The case of Heald against Chandler was tried Saturday, the jury returning a verdict for plaintiff and giving her $40 damages. The suit was in ejectment, and unless appeal is taken, gives plaintiff possession.

Tuesday night was the coldest of the year—the thermometer registering one below zero. It made a great improvement in the coasting, and many of the young folks abandoned the more serious and important pursuit of doing nothing and actually got up energy enough to slide down hill.

A Beautiful Aurora.

Thursday evening shortly after 7 o'clock the faint tinges of light in the north gave promise of an Aurora display which was well verified. In a little while the bright rays began to shoot straight up from the northern horizon, while in the northeast the sky assumed a pink tinge which rapidly deepened to a blood red. At times the display was very brilliant and in the course of an hour had moved from the northeast to the northwest when it slowly faded away. The display was exceptionally brilliant in closing.

Redolent of Spring.

The name of James Vick's Sons is familiar in every hamlet, every home in the United States. They have, year after year, as far back as we can remember, sent their catalogues over the country and followed them up with seeds, bulbs and plants, until the name is suggestive of the blossoms of spring and the perfume of flowers. Their catalogue for 1894 is out and is a work of art. Those who love flowers (and who does not?) should send for Vick's Floral Guide for 1894 and select from the thousands of blooms something to brighten the door yard and delight the senses, for when you are supplied by Vick's Sons, you may rest assured that your plants will be what they are supposed to be.

Willing Workers.

The following is the programme at the U. B. church Sunday evening: "The White Robe"....By eight members Recitation.....Gladys Hartly An echo exercise.....Eight little girls A letter from an African girl..... Missionary collection. Song.

A Quarter Century Test.

For a quarter of a century Dr. King's New Discovery has been tested, and the millions who have received benefit from its use testify to its wonderful curative powers in all diseases of throats, chest and lungs. A remedy that has stood the test so long and that has given so universal satisfaction, is no experiment. Each bottle is positively guaranteed to give relief, or the money will be refunded. It is admitted to be the most reliable for coughs and colds. Trial bottle free at the Hood River Pharmacy. Large size 50c. and $1.

DIED.

At Klona, Wash., Arthur, son of Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Feak, aged one year and six months. The news reached here Wednesday but we were unable to learn the date of death.

Vick's Floral Guide, 1894.

It contains descriptions that describe, not mislead; illustrations that instruct, not exaggerate. This year it comes to us in a suit of gold. Printed in eight different colors besides black. Colored plates of chrysanthemums, poppies and vegetables. On the front cover is a very exquisite bunch of Vick's New White Branching Aster and on the back is the New Double Anemone; 112 pages filled with many new novelties of value as well as all the old leading varieties of flowers and vegetables.

We advise our friends who intend doing anything in the garden this year to consult Vick before starting operations. Send 10 cents to James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., for Vick's Guide; it costs nothing, as you can deduct the 10 cents from first order. It certainly will pay you.

Pythian Anniversary.

Waucoma Lodge K. of P. celebrated the thirtieth anniversary of the order Monday evening. Only members of the order and their families were present, and although the night was one of the worst of the winter, the hall was comfortably filled. The programme consisted of music by the K. of P. band, select reading by Prof. Gilbert, music by quartette, with Miss Callison piano, H. York violin, P. C. Maguire, clarinet, and F. D. Fisher, cornet, and it was music, too, that would have brought anywhere, as it did here, a hearty encore. This was followed by a letter to O'Finnigan from his grandmother, which was read by Capt. Coe, and afforded every one a chance to laugh, which opportunity was properly used. A diminuendo address by the writer hereof, followed by music from the band, concluded the literary features of the entertainment. After a quarter of an hour spent in conversation, supper was announced, discussed and pronounced a thorough success. After supper the guests repaired to the lodge room, where the quartette kindly repeated their first number. The entertainment came to an end at 11 o'clock and was one of the most pleasant affairs that ever took place in our little city.

Murder at Caleb.

In a quarrel at Caleb, Crook county, the evening of the 14th, John Hamlet shot and killed Ben Gammie. The murderer escaped. The following is sent out as a description of the murderer: "Age, 37 or 38; height about 6 feet; weight about 170 or 180; very dark hair, smooth shaved; very large front teeth; cut or bruise on left side of face; finger on right hand chewed or cut. Had on when left, light gray suit of clothes, brown overcoat with fur collar and cuffs; had either a brown saddle horse or small sorrel mare; also a 45-caliber Colt's revolver with pearl handle. His face is very square."

FOUND.

A shawl, call at Husband's shoe shop.

Among the Roses.

Bags full of roses, baskets heavy with roses, carts laden with roses; roses, a feast of roses, a surfeit of roses, if that is possible. The women stick roses in their long, braided hair, the men in their belts, the children pull them and play with them and leave them on the road to die.

There is roseleaf jam to eat—very fresh and sweet it is—and there is roseleaf sirup to drink. Every vase and vessel is full of roses; they drop on you from unexpected places; great bunches of bright pink heads lying on the ground admonish you as you walk; you can make a bed of them if you will; go to the granary—rosary. I suppose it should be called—and there you will find as soft and sweet a couch as was ever laid in the "Arabian Nights" for eastern prince to dream upon.

This is how it came about that I saw such a multiplicity of roses. We fulfilled a long cherished scheme and went to Kezanlik, the Valley of Roses, in the Balkans, once the famous rose garden of Turkey.—Blackwood's Magazine.

I was chatting with a Montague street real estate man in his office a few days ago when a woman entered who attracted the attention of both of us. She was middle aged, very plain in face and figure and wore a black dress which was patched and ripped in many places. Her entire appearance denoted poverty and misery and indicated that she had a great struggle to keep the wolf from entering at her door. Instinctively feeling that the woman was a beggar, we were about to offer her some money, when she astonished us a little by saying she had some private business with the real estate man.

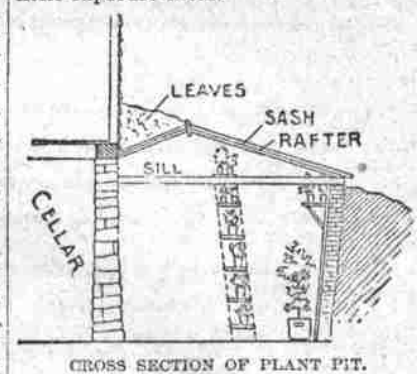

They went into his inner office and were engaged for about fifteen minutes in earnest conversation. After she had gone and my friend had ceased to gaze in open mouthed amazement at her vanishing figure, he enlightened me as to her object in the following manner: "Well, I'll be darned! That woman wanted to buy a $10,000 piece of property I have for sale, and she had $2,000 in her pocket to pay down to bind the bargain. O Lord, think if I had offered her ten cents and told her to clear out!"—Brooklyn Eagle.

Salary and expenses paid weekly from start. Permanent position. Exclusive territory. Advantages to beginners. Liberal commission to local part-time agents. Largest growth of clean, healthy, reliable business. For the thorough, law-abiding, energetic man. We want you now, while the fruit industry is so important. Good chance for advancement. ## A HOME MADE PLANT PIT.

A Convenient Substitute for the More Costly Greenhouse.

The homemade pit depicted in the cut was originally described by a correspondent of Popular Gardening. This pit, as the illustration shows, is sunk the depth of a cellar. If this is kept warm by proper openings no other heating would be required. In very severe weather some light shutters laid over the glass at night would be an additional protection. As will be observed, soil is banked up right to the front, so there is little exposure there.

If it is placed against an outbuilding that part shown "leaves" would not be objectionable, but if placed up against the ordinary dwelling this part might be of boards, or shingles even, and if lined on the inside with thick paper that would be all that would be required. By having a part of the room in under the building, back of the stage, many big plants, such as figs and oleanders, could be wintered. A place of this sort, which is made with comparatively little money and labor, serves to winter over a large number of plants, and is well adapted to the convenience of those who cannot afford the expense of a regular greenhouse.

Notable Chrysanthemums.

At the late New York chrysanthemum show were exhibited many fine varieties of this popular flower named after persons of distinction, in illustration of which may be mentioned the Chauncey M. Depew, of Japanese type and deep magenta purple in hue. The Henry Ward Beecher chrysanthemum is a large Japanese flower, high and cup shaped, very double, with thick, folded petals. The Victor is named after the son of General A. C. Barnes, and is a Chinese variety, incurved, of beautiful form and pink color, shading to silver rose in the center. The Mrs. Langtry is one of the largest white flowers in the exhibition. The Miss Minnie Wamaker is very much like it. The Fair Maid of Guernsey is distinguished by the nature of its petals, which come out straight, so that you can see right into the center of the flower.

The Billy Florence is a new creation of this year. The inside of the petals is maroon and the outside pink. It is of the reflexed variety, with erect petals, twisted at the points. The Jack Van Nostrand is one of the best and most lasting varieties. A pot plant of this chrysanthemum took first prize at the New York Madison Square garden exhibition last year. It is a deep purple pink, shading to pale lilac, and merges into silver white with age. It is of immense size.

Camellia Japonica.

A well known and general favorite is the Camellia Japonica. The plant does not need heat, thriving best in a temperature a little above freezing point, but it cannot bear frost. Free access of air is of great importance, and a liberal supply of water, but not so much as to keep the soil soaked after the needs of the plant are supplied. They are grown best in well drained borders under glass. An attempt to cultivate camellias as window plants in pots generally results in disappointment, the roots not liking such close confinement, and there is apt to be too much heat or an excess of water, causing the buds to fall before opening. The best soil for camellias is a loose mold composed of black loam, peat and sand.

Covering Strawberry Plants.

Mr. Angur told at a Massachusetts horticultural meeting that he likes to cover the plants pretty well during the winter, and uses from two to three tons of coarse hay per acre for that purpose. The plants do not suffer at all when thus protected, while plants exposed are more or less injured by alternate freezing and thawing. He stated further that he accepted Mr. Wood's idea of matted rows, provided they are not allowed to become too much matted. With any variety he would set the plants three feet apart, which would allow sufficient room for all needed new plants. This seems to call for a great deal of work in preparing the ground, but that is done rapidly.

The Cranberry Crop.

As the Christmas season draws near every one becomes more or less interested in cranberries. A large part of the cranberries grown in the United States come from New England, and most of these from Massachusetts, in the vicinity of Cape Cod. New Jersey is also a large producer, and Wisconsin and Michigan yield most of those grown in the west. This season the crop is about 446,400 barrels for New England, 137,500 for New Jersey and 94,200 for the west. Total output this year, 678,100 barrels against 709,000 last year and 800,000 for 1890.

An Arbor Vitae from the Pacific Coast.

Thunja gigantea is a beautiful arbor vitae from the Pacific coast and supposed by many not to be hardy on the Atlantic slope. It is claimed, however, that it thrives round about Philadelphia in the nurseries. No plant has been injured there, though some complaint is made about its not bearing transplanting well.

A sea can jump straight upward and vault over a barrier 500 times its own height. If a man could display as much agility he could clear a wall a mile high at a single bound. If he could jump as far forward according to his weight as a flea can he could make 24 trips around the world at one leap.—St. Louis Rep.

Dressing Poultry for Market.

In dressing poultry care should be taken to meet the requirements of the special market to which the birds are consigned for sale. In some sections dry picked birds bring the best prices, while in others the preference is for scalded or steam picked. Some markets call for "drawn" birds; others require that the entrails remain intact. Here are two plans presented in The American Poultry Yard. The second plan is the one used by poulterers who bid for highest prices in the New York markets where the dry picked birds are preferred, though both kinds are accepted. For that market the fowls are not drawn, and the legs and heads are left on.

Scald or steam the fowls quickly and as soon as possible after killing them. Then remove the feathers as briskly as may be, taking them off backward and downward in the same direction that the plumage grows. The carcasses should not be too severely scalded lest this render the skin tender, but a jet of steam thrown upon half a dozen at a time in a good sized tub, or the immersion of the bodies in boiling hot water for an instant only, will answer the purpose.

This is one way. But when there is plenty of time and you are not obliged to hurry matters, if each fowl is plucked dry directly after slaughtering and while the dead body is still warm, it will be found the preferable plan. It is an important item in dressing poultry for market to see to it that the fowls to be slaughtered are not in the midst of their natural molt. Their bodies at such time are covered with "pin feathers" that greatly disfigure them and which are difficult to remove. Fowls should always be prepared for eating or marketing before they begin to shed their feathers annually or after the new plumage is well out.

Do Pumpkins and Melons Mix?

"Do squashes and pumpkins mix with watermelons?" is a question asked by S. F. White, of Iowa, who says in The Farmers' Review: "This is a question that has been a puzzle to many because we never see a pumpkin seed in a melon, nor is there any change in the melons or apparent mixture in the seed. Yet I am sure that melons grown near pumpkins will get so mixed with the pumpkins as to be unfit for use." Now, says Professor L. H. Pammel, this is a general belief among the gardeners, and I therefore have thought it best to correct an error. Equally general is the belief that cucumbers spoil muskmelons. Professor Bailey has shown that it is extremely doubtful. Ninety-seven muskmelons of many varieties were pollinated with cucumber pollen of many kinds. No fruit set. Twenty-five cucumber flowers were pollinated with muskmelon pollen; only one fruit developed.

Here and There.

Guard against little basins around young fruit trees that will hold water. The water may freeze and injure the trees.

In Scotland some of the slaughter houses are being furnished with electrical apparatus for stunning the cattle by electricity.

A large number of immigrants are locating in western Kansas. They are buying land in large quantities and will make wheat culture a specialty.

The American Bee Journal says that there are 3,000,000 persons in the United States who keep bees, and that the number of colonies is about 3,000,000, producing nearly 75,000,000 pounds of honey annually, worth $10,000,000, and wax worth $300,000.

Mastodons and Mule Footed Hogs.

Science knows of the mastodon only as "an extinct fossil proboscidean pachyderm, closely allied to the elephant of modern fauna." Who knows, however, but that these "supposed-to-be-extinct" creatures may be as plentiful in the "land of the midnight sun" as mule footed hogs seem to be in Arkansas, Missouri and the Indian Territory? Three weeks ago I would have been much more surprised had I met a real live mule footed hog than I would have been to have met a whole herd of the aforesaid fossil proboscidean pachyderms. Since that time everything has changed. The hundreds of letters sent in by kindly disposed friends are convincing proof that mule footed hogs are more plentiful in the south than office seekers in Washington.—St. Louis Republic.

INFLUENZA,

Or La Grippe, though occasionally epidemic, is always more or less prevalent. The best remedy for this complaint is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"Last Spring I was taken down with La Grippe. At times I was completely prostrated, and so difficult was my breathing that my breast seemed as if confined in an iron cage. I procured a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and no sooner had I begun taking it than relief followed. I could not believe that the effect would be so rapid and the cure so complete. It is truly a wonderful medicine."—W. H. WILLIAMS, Crook City, S. D.
