HOOD RIVER, OR. NOV. 18, 1893.

ALL SATISFACTORY.

The taxpayers of Portland recently began an investigation for the purpose of discovering what had become of the county money. Their report appended shows where some of it is at present located, and it also shows that some of Portland's banks are now running on the people's money:

" * * Mr. Malarkey was asked what funds belonging to the county be had on hand, and he said $4,000 in the general fund and $5,000 in the school fund. The question was asked Mr. Malarkey whether he had any county funds in any of the banks. He said not a dollar. He was asked if he did not have some money that could be turned into the school fund. He answered that there was no money other than the $4,000 or $5,000,
