AN EXAMPLE OF IMPUDENCE.

In This Tale a Vice Is Carried to the Apex

She was a very sweet, gracious old lady; her manners were full of dig-Fulton. The grounds are 200 by 270 nity; when she conversed with a system. It is the best location, every- girl it was an honor for that girl. When I first knew that old lady, she quarter where she lived. Everybody respected her, and all those who had the privilege of her friendship loved Every member of D Co., is hereby her. Suddenly she let her great house and gardens and removed into quite a small villa, with a little garden; also she gave up her carriage and limited her household to one servant. And she gave no more parties.

It was understood that this dear old lady had lost her fortune. But nobody knew the facts, nor could anybody ask. She retired to this little villa and continued to have receptions, at which tea and homemade cake were the only luxuries offered. Also, there arrived at this juncture a niece, of whose existence no one had previously been aware. She was not nice, this lady; it is no fault to be no longer young or good looking, but one ought at least to be well bred and good tempered.

Now, after a year or two, during which the bitter tongue and the bad temper of the niece caused continual misery to the old lady, there came a time of sickness. It was the plague of influenza. Many of us in the quarter had it very badly, among others the old lady's niece. For the old lady's sake, not from any love of our own, we were shocked to learn that the niece was dead.

A month or two afterward the old lady told me a story. She said: "You know that I lost all my money. It was lost for me. It was my man ig over his seven-feet-and-a-half form. put on the market, as it can be used at of business who stole it. He forged stocks; he gambled with the proceeds and lost the whole. When there was no more, he confessed the robbery. But, he said, to prove the esteem in which he held me, he had brought his only child with him, and he would leave her with me until better days. So he kissed my hand and left me, and that," she explained, "is the reason why I had to leave my dear old house and to receive this poor creature whose unfortunate manners and bitter tongue made me miserable all day long. I have often thought"- Here she stopped, and thinking of that sublime and unequaled impudence I, too, have often thought. - New York Recorder.
