

The Best Things In Cookery

Are always made with the ROYAL BAKING POWDER. It imparts that peculiar lightness, sweetness and flavor noticed in the finest rolls, biscuit, cake, etc., and which the most expert pastry cooks declare is unobtainable by the use of any other raising agent.

The ROYAL BAKING POWDER, besides rendering the food more palatable and wholesome, is, because of its higher leavening power, the most economical.

The ROYAL makes more and better food than any other baking powder because it is the purest.

Why continue the use of remedies that only relieve when Ely's Cream Balm, pleasant of application and a sure cure for catarrh and cold in head, can be had.

I had a severe attack of catarrh, and became so deaf I could not hear common conversation. I suffered terribly from roaring in my head. I procured a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm, and in three weeks could hear as well as ever, and now I can say to all who are afflicted with the worst of diseases, catarrh, take Ely's Cream Balm and be cured. It is worth $1.00 to any man, woman or child suffering from catarrh.—A. E. Newman, Grayling, Mich.

Apply Balm into each nostril. It is quickly absorbed. Gives relief at once. Price, 50 cents at druggists' or by mail.

A Storm on the Coast of Chili.

In the southern part of the desert of Atacama a storm occurs only at intervals of many years. One of these rare storms was experienced by only one person, Mr. Joel Phillips, now of Cornwall, but then a mule owner and copper carrier, who lived in a rancho located on an insulated rock fifteen feet above the level of the bottom of a ravine in which it was situated and distant from the port of Pan de Azucar about twenty miles. He had just arrived at his home an hour before sunset when a heavy cloud appeared overhead, causing sudden darkness. But he was soon aroused from superfluous reflection by a shower of hailstones of dangerous dimensions and followed by a copious downpour of water, which continued for about eight hours, accompanied by loud peals of thunder. His terror was further aroused by the roar of flowing torrents of water around his lonely island home, as the ravine, one-half mile in width, was now filled to a depth of twelve feet and rolling down continuously thousands of huge boulders with a pulverizing, rumbling noise along its bed down to the sea on each side of him.

Bewildered by the misunderstood occurrence and unceremoniously din created as the white foaming circle of water insidiously approached within two feet of his dwelling, and with faint hopes that it would rise no higher, he ceased reflecting, and after enduring hours of indescribable mental agony, he fell exhausted into a stupor, dreaming of a second deluge. From this he was benignantly aroused by his furnished saddle horse devouring the vegetable materials his hut was constructed with, the animal having escaped from the stable in the ravine to the heights above and thence to his master's home for his usual breakfast. The storm was over, and the sun was shining brightly, as if nothing special had happened; the ravine was free of water and cleared out for another such deluge, which probably would not again happen for a century or two.—London Engineer.

"German Syrup"

My niece, Emeline Hawley, was taken with spitting blood, and she became very much alarmed, fearing that dreaded disease, Consumption. She tried nearly all kinds of medicine but nothing did her any good. Finally she took German Syrup and she told me it did her more good than anything she ever tried. It stopped the blood, gave her strength and ease, and a good appetite. I had it from her own lips. Mrs. Mary A. Stacey, Trumbull, Conn. Honor to German Syrup.

He Had His Coat Repaired.

He was one of the army who are living and seeing life in New York on an attenuated income, and one cold morning he awoke to the realization that the overcoat would be a necessary part of his garb for that day. He looked at it. 'Twas unrepresentable. He thrust his hands deep into his pockets. They were empty. Two direful facts, neither of them surprises, faced him, but he was not annoyed. He proceeded cheerily to a small tailor's shop and presented the overcoat for repairs.

"It will cost you a dollar," said Shears. "The price is no obstacle, proceed," replied the customer. Shears turned the coat over to a subordinate and sat down for a chat with the heaven-sent customer, for Shears was a Spaniard. And yet he was sufficiently Americanized to produce a deck of cards and propose a little game of poker. The heaven-sent assented. Vest buttons made admirable chips, and the cards flew for some minutes, until the coat was repaired. Then the customer paid his bill in vest buttons, and received from Shears fifty cents for the remaining buttons he had won. Then, equipped for the inclement weather, he went forth conscious of the rift in the clouds, and bought for himself a luxurious fifty cent breakfast.—New York Times.

ONLY A MAD STALLION.

BUT HE HAD BLOOD IN HIS EYE AND MADE THINGS WARM.

A Thrilling and Nearly Fatal Adventure in Canada—A Mad Horse That Had No Fear of Men, Whips, Halters or Guns. A College Boy in a Tight Place.

I have had several disagreeable encounters with vicious horses, but only once was I so unfortunate as to fall in with one possessed by homicidal mania. My escape was so narrow, and the experience left so deep an impression upon my mind, that I have felt ever since an instinctive distrust for this most noble of domestic animals.

One autumn, when I was about 18, I was taking a tramp through the eastern townships of Quebec, preparatory to resuming work at college. I reached the little village of Maybury one day at noon and dropped into the village inn for luncheon. The village was in a state of excitement over a tragedy which had taken place that very morning, and which was speedily detailed to me by every one with whom I came in contact. A boy living on a farm near the village had been killed in the most horrible manner by a fine stallion that had gone suddenly mad. A fierce anger stirred in my veins as I listened to the story, and I asked the inn keeper, who was my informant, what they had done to the brute.

"Well," answered Boniface, "this afternoon there's a crowd going out to fetch him and tie him up. If he's too bad for that—an' if I know anything about horses he's just gone mad, stark mad—why, they'll have to shoot him off hand to save their own necks."

"I wonder if I'll run any risk of meeting him?" I queried rather anxiously. I had no weapon but my heavy walking stick, and I had almost a sentimental regard for the integrity of my neck.

"Which way be you bound?" inquired Boniface.

"For Blissville," I answered.

"Oh," said he, "you're all right then. The horses are feedin' out yonder to the northeast, and Blissville lays south."

AN UNPLEASANT MEETING.

It was with few misgivings that I now resumed my journey.

I was soon beyond the cultivated fields, past the last of the fences. I had climbed one of those rocky terraces and made 200 yards across the breezy down when behind a low knoll I caught sight of a group of horses quietly pasturing, and I remembered with a qualm the morning's tragedy. Could it be, I asked myself, be the herd containing that mad stallion?

I halted, and was about to retrace my steps unobtrusively, in the hope that I had escaped their notice. But it was too late. Two or three of the animals raised their heads and looked at me. One in the group snorted with a peculiar half whinny, at the sound of which my heart sunk.

Then I caught sight of one in the center, which seemed to be jumping up in the air off all four feet at once. The next minute this creature, a great black animal, appeared outside the group, plunging and biting at his flank. Then, with a short, dreadful sound, he darted toward me, open mouthed.

Up to this point I had stood my ground, eyeing the brute resolutely, with an appearance of fearlessness that I was very far from feeling. But now I saw that my only hope, and that a desperate one, lay in flight. It was accounted at college a first rate sprinter, and now I ran my best. The 200 yards that lay between me and the terrace I had just left must have been covered in not much more than seventy seconds. But as I reached the brow of the slope the mad brute was close on my heels.

I had no time to check myself, and even less notion to do so. In fact I fell, and rolled headlong down, dropping, bruised and bewildered, into a crevice between two boulders. The next instant I saw the black mass of my pursuer dashing over me in a splendid leap. Before he could turn and seize me I had rolled further into the crevice, and found that one of the rocks overhung so as to form a little narrow cave, into which I could squeeze myself so far as to be quite beyond the animal's reach.

Never before or since have I discovered so unexpected and providential a refuge. The raving stallion came bounding and leaping up to the very door of my burrow, but I felt safe. He would roll back his lips, lay his ears flat to his head, spring straight into the air and shriek through his wide red nostrils his fury and his challenge. The latter I did not think it incumbent upon me to accept. I waived it in disdainful silence.

For a time the brute kept up his boundings and those strange, proud jerking of his head, but at last he actually tried to stretch his neck into my burrow and reach me with his frightful naked teeth.

It must have been for nearly an hour that I watched the mad creature's antics from my den.

I was beginning to cast about somewhat anxiously for a way of escape from this imprisonment when I saw the pasturing herd suddenly toss up their heads and then go scurrying away across the down. My adversary saw this, too, and turned his attention away from me. I peered forth cautiously, and to my profound relief I observed a party of men, several carrying ropes and halters and others armed with rifles, approaching the terrace foot. One man walked a little ahead of the others and held out a peck measure in which he shook something, which I presume to have been oats.

THE RESCUE PARTY.

The stallion eyed them sullenly for an instant, and then his mane rose like a crest and his head went back with a shrill cry. In the same way as he had greeted my appearance he bounced into the air twice or thrice, and then he dashed upon the party.

The man with the oats fell back with wonderful alacrity, and the fellows that carried halters seemed bent upon effacing themselves in the humblest manner possible. One tall, gray shirted woodsman stepped to the front, raised his rifle and drew a bead upon the approaching fury, while two or three others held their shots in reserve. There was a moment of breathless suspense. Then the line, thin note of the woodsman's rifle rung out, and the stallion sprung aside with a shriek, and stumbled forward upon his knees.

Almost instantly, however, he recovered himself and rushed upon his opponents with undiminished ferocity. I held my breath. He was almost upon the party now. Then two more rifles flashed from marksmen standing motionless in their tracks, and the mad brute rose straight up on his hind legs, and fell over backward, dead.—Exchange.

STARED AT BY THE DEAD.

A TWO DAYS' VIGIL KEPT BY A CORPSE.

Alone, Unattended, Desolate—An Experience Possible to So Many Others.

[New York Recorder.]

Early one morning recently the guards on the elevated road in New York noticed a middle-aged man apparently kneeling beside an open window. Although it was a raw and cold morning, his head was uncovered. His eyes seemed to be staring intently across the street. All day long, as the trains thundered past, the man seemed still to be watching, and even when night came on a glimpse of a white face could be seen staring out into the darkness. The next morning the guards were all on the lookout, and still the man could be seen with his chin resting on the back of his hand.

Coroner Donlin, who chanced to be looking out of the car-window during the day, saw at once, that it was no common face that glared at him. He left the train, went to the house and there found kneeling by the window the stiffened corpse of a man. For two days he had kept the vigil of the dead. Awakening in the night, alone and oppressed, he had struggled to the window, and, gasping for breath, died. The Coroner's explanation revealed the fact that death had been caused by Bright's disease of the kidneys, which came unannounced, sudden and sure.

Sad! Yes, but how common have these sudden deaths become. They give no warning. There is a quick pain, a struggle, and all is over. Statistics show that 90 per cent. of these sudden deaths are caused by kidney disease. Slowly but surely these great organs have been decomposing, and when the climax comes it comes without warning. But there were warnings. The strange pains, peculiar sensations and unaccountable feelings were nature's warnings. They may have been considered only the symptoms of a cold, but all the while disease was working and death surely approaching.

Can nothing be done? Yes, exercise, care. Act promptly. Use something to sustain the kidneys. Do as so many prominent physicians are advising their patients to do, take Warner's Safe Cure. If this great preparation which has saved so many men and women from death by Bright's disease were not a well-known household remedy and the most popular in America, we might hesitate to so warmly indorse it, but being the only absolute specific for this great modern disease, it is commended most unhesitatingly. This entire page could be filled with statements from prominent physicians in both Europe and America of what the Safe Cure has done to lessen Bright's disease, prevent female complaints, and check the great physical evils of a modern life. It is no ordinary medicine, but a scientific discovery which has received more commendations than any other discovery of the present century. The well-known Dr. James D. Bragg says: "Warner's Safe Cure has proved the best medicine for humanity yet devised."

When the uncertainty of life is remembered; when the certainty of disaster where care is not exercised is realized, the importance of the above truths should come home solemnly to all.

A man's mind is a scrap book, and the tough things he posted in it when he was young never fade.

For the cure of a cough or sore throat "Brown's Bronchial Troches" are a simple remedy.

It is now that a man goes to the country to find rest and quiet and comes directly home for the same purpose.

Use Enameline Stove Polish; no dust, no smell.

TRY GERMA for breakfast.

Of course his face is wreathed in smiles like hundreds of thousands of smokers who appreciate a pure, mild, sweet smoke. If MASTIFF PLUG CUT was not all that is claimed for it, how else could so great a business and sale have developed in so short a time?

DEAD SEA FRUITS.

They play multitudes when they are the product of neglect of hepatic disease. A "slight" cold, a fit of indigestion, biliousness or constipation, each or any of these "minor ailments" in many cases with "league-destroying" strides. Give them a swift, early defeat with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters and avert the danger. Absorbently administered an alarming rebuke to the man who informed him that he had "only a cold." "Only a cold" repeated the doctor. "What would ye have—the plague?" Rheumatism and its grippe are easily extinguishable at the start. Why then allow them to get up a full head of steam? Put on the brakes with the Bitters. The genial cathartic which this superb medicine diffuses through the system, the impetus it gives to the circulation of the blood, its soothing and strengthening effect upon the nervous system, especially recommend it to the afflicted and sick. 'Tis the great specific for malaria.

There probably never was a man who could wear carpet slippers without looking slouchy and worthless.

$100 REWARD. $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh, being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists; 75 cents.

A picture of health—the woman who has faithfully used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. She feels well and she looks so. It's a medicine that makes her well, whether she's overworked and "run-down," or afflicted with any of the distressing diseases and disorders peculiar to her sex. It builds up—and it cures. For all chronic weaknesses, functional derangements, and "female complaints" of every kind, it's an un-failing remedy.

And it's the only one, among medicines for women, that's guaranteed. If it doesn't give satisfaction, in any case, you have your money back.

Can anything else be "just as good?"

"They're about as bad as the disease!" Not all of them, though. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are pleasant—both when they're taken and when they act. They cure permanently Sick and Nervous Headaches, Biliousness, Costiveness, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels.
