

Hood River Glacier.

HOOD RIVER, OR. JUNE 9, 1894.

THIS WILL PASS AWAY.

Hood River, which last year did not share in the general loss of Eastern Oregon, is having her share this year. Then it was the wheat crop and the wool clip that suffered, and we were not in it. Our berry crop was first class and the prices good. Our apple and other fruit crops were as good as we had ever had, and much larger; our cordwood, every cord that was cut and hauled, sold for good prices, and for cash. This year it was not that way. It has been an off year. First our berry crop suffered from unusual frost, which took the earliest berries, and another which injured those maturing a little later. These losses were borne with reasonable cheerfulness, because they are of the things to be expected. Our crowning loss is the calamity that has befallen the Union Pacific, shutting us off from our markets. Our berries are rotting on the vines, a wealth of lusciousness, representing whole lots of toil and care on the one hand and $80,000 on the other; 3000 big $20 pieces. It is a sad blow, but one from which we will recover. It presses on us all, and so is of the common lot. We will recover from it because we are as a community young and strong and vigorous; because time cures all and heals all wounds, as the green grass hides the mark of shot and shell, creeps over the upturned furrow and rounds, softens and beautifies what accident or ruthlessness has left too harsh. With a determination not to be downed, but with a fresher energy, let us go to work to regain that we have lost, standing by one another, assisting each other to pull up and out, and in a few months we will laugh at the idea that we took the matter seriously. We have run up against Kismet and got a bruise we could not avoid. The summer promises to be a fair one, considerable property will change hands, and money will be again circulating among us. We do not pretend to be stuck on the situation, but, at least, we see no reason to cry. It is our misfortune, something human foresight could neither foresee nor guard against. So, like Bryan said to Moore:

"Here's a stir for those that love me,
And a smile for those that hate;
And what ever sky's above me,
Here's a heart for any fate."

AN OBJECT LESSON.

Unless we can ship our berries by boat, making the transfer at The Dalles, there is no possibility of getting rid of them except by boat to Portland. The Union Pacific can do nothing towards repairing the line until the water goes down, and that will be at least a month, and more likely six weeks. If the road is in running order in three months from now, the managers will have done exceptionally good work. In the meanwhile those of us who are disposed to find fault with the railroad company can study a little on the object lesson we have had. It is easily to be seen that there is at least one greater evil than a railroad, and that is no railroad. We have been prone to find fault with the time table, the service and the charges, yet all of us would gladly have paid a much larger charge than we have been doing, and get up in the middle of the night to do it, if by so doing we could have the old U. P. going again. The most pleasant music this community will have this summer will be the shrill whistle of the engines on the railroad. We would gladly turn out with a brass band now to welcome the advent of a through train, but alas! the railroad is not. Trestles and bridges are gone, and our loss is but a drop in the bucket compared to that of the Union Pacific. That the road may soon again be in running order is the wish of every Hood Riverite.

DEMOCRACY DOWNED.

The returns are in and democracy is not in it; not in Wasco county, anyway. The indications are that every man on the state ticket has been elected. In this county the democrats elect a constable in Wamic. So democrats can console themselves with the reflection that "it might have been worse." It is perhaps useless to inquire into the cause, since no matter what it was the result is accomplished. Briefly stated, it was caused by superlative foolishness on the part of congress, exalted asinine on the part of the senate, and pertinacious bull-headed selfishness on the part of the president. Grover forgot that a portion of the United States lay west of Washington. With a tariff on sugar and wool on the free list, the hands of Oregon's democracy were tied. The result is just what should have been expected, and we deserved it. The result in Oregon is the reiteration of the result in every other state that has held an election since democracy got into the saddle. The next congress will be republican, the next senate will probably be republican, but it is doubtful if the next president will be. If times grow better, which they should, regardless of who goes into power or which policy is pursued, the republicans will go back into power and elect their president. If no speedy relief comes and times do not grow better, the republicans will meet another Waterloo. The people vote against results, not causes, and the next president will depend on the condition of the country.

The Flood at Portland.

Tuesday's Oregonian says: The streets were livelier yesterday, and there was actually a greater volume of business than on any day since the first overflow was recorded. The prevailing opinion during the past week has been that the flood must soon reach its full height; but now all hope that the end will come "tomorrow or the next day" has been abandoned, and people are ready to move to their house-tops at a moment's notice. The streets had the appearance of a May morning day. Rafts, floats and plungers, piled high with furniture, merchandise, showcases, boxes, etc., were poled or towed through the streets to the water's edge, where their loads were transferred to drays for transportation to higher ground. The crush of boats at Third and Washington streets was wonderful, and the situation at First and Morrison was scarcely less so. Rowing at those points was out of the question, so boats were poled along or towed by men wading waist deep in the water. Planked street crossings were provided with draws, which could be easily opened by passing boatmen. An elevated crosswalk on Third and Washington is six feet in height, so that boats can easily pass under it, and the necessity of opening the "draw" every time a boat wants to pass is done away with.

The construction of elevated sidewalks, which was discontinued over Sunday, went forward again yesterday with a rush. The situation demanded it, for the flotilla of small boats were unable to handle the crowd awaiting transportation from one point to another in the flooded district. During the fire on the water front it was impossible to rent an entire boat at any price, so great was the rush. Scores of boat carpenters are working almost night and day to fill orders which are continually pouring in from all sides. Small, cheap boats of unseasoned fir are turned out by the score, and are just as much a source of revenue to their owners as those which cost fancy prices. During the past few days the fleet on the river has multiplied threefold. Fish boats and ship boats from down the river command high prices as freighters. It is a novel sight to stand at the corner of Third and Washington streets and see the fleet stationed there. The boatmen jostle and push about, but all good-naturedly. There is business for all, and plenty of it. It may be said now, without exaggeration, that the entire wholesale portion of the city is inundated, and fully seven-eighths of the retail district.

A Quarter Century Test.

For a quarter of a century Dr. King's New Discovery has been tested, and the millions who have received benefit from its use testify to its wonderful curative powers in all diseases of throats, chest and lungs. A remedy that has stood the test so long and that has given so universal satisfaction, is no experiment. Each bottle is positively guaranteed to give relief, or the money will be refunded. It is admitted to be the most reliable for coughs and colds. Trial bottle free at the Hood River Pharmacy. Large size 50c. and $1.

The Australian ballot law further commended itself to the voters at the election Monday, and it has come to stay.

The election in Hood River passed off quietly and a full vote was polled. In West Hood River precinct 227 votes were cast. Only two voters, besides several aged and infirm, required assistance in preparing their ballots. Not a "wholly defective" ballot was cast, but probably ten voters failed to scratch enough names from the eight candidates for representative, and lost their votes for this part of the ticket. It was a mistake to print the ballots with the legislative candidates divided, four at the bottom of the first column and four at the top of the second. Had they all been placed together in the same column there might have been no loss. East Hood River cast 139 votes.

In the following returns from East and West Hood River precincts, republican candidates are printed first, democrats second, populists third and prohibitionists fourth, in regular order:

The Railroad Situation.

The Union Pacific road in Oregon is in a most deplorable condition, and the damage will amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars. At the Cascades reliable reports show the road practically washed out of existence. From the Locks to Bonneville the seething torrents have eaten away the noted sliding mountain until not a vestige of railroad track or wagon road remains. In one place the iron road on the land will exceed a hundred feet, leaving an almost perpendicular cliff nearly 200 feet high. From the Cascades to Hood River the road bed is in good shape now, but there is no telling how long it will remain so. From Hood River to The Dalles many bridges have been carried away bodily. Above The Dalles no reliable information can be had, but all reports show great damage. The outlook now is gloomy enough, and it may be many months before railroad communication with the outer world is re-established.

A Gentleman

Who formerly resided in Connecticut but who now resides in Honolulu, writes: "For 20 years past, my wife and I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor, and we attribute to it the dark hair which she and I now have, while hundreds of our acquaintances, ten or a dozen years younger than we, are either gray-headed, white, or bald. When asked how our hair has retained its color and fullness, we reply, 'By the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor—nothing else.'"

Ayer's Hair Vigor, and very soon, it not only checked any further loss of hair, but produced an entirely new growth, which has remained luxuriant and glossy to this day. I can recommend this preparation to all in need of a genuine hair-restorer. It is all that it is claimed to be.—Antonio Alarrun, Bastrop, Tex.

MIDNIGHT.

Will serve during the season of 1894 at OLINGER & BONES' stables, Hood River Oregon.

DESCRIPTION.

MIDNIGHT is a coal-black Hambletonian, 6 years old, 15 hands high, weight 1400 pounds. Sired by Shaw's Hambletonian; Dam a Copperbottom mare. Midnight is a good dispositioned horse, a Tippy driven and quite a trotter for a horse of his size. Midnight's service fees will be $5 for a single service, to be paid at time of service, or $10 for the season due August 1st following service, or $15 to insure with foal payable April 1, 1895. Insurances cannot be given after first service or other terms. Mares failing to catch on single service may be bred by the season by paying the additional fee. Great care will be taken to prevent accidents, but will not be responsible should they occur. For further information apply to Eph Olinger at the barn of F. C. Brosius, owner.

CARE OF YOUNG COLTS.

This is the time of the year when much loss occurs to the farmers in the loss of young foals. A Canadian horse breeder of much experience says: Carefully watch your colt for the first ten days, and see that its bowels act properly, as the first ten days are the most critical in a foal's existence. If you can get them over the first ten days they usually require very little attention if the mare is fed judiciously. The mare should be fed some two or three weeks before she is due to foal and some time after foal, such as boiled oats, bran and linseed that has been boiled for twelve hours, or longer, so as to loosen the system and provide a generous flow of milk. If from some cause the mare should not have sufficient milk the best substitute is cow's milk, one fourth water and a tablespoonful of honey to a pint of milk. Constiveness, diarrhoea, and inflammation are the principal ailments a young foal is subject to. The two first careful treatment will overcome; the last is, in most fatal. The following are well tried and the best remedies that have come under my notice: Constiveness—Rectal injections of lukewarm water every half hour, or syrup of rhubarb with a few drops linseed oil; dose, tablespoonful. Nothing acts more powerfully than injections, and the advantage is they do no harm. Diarrhoea should not be stopped suddenly; tablespoonful brandy with teaspoonful of tincture of gentian and two tablespoonfuls lime water in a cupful linseed tea every three hours. Inflammation—Apply blanket, thickly folded and wrung out in very hot water, to belly; rub the legs well; give teaspoonful ipecacuanha in two ounces of water. Repeat dose in two hours if necessary.

Hood River Pharmacy's

Directions for Mixing the Acme Compound.

Weigh out ten pounds of the Compound and put it in a barrel or large kettle; then pour on five gallons of boiling water gradually, until the mixture is of the consistency of soft soap—stirring it all the time. After it is thoroughly dissolved add the balance of the water (forty-five gallons), hot or cold—hot preferred. Do not boil the mixture. It is then ready to apply. Be sure and have your kettles or barrel clean (also your spraying tank) and free from other mixtures, in order to avoid clogging your spraying nozzles. Do not spray when the trees are moist. For Codlin Moth use No. 2, and spray immediately after the blossoms drop, then again four weeks after, which will destroy all other insects that may appear. Apply by means of a spray pump or a florist's syringe.

Testimonials.

Corralitos, Cal., March 26, 1894.—Watson, Erwin & Co.: I used one hundred pounds of your Acme No. 1, and it had the desired effect; it not only gets away with the insect but it cleans up the tree and leaves it in a healthy condition. I will guarantee it will do just what it is recommended to do. Yours truly, J. E. MORTIMER.

Niles, March 14, 1894.—I have had six years' experience spraying, and used various washes to quite an extent. For the last two seasons I have used Acme Insecticide, and find it the best wash, and that it gives the best results of any I ever used. It is a very pleasant wash to use, and easily prepared.
