which leads the Polk County Observer down another obituary notice. By the attendance will be small. way, what's the matter with Carlton, West Chehalem, Wheatland, Amity, Willamina and Bellevue, in Yambill? They ought to have papers." The ambition of the people of any town is more to blame than anything else for the starting of papers in places where there is no possibility of their earning a living for the publisher. The people agree to furnish a sufficient patronage, which agreement is forgotton when the novelty wears off.

This may be true in other places but is not so with Hood River. Our little paper has existed two years and a half and has the promise of a long and usetul life. The trouble generally is with the editor. What a small paper needs to stand the storms of adversity is a strong good natured man for editor strong to do the work and good natured to stay with it. A man who can hustle a sack of spuds or a yellow pumpkin into the wood shed for future reference, and who can find hope of increased patronage and profit in a promise to subscribe next spring. He must be optimist enough to believe he is finally going to skim the upper sides of the silver lined clouds, and he must not desire a too intimate acquaintance with the goddess of liberty on the star spangled six-bit dollar. He must be contented with his lot, if he owns one, and compare his proud position as boss of the devil himself and monarch of all his surroundings, from the uncylindered Washington press, to the lye and paste pots, to Cyrus W. Field for instance or Jay Gould, or the country merchant or any other purely financial aggregation. No sir, the communities are not to blame for the early death of the long felt want fillers, be pained to learn of his sudden death. The GLACIER Hood River Or. position, of the editor himself.

The railroad commissioners are an expensive luxury, and if of any use in the world we fail to understand what it is. They passed up the road Monday in a special car and will know as much about the actual condition of the road when they get home as they did before they started. It seems hard, indeed, to them to think of walking over the track, but that is about the only way in which it could be examined. Rotten ties, defective bridges and unsafe trestles cannot be examined from the platform of a Pullman car, but fortunately the salaries can be drawn from that standpoint.

The new warship New York was launched this week. She will be the finest vessel in the American mays, if, like her predecessor, the Philadelphia, she does not take an insane desire to swim bottom up. The latter vessel has had her masts removed in order to keep her from being top heavy, but this does not help her materially, and the navy officials are at their wits' ends All tinning, Plumbing and pipe work will be in trying to devise a plan to keep her from turning over. She was built on a SECOND ST., THE DALLES OR. plan furnished free of tariff by an Englishman.

The irrigation question has at last assumed that importance in this section that it deserves, and there is scarcely a farmer in the valley but what has awakened to the importance of having water, and plenty of it. Indeed, some of those who a year ago were ridiculing the idea that irrigation would be of any benefit, are now the prime movers in organizing a company for the purpose of supplying water. Every week meetings are held at some point in the valley, and it is safe to say that Hood river valley will in the near future have a perfect irrigation system.
