, and Mr. Middleton of the Wasco Sun. A splendid supper was served at 11 o'clock and dancing was kept up until after three.

BORN.

In Hood River Valley, Saturday November 21, 1891, to Mr. and Mrs. Will S. Crapper, a daughter.

MARRIED.

At the residence of L. Rorlan, Esq. The Dalles Wednesday, Nov., 25th by Wm. Michell, R. H. Husband to Miss Amanda Rorden, both of Hood River.

Miss Melinda Peters, step sister of Mrs. S. E. Bartmess, who was here a year ago last summer, was married at Dayton Indiana; last week, to a Mr. Sims. Wednesday evening Mr. Harrison received a big box by express which on being opened disclosed a double shipment of wedding cake, one consignment being to Mr. and Mrs. Bartmess. There were five kinds of it, each better than the other, at least that's the way they seemed to us, and they were packed so nicely that the frosting on them was not broken. We extend congratulations and wish them many a happy anniversary.

DIED.

In Hood River Valley, Wednesday Nov., 25th Clarence Clark, aged 27 years.

Another Drowning.

Last Friday night an Indian was drowned in the Columbia near the mouth of the little White Salmon. It seems there was a dance to be given at William's place that evening and the boats went over from this side. Indian Peter was in the rear boat, though but a short distance behind his friends, and alone. The wind was blowing quite hard and the river was very rough. When near the shore, and beating down against the wind the sail jibed, throwing Peter out. He called twice but his friends could not reach him, and though a good swimmer he was weighted down with a heavy overcoat, and sunk in a few moments. At this writing the body has not been recovered.

A Samsonian Debate.

The subject for debate next Wednesday evening at the Barrett school house is: Resolved: That if a man had hold of a tiger's tail, it would be better to hold on than to let go. The president of the literary society has generously selected the following to take part in the debate, and informs us that a wagon will be in town at 6:30 to convey the Hood River gladiators to the scene of action. Affirmative, J. H. Cradlebaugh, P. A. Snyder, B. F. Shoemaker, E. C. Miller, H. L. Howe Negative: C. M. Gilbert, C. M. Wolfard, J. H. Shoemaker, C. R. Saunders, Rev. Dejos Howells.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

POINTS ABOUT THE STUDENTS IN THE HARVARD ANNEX.

Lady and Leopards' Heads—Women should help women—in Public Positions—Boston's Female Orchestra. Taste in Simple Gowns.

None of the students live at the school, but while they are in the building they are on the most intimate terms, and a feeling of sociability among the students is encouraged by the authorities.

Any young woman who wishes to become a student in the college must write to Arthur Gilman, the well known author and educator, who is secretary, and he finds out all about the student and her family. The ages of the applicants vary from eighteen to forty years.

After the student has passed the entrance examination and has come to Cambridge, what is called the students' committee of the college is called on for the performance of an important function. This committee is entrusted with the responsibility of either selecting the home in which the student is to live or supervising the student's selection. All this applies, of course, only to the case of the student who comes from a distant state or a not very adjacent city or town of New England.

All of the students at the Annex who have no homes in Cambridge board in private families in that city. Of the 160 students at the Annex this year there are about fifty who live in this way. The other 100 or more students come from such places as Roxbury and Cambridge and Somerville and Newton. Their homes are in those towns, and when they get through with their work at the Annex every day they go home.

Outside of the supervising interest which the authorities have in the social life of the students, there is another interest that manifests itself in all kinds of pleasant ways. The young women are encouraged to regard their instructors as persons who are more to them than official pedagogues. And then the students have no class spirit, no social sets, no barriers to kindly intercourse.

For several years a certain ceremony has existed at the Annex. It is the getting together at the commencement of the college year of all the students. The new students assemble at the invitation of those who have been on the last year's lists of the college, and everybody has a jolly good time. Everybody gets acquainted with everybody else at these gatherings. It is the commencement reception, and there are dancing and the usual adjuncts to a social affair. But the invitations are strictly confined, and to the students themselves.

On this particular day the Annex building is delivered over to the students. Every room in the house is theirs to do as they please, and they usually please. The refreshments are supplied by the Annex housekeeper, and the students who give the invitations pay for the fun. Ice cream and cake and chocolate, and from 100 to 150 students—this is the list of guests to be enumerated in describing the make up of the reception. The eye of man has never looked upon the scenes at these gatherings, and probably never will, and the chronicler of Annex social history must be content to accept his information second hand.

Afternoon teas are a conspicuous feature of the social life of the Annex. These teas were held in the parlor on Thursdays the year before last, and on Wednesdays last year. At these teas there are present the professors of the college and their wives, and anybody else to whom the young women are kind enough to send invitations. They don't begin to have these teas until after Thanksgiving day.

Before long the Annex will have as many clubs as is usual in a regular college.—Boston Globe.

The wife of Francis Scott Key, a grandson of the author of the "Star Spangled Banner," is about to go on the stage. Mrs. Key is a granddaughter of that brilliant lawyer and statesman William Pinckney, of Maryland, and is a familiar figure in Baltimore society. Her maiden name was Tiffany, and she is connected with Rev. Dr. Tiffany.

A Diamond Thief Trapped.
 The manager of one of the largest jewelry stores in the city was speaking of some experiences he had had with diamond thieves. Said he:

"Of course we are familiar with the faces of a great many of the most expert thieves who pick up diamonds and jewelry while examining them under pretense of buying, but naturally our knowledge is limited, and great care is exercised when exposing precious stones. I keep all the loose diamonds in my private office and attend to their sale myself, but this is rather a dangerous policy. Quite recently a man came in and asked to see some unset diamonds, and without the slightest suspicion I brought him in here and spread out a number of papers of very valuable stones. I was seated in a revolving chair, and had occasion to turn my back on him for a moment, and when I looked around again I discovered that two valuable stones were missing.

Very quietly I folded up the papers, leaving the one from which the stones had been taken until the last. Then saying carelessly that I had something else to show him, I turned to a drawer in my desk and got my revolver. 'This is what I wanted to show you, and now just put back those two diamonds,' said I. He looked at me for a moment, and something about hauling a gentleman, but he saw the revolver looking very dangerous, and finally produced the stones from his vest pocket.—Philadelphia Press.

The form used by the king of Sweden in addressing the members of parliament differs from that used by many other rulers. His speeches begin with, "Good gentlemen and Swedish men." They end usually also with, "The blessing of God be upon you, good gentlemen and Swedish men."
