

Hood River Glacier.

HOOD RIVER, OR. JULY, 7, 1894.

THE FINAL RESULT.

The strike that began over the Pullman boycott, a week or ten days ago, has grown to enormous proportions and continues to grow. Already there are 850,000 men idle on account of the strike directly, and that many more indirectly, the latter class being added to so rapidly that it is impossible to estimate from day to day the added numbers. First one industry and then another closes down on account of it. Coal cannot reach the factories, and one after another they are compelled to quit. All over the country the wheels of industry, like those of the cars, are stopped. Cattle trains are tied up and the men employed in the stock yards and slaughter houses are discharged. A meat famine has struck the cities of the East, and those engaged in handling meats are taking a holiday. In California the immense fruit crop is rotting on the trees because it cannot find a market, and those who should be employed in harvesting it are idle. In our own state a similar condition exists. The salmon canneries of The Dalles are tied up for lack of tin. The farmers who have neglected to repair their machinery now find that, with the biggest wheat crop ever grown in Eastern Oregon, their headers are not in running order, and the Portland merchants to whom they look for machine extras, having been equally careless, these cannot be had at any price. Indeed, we are told that it may be possible that the old-fashioned cradle will be resorted to to harvest a portion of the crop. So it goes through all branches, the lack of transportation shutting off one industry which in turn knocks out another, until it is impossible to tell where the end will be. Already the cost of this strike has run into the millions every day, and it grows in arithmetical progression. The injunction issued by the courts may possibly bring the strike to an end; if so it will be fortunate for the country. The strike is a peculiar one, for the companies and their employees have locked horns over a matter that neither are interested in. Our opinion is that the strikers will lose, because the government is in charge of some of the roads. This is going to make trouble, for the companies, already arrogant, will become more so, and the result will be bloodshed. The outcome of the whole affair will be the taking charge of the railroads. Bellamy may be visionary, but the trend of affairs is to exactly those ideas. In ten years, engineers, firemen and railroad employees will be enlisted the same as regular soldiers are now, with provisions made for promotion. This is the only solution possible, for the combinations of labor and neither will give way to the other. Neither is safe with the other a winner, and so the matter cannot be settled.

THE DALLES RAILWAY.

In the shadow of the big strike, the United States senate, David Bennett Hill, the Wilson and McKinley bills, tariff, free trade, and the fact that the Oregon wool grower is left no better off than the Oregon cattle raiser, are all lost sight of, yet they are all on hand. The serial speeches and the mutual admiration, distinguished consideration, and other expressions that are lies under the name of senatorial courtesy, are still banded back and forward across the senate chamber. The eyes of the audience are temporarily diverted, but the five act farce still goes on. During a gentle lull, the other day, his Eminence Whiskers, Dolph, found time, with the aid of Hermann, to hit the telegraph wires and make the grand announcement that the boat railway for The Dalles was under consideration and that something would be done for it in the general appropriation bill; if not now, then some other time in the remote subsequently, when Dolph has another six years ahead of him. The truth is that The Dalles boat railway never will be built, never was intended to be, and is only brought forward as a bid for Eastern Oregon votes in the senatorial election. The canal at the Cascades needs finishing first, and when that is done, the boat railway at The Dalles will be found to be like the fifth wheel to a wagon, of little use. Senator Dolph will be re-elected without a struggle. His constituents will see that he goes back; in fact, he can't help it, for he always goes back on everything.

A Quarter Century Test.

For a quarter of a century Dr. King's New Discovery has been tested, and the millions who have received benefit from its use testify to its wonderful curative powers in all diseases of throats, chest and lungs. A remedy that has stood the test so long and that has given so universal satisfaction, is an experiment. Each bottle is positively guaranteed to give relief, or the money will be refunded. It is admitted to be the most reliable for coughs and colds. Trial bottle free at the Hood River Pharmacy. Large size, 50c. and $1.

PRENDERGAST TO HANG.

After months of foolishness, the Prendergast case has finally come to an end. The jury impaneled to examine into the question of his sanity brought in a verdict declaring him sane Tuesday, and he will be executed next Friday. Sentimentalism ran riot in his case, and every technicality known to the law was evoked to save him from his richly merited death. It really matters little whether he was insane or not; since he was a dangerous beast anyway. The insanity dodge is getting played out, or else is becoming epidemic, so that the juries also become temporarily insane long enough to hang red-handed murderers who are perfectly sane only when the desire to kill some one takes possession of them. A man with the kind of insanity Prendergast and Santo are afflicted with deserve to be hanged first and treated afterwards for the disease. The only mistake in hanging people insane like Prendergast is when they don't hang them.

The senate has passed its alleged tariff reform bill, the democrats all voting for it except Hill, who spoke and voted against it. Hill was right in his vote but wrong in his reasons for it, for the measure he opposed, the income-tax feature, was the only decent thing in it, which probably accounts for Hill objecting to it. Senator Fry, after fighting the bill all the way through, voted for it. The house may or may not be able to agree on some compromise with the senate by which a mongrel bill will be passed, but we do not believe it will. If it does, the young democracy may as well quit, for it will not be within a generation that another democratic victory will be recorded north of Mason and Dixon's line.

In March, 1893, George Sheppard filed suit against Joseph Latourell for alienating the affections of his wife, but the case was not tried until the following December, when the plaintiff got a verdict for $1000. During the interim, however, Latourell sold his farm and stock for $500 to his brother Henry, and thought himself in a position to laugh at Sheppard when the latter got his verdict. Sheppard's attorney at once instituted suit to get the property transfer set aside, on the ground that it was expressly made to defeat the collection of Sheppard's judgment. Thursday, Judge Munly rendered a decision in favor of the plaintiff, thus enabling Sheppard to collect the $1000 damages awarded him in the previous case.

Considerable alarm is felt in the Willamette valley concerning the wheat aphid, which pest has appeared in great numbers. Some farmers think their whole crop will be ruined. In the Waldo Hills a farmer cut some of his infested wheat for hay and found that none of his stock would eat it, green or cured. The presence of the lice is attributed to the long continued cool, showery weather.

Maj. E. McNeill, appointed receiver of the O. R. & N., assumed the duties of his office July 4th. He will vigorously push the work of reopening the line of road destroyed by the flood.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA

M. Hammerly, a well-known business man of Hillsboro, Va., sends this testimony to the merits of Ayer's Sarsaparilla: "Several years ago, I hurt my leg, the injury leaving a sore which led to erysipelas. My sufferings were extreme, my leg from the knee to the ankle, being a solid sore, which began to extend to other parts of the body. After trying various remedies, I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, before I had finished the first bottle, I experienced great relief; the second bottle effected a complete cure."

Sleeping In Gloves.

There is an anecdote of Dr. Russell, the famous war correspondent. The most unenviable position in which he ever found himself was not in battle, but in bed. As the story runs, the correspondent was on the way to India with the Prince of Wales and stopped at the palace in Athens. The king made an appointment with him for an early walk. Dr. Russell narrates: "I went up stairs to bed. I couldn't sleep. The mosquitoes bit me to their hearts' content, particularly about the hands and arms. I happened to have a pair of long white kid gloves in my bag. I got up and put them on. I awoke in the morning with the knowledge of having somebody by my bedside. It was the king, accompanied by his big dog. It was 6:30 I sat up in bed. 'In half an hour, Mr. Russell,' said the king, smiling as he left the room, 'I shall come back for you.' At breakfast that morning, during a moment of silence, the king, addressing the queen, with a sly glance in my direction, said: 'Well, I've met a great many dandies in my time, but Mr. Russell beats them all. He actually sleeps in white kid gloves.'"

How the Sultan's Food Is Prepared.
The food for the sultan of Turkey is cooked by one man and his assistants, and no others touch it. It is cooked in silver vessels, and, when done, each kettle is sealed by a slip of paper and a stamp, and this is broken in the presence of the sultan by the high chamberlain, who takes one spoonful from each separate kettle before the sultan tastes it. This is to guard against poison. The sultan never uses a plate. He rarely uses a knife or fork—a spoon, his bread, a pancake or fingers are far handier. It requires just twice as many slaves as there are courses to serve a dinner to him.—Woman's World.

Railroad English.

Slang expressions generally originate with the railroad men, and a person not versed in slang might listen to a crowd of railroad men talking for an hour without getting the slightest impression of their meaning. Consequently, when an Atchison girl received the following letter from her Apollo, a brakeman, she was somewhat puzzled: "My dear, I pushed the con's face yesterday, and he told the supe, who put me on the carpet and finally put the can to me. I will have to lay over on the hill for 10 days and will be down to see you soon."—Atchison Globe.

The Advantages of Dead Peers.

The emperor of China has ennobled the ancestors of Sir Halcay Macartney for three generations. I congratulate these posthumous noblemen, wherever their disembodied spirits may be. Honor will no doubt be most gratifying to them. The Chinese are more sensible than we are. It is far more reasonable to convert dead men who can do no harm into noblemen than to make unborn descendants of living men into legislators, in which capacity they may do much harm.—London Truth.

Woman's Onward March.

There came a time in the history of my life when I suddenly realized that I can tell a briarwood from a meerschaum while it is being smoked. It was borne in upon me that by years of subtle training I had come to know a "Perfecto" from a "two-for-a-nickel." I dashed down my sinful soul that I, Sappho, the scion of nicotine, was myself a connoisseur of the delicate and difficult art of distinguishing—even from the next room—the varying characteristics of differing kinds of Turkish tobacco. I found, to my amazement, that I knew the perfumed Turkish cigarettes lose their national characteristics coming over land and sea to Boston, and that a Richmond cigarette is more grateful (vicariously) to my nostrils.

Tenaciously I remember the peculiar peanut nuttiness of an old clay pipe and the almond nuttiness of a new Henry Clay cigar, and I can recall to a whiff the experimental odor of a cornucop brimming with rank plug. Yet I never smoked, but once in my life. Then I choked on burning mill-leaves recommended for a cold. It is one of the results of the opening of modern occupations for women that I have become so learned in this way. I don't know, get whether or not I am proud of my wisdom, but it is certain that I have no vicarious amusement more charmingly altruistic than smoking.—A Woman in Boston Transcript.

Children Must Sleep.

There is nothing that little folks need so much or that helps their physical development so largely as plenty of sleep. Until they are 15 years old they should have at least 10 hours of nature's great restorer. An authority on such matters says that they never should be awakened, but allowed to sleep until of their own accord they are ready to get up. School and household duties, however, make such a course impracticable, but if they are put to bed early enough they will be quite ready to rise without calling at a reasonable hour. Bedtime can be made pleasant by the telling of a story or a few especially loving ministrations and caresses that will make this hour a period to be anticipated rather than dreaded.—St. Louis Republic.

Directions for Mixing the Acme Compound.

Weigh out ten pounds of the Compound and put it in a barrel or large kettle; then pour on five gallons of boiling water gradually, until the mixture is of the consistency of soft soap—stirring it all the time. After it is thoroughly dissolved add the balance of the water (forty-five gallons), hot or cold—hot preferred. Do not boil the mixture. It is then ready to apply. Be sure and have your kettles or barrel clean (also your spraying tube) and free from other mixtures, in order to avoid clogging your spraying nozzles. Do not spray when the trees are moist. For Codlin Moth use No. 2, and spray immediately after the blossoms drop, then again four weeks after, which will destroy all other insects that may appear. Apply by means of a spray pump or a florist's syringe.

Testimonials.

Cornalitos, Cal., March 26, 1894.—Watson, Ervin & Co. I used one hundred pounds of your Acme No. 1, and it had the desired effect: it not only gets away with the insect but it cleans up the tree and leaves it in a healthy condition. I will guarantee it will do just what it is recommended to do. Yours truly, J. L. MORTIMER.

Niles, March 14, 1894.—I have had six years' experience spraying, and used various washes to quite an extent. For the last two seasons I have used Acme Insecticide, and find it the best wash, and that it gives the best results of any I ever used. It is a very pleasant wash to use, and easily prepared. Yours truly, JOE TYSON.
