

Hood River Glacier.

HOOD RIVER, OR. JAN. 13, 1894.

WOMAN.

The most comprehensive word in the English language is Woman. Not because either the woman or the word embraces more, but because the woman is simply incomprehensible. She covers the entire range from good to bad. She is not beneath the angels, and not above the fiends. Man's best friend; his greatest enemy. The power that pushes him to the pinnacle of fame; the octopus that fastens her tentacles on him to his destruction. The bubbling brook that lulls him to slumber; the raging torrent that sweeps him to death. A purring kitten with a touch like velvet; a tiger with claws of steel. Aunon, like Nature, "She speaks a various language. She glides into his darker musings with a mild and gentle sympathy that steals away their sharpness ere he is aware;" and in her wiser moods reconciles him to a life beyond the grave. Soothing as balm to his deeper wounds; irritating as salt to the petty scratches of his annoyances. Attractive as a magnet; dangerous as a buzz saw. A rose, and a thorn. Perfume to his soul; ammonia to his nostrils. Solacing as the best Havana; torturing as a tight shoe. A light in the dark; a blindfold in the daylight. An illegible guide board; sending some the right and others the wrong road. Man's bane and antidote. And yet we all like her. In all her moods and tempers, past, present or future, here's a health to woman individually and collectively. May her grip on her husband's heart and her best friends' hearts never grow less. She's hard to get along with, but impossible to do without. The sweetest, dearest, greatest necessity; knowing no law, but laying it down like Solon. May she queen it forever over the baser yoke-fellow, Man, until Gabriel blows his trumpet on resurrection morn, at which time she can safely be trusted to pick out the finest and best fitting raiment and go to bossing the angels. So be it.

NOT IN OREGON.

Governor Penney certainly overstepped the bounds of truth in his letter to the president concerning the condition of the people of Oregon. There is not a state in the union where the people are as free from want as this. As a matter of fact, Oregon is preeminently an agricultural state, and crops never fail. In Eastern Oregon the farmers are perhaps as hard pushed as they ever were, but this was caused by the unusual weather, the early and heavy rains damaging their wheat, and the financial question had nothing to do with it. Oregon is the poor man's paradise. He can live better on less work than anywhere in the world. Here at Hood River a condition of affairs exists that is positively unique and defies rivalry. The farmer markets his crop in a top buggy and hauls his cow feed and hay home in the same vehicle. He rises when he gets ready and quits work when the spirit moves him, which it does early and often. As a rule, every farmer owns a buggy or back and a good team. He is well dressed, his children comfortably clad and shod the year round, and his wife and daughters are well enough dressed to be presentable every day in the year in any city in the union. While not posing as society leaders, or turning their whole attention to dress, we assert that the ladies of Hood River valley are dressed as well as their city sisters. They wear handsome dresses made of good materials, stylishly cut, and they wear them with that grace that shows they are accustomed to them. Our stores at Christmas time did a larger business than ever before, and hundreds of dollars were spent for presents. If these things mean hard times, we have them.

Said the governor of Oregon to the governor of Colorado: "Friend Waite, what do you think of the streets of the new Jerusalem being paved with gold? As for me, I kick." Said the governor of Colorado to the governor of Oregon: "Friend Sully, unless at least the side streets are paved with silver I won't go. Continue kicking."

A Kind Critic.

Brother Harlan of The Dalles Chronicle has the following kind criticism for this compendium of useful information:

The motto of the Hood River Glacier is: "It is a cold day when we get left," and is singularly appropriate. The undismayed John don't get enough patronage to properly feed Mrs Cradlebaugh's canary bird, yet the GLACIER appears on time each week with its usual quota of caustic comments upon societies and classes of the town, religious, political and otherwise, with as little artfulness and about the same indifference as the mythical Arizona Kicker, which the Hood River journal much resembles in its straight-from-the-shoulder utterances. Hood River could not get along without its GLACIER any more than a confirmed morphine fiend could dispense with his favorite drug, and if the community should some day awake and find the office closed it would be productive of general lamentation and a generous

The fact that the meeting of the democratic clubs of Oregon was held at The Dalles Tuesday had nothing to do with the churches of that city observing a week of prayer. It was simply a coincidence.

Silence being golden, and our governor being against the gold standard, will not keep silent. He talks too much.

Our esteemed contemporary, The Dalles Chronicle, puts words in our mouth that don't belong there. The substance of the resolution, not offered, but suggested by us at the late convention at The Dalles was, that "a democratic congress being in session and a democratic president who understood the country's needs being at the helm, now was a good time for Oregon democracy to saw wood." As will be seen by our contemporary's statement, there is a distinction with a vast difference.

The Oregonian in kicking against the assessment of Multnomah county takes the position that property is worth only the sum which its earnings indicate; in other words, that its value is fixed by the per cent of net money it will earn in a given time, and so, insists that the Oregonian building, by far the finest in Portland, is assessed at its full value; because it will not earn 3 per cent, net on the assessed valuation, which is $28,000. In one sense this is true, but if this mode of valuation is adopted, we assert that every farm in Eastern Oregon, and most of those in the Willamette valley, are assessed far too high. The farms of Eastern Oregon, this year, have paid nothing, consequently, according to Oregonian logic, should not be assessed. The same rule applied to this print shop should entitle us to a bonus from the state. And on top of all its kicking, our big contemporary emphatically asserts that "Multnomah will pay her proportion." She will pay no more." Its editor should strike up a partnership with Colorado's governor. With two such valiant warriors the financial and revenue departments of the government would take a new chute.

Congressman Johnson, in debating the Wilson bill, opened with an arraignment of the democratic party for inaction in carrying out its promise to reform what it had characterized during the campaign as the "robber tariff." He said: "We pledged ourselves to abolish it if the American people gave us authority; and then our haste to repeal oppressive taxes subsided, and instead of flying at the throat of the protected barons and robber trusts, the great democratic party began, as it were, to wag its tail and look for crumbs. If Cleveland had shown the sagacity and courage the situation demanded, the ink would not have been dry on the commissions of his secretaries before congress had been called into extra session to relieve the country of its extra burden of taxation." As the climax of all this delay came the shameful days we have just passed through, in which the house stood paralyzed because, despite our overwhelming majority, we democrats would neither furnish a quorum to be counted, nor count one really present." He commended the bill for its blow at the sugar trust, but added: "The whiskey trust, the steel-rail trust, the cordage trust, the bicycle trust, the lead trust, are left free to pluck the American consumer." He spoke of steel rails, of which he is one of the largest manufacturers in the country, declaring that the present duty was equal to 50 per cent, while the present bill proposes a reduction of only 25 percent.

The Union Pacific receivers are playing a fine hand. To our not overly acute vision there seems to be lines between lines that may be easily read. Since the receivers took charge they have been busily engaged in segregating the branch lines from the main line, thus preparing the way for the Union Pacific contention that the government claim can apply only to the main line. As the main line can be paralleled for one half the sum owing to the government, if things can be manipulated so as to shut off the government's claim to lien on the branch lines, it would be told to take the main line. The talk of the O. R. & N. again taking possession of its line is a part of this scheme, and there is nothing in it.

A Quarter Century Test.
For a quarter of a century Dr. King's New Discovery has been tested, and the millions who have received benefit from its use testify to its wonderful curative powers in all diseases of throat, chest and lungs. A remedy that has stood the test so long and that has given so universal satisfaction, is no experiment. Each bottle is positively guaranteed to give relief, or the money will be refunded. It is admitted to be the most reliable for coughs and colds. Trial bottle free at the Hood River Pharmacy. Large size 50c, and $1.

RAND, DENT & CO.

The Fruit Market.
From the quotations from the St. Louis fruit markets it appears the apple is not rated as we rate them here. The report says: "Newtown pippins and like varieties, $3.75 to $4, Baldwin and winesap $4.25, Ben Davis, York Imperial and Johnson's winter, $4.50." At the same time it quotes California belle-fleurs at $1.50 per box and "Oregon mixed according to quality and color." The first prices given are for barrels. Prices are much lower than a month ago, when the demand from the south forced them beyond what the market could stand, the prices shutting off local consumption and reducing themselves. But with present quotations apples shipped from here in carload lots should net, if packed and assorted properly, 75 cents a box.
