HOOD RIVER, OR., AUG., 6, 1892.

The outcome of the Homestead lockouts promises to be a tedious fight in the courts in the shape of criminal prosecutions. It is quite true that none of this rioting and bloodshed was necessary, but instead of the laboring man being responsible for it, Carnegie, Frick and those who sent the Pinkerton's to Homestead are responsible for the whole affair. Frick was getting a taste of his own medicine from Bergman, and while he was fortunate enough to escape the assassin, the law should step in and hang both Mr. Frick and Carnegie, the same as it would some poor devils under circumstances showing less connection with murderers as accessories. Wilson, who killed Mamie Walsh, was no more a murderer than Frick, who hired three hundred murderers to shoot into the crowd at Homestead. If Mr. Frick, the millionaire, will follow the example set by his peer, Wilson, Justice will be satisfied.

The filibustering still goes on in congress, the world's fair men fighting the passage of the sundry civil bill, in hopes of forcing the granting of the appropriation of $5,000,000 for that object. It is shown that the money loaned at the Philadelphia and New Orleans expositions was a dead loss to the government, and it is presumed from this that the same thing will happen in case $5,000,000 are loaned to the Chicago show. Congressman Durborrow has introduced a bill to give the world's fair $2,500,000, and as this would be sufficient and at the same time save an equal amount to the government, it ought to pass. The most hopeful of the fair people, however, have about given up.

At 6 o'clock Wednesday morning, just 400 years after Columbus sailed from Palos, a small caravel built in imitation of Columbus' vessel, the Santa Maria, sailed from that same port in honor of the discoveries of the great admiral. The little vessel sailed between long lines of vessels, which gave their thunderous salutes as she passed, and the shipping and town was gay with bunting, the flag of every country in the two America's being visible. Another big celebration is to be held at Madrid on the 12th of October—"Discovery day."

Gov. McKinley, in a speech in Nebraska Wednesday, said: "The republicans do not believe in taxing their own people as long as they can find other people to tax." He alluded to his position on the tariff question, that the foreigner paid the tariff. The good governor should recollect the doctrine laid down in 1776, by the thirteen colonies, that "taxation without representation was an evil that could not be submitted to," and be careful lest all foreign nations put in their claim to representation in our congress.

Mars was at its nearest point to the earth on the 3d of this month, and all the big telescopes have been steadily turned upon our little neighbor for the past month. Many absurd stories have been circulated concerning discoveries made, but all of them are stories merely. It is reported from the Lick observatory that nothing whatever has been discovered except that proof is made more certain that there is water on that planet.

The state election in Alabama, Monday, passed off quietly, resulting in a victory for the democrats, who elect almost the entire legislative ticket and all the state officers. The majority in the state is about 45,000.

The Oregon Pacific railroad company has been re-incorporated, and it is stated that the money, or at least $12,000,000 of it, is available for its construction.

If the state expects to convict Birgfeld of poisoning Mrs. Rogers, it will have to dig up some stronger evidence than it has produced so far.

Important Circular.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
The Dalles, Or., Aug. 3, 1892.

By act of congress, approved Sept. 29, 1890, claimants under the third section were allowed two years from that date in which to pay for the land to which they were legally entitled. By a subsequent act (February, 1891), this time was extended to the 3d day of February, 1893, and by another and recent act, the time was further extended, to actual residents only, to three years from September 29, 1890. So that, as the law now stands, parties entitled to purchase under the third section, but not actual residents on the land, must make payment on or before February 3, 1893. Actual residents on the land will have until September 29, 1893. JOHN W. LEWIS, Register.

A lot of youngsters greased the tracks of a railroad near Brooklyn, New York. A midnight train from Coney Island, when it struck the spot, came to a standstill, the wheels revolving without effect. Ten carloads of passengers were stalled. They turned out and scraped the grease from the track with grass and sticks before the train could proceed.

Pansies.

Pansies, like all other flowers, are generally most sought when they are most difficult to be had—out of season. They are regarded as spring flowers, and justly so, as they endure considerable frost without injury, and do not perfect their flowers in extremely hot weather. Yet, if protected from the sun with a screen, and the soil be kept moist, as perfect flowers can be had the entire season as during the early spring months. For early spring flowering the seeds should be sown in August, and the plants protected by a frame during the winter; for midsummer flowers sow the seed as early in the spring as the soil can be worked. But October and November are the months for pansies, and the best we have ever seen were in these months, from seed self sown in July. The seeds had ripened on our spring-flowering plants, and when the capsules burst the seeds were thrown in all directions. They grew as weeds grow, and they carefully secreted themselves among other plants for fear of being treated as weeds; and there, among lilies, trimonas, and eulalias, we found as fine pansies as we ever had growing under the best of care. These plants gave us an abundance of flowers until the middle of November, when nearly all other flowers were killed by freezing. To insure a bountiful harvest of pansies after more tender flowers have been killed by the frost, sow the seed in July, protect the plants against the midday sun, and transplant into any vacant, rich spot.—[American Agriculturist.

Fruit Trees from Seeds.

A correspondent inquires if the seeds of Baldwin, or of other varieties of apples be sown, the kinds will be reproduced; and whether this is true of pears or other kinds of fruits. To a considerable extent this is true, but there are always some slight variations. Either the fruit is larger or later or not quite as good, or in some slight degree it varies, although not sufficiently so to be considered distinct; occasionally, only, some very distinct form will occur, and it is in such cases that we get our improved varieties. The peach is more likely to come true from seed than other fruits, and, indeed, some varieties, like the Columbia, Smock and a few others, come so nearly alike that some have established orchards from seed in that way. As a general rule, however, the variations are sufficient to spoil the object of the fruit-grower who wants to have exactly that for which he is looking; and for this reason it is considered a good rule to depend wholly on grafting in order to secure the exact variety desired.

Grafting into young peach roots is work any one can do with ease and comparative certainty. Just cut off the body as close down as will leave room for the graft, split the stock with a clean smooth stroke of a sharp, thin-bladed knife; insert the scion cut into a smooth wedge and the bark edge fitted exactly to the bark of the stock; have the bud on the scion at the base of the wedge, then pull fine dirt over the whole, and you can expect a good tree to result. It is only necessary to have a mechanical eye and a steady hand to graft with certainty. — [Fruits and Flowers.

Revival Meetings.

Revival meetings are being held at the U. B. church each evening A growing interest is manifest. Rev. Mr. Parker, the evangelist is a gifted speaker at home on the platform. For eloquence and power in oratory, and for pure logic in the statements of the facts with which he deals his equal would be hard to find. It is safe to say that this may be the opportunity of a lifetime to listen to one so richly endowed. Meetings will be continued through the coming week. Z.

Foxes threaten to become as serious a pest as rabbits in Australia. An Australian journal says that the foxes introduced here already spread over a wide area, and are most destructive both to lambs and poultry. They attain greater size and strength in Australia than in England, and the mild climate is highly favorable to the increase of their numbers. If some energetic steps are not soon taken, nothing can prevent the spread of foxes over the whole continent.
