The Butterfly mill, recently purchased from the Oregon Lumber company by Frank Davenport, Claude Copple and others, is being moved down to Antone Wise's place. Had it not been for the storm the foundation would have been finished this week, and the mill, it was expected, would have been in operation by next week.

The Storm.

After an open and pleasant winter up to the 2d of January, Hood River is now experiencing an old-fashioned snow storm. It commenced snowing Wednesday morning about 4 o'clock and continued 36 hours without a break, the snow in this time piling up to the depth of about three feet. At Portland there was a heavy fall of snow and street cars were blocked, but above The Dalles it was not sufficient to cause any delay in the moving of trains. The rotary snow plow kept the road open between The Dalles and Portland Wednesday, and the evening passenger train passed up two hours late at this point. Engineer Tucker, in charge of the engine with the snow plow, died suddenly of heart disease while at work Wednesday evening near Bridal Veil, and this caused delay in keeping the track open. The snow drifted badly in the cuts in the vicinity of Cascade Locks and below to Troutdale. The morning train left Portland at 10 o'clock Thursday, but got stuck in the drifts near Troutdale. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon it started back towards Portland. The snow plow passed up the road Thursday afternoon, and Friday morning the delayed passenger train lying at The Dalles was brought down, 24 hours late, and breakfasted at the Mt. Hood hotel, leaving here for Portland at 8.30.

Station Agent Henn informs us that the railroad company sent out a steamboat from Portland Thursday, with passengers and freight, but the boat was unable to come any further than Dobson's Landing on account of the slush ice in the river. The telegraph wire was not working Friday below Troutdale.

As we go to press (Friday, at 1 o'clock) it is still snowing, but coming more in showers, with occasional streaks of sunshine, indicating that the storm has about spent its force.

Very few people from the country have ventured to town since the storm, and the roads are hardly broken. In town good roads have been made with snow plows and good trails opened in all directions.

Shall We Have a Public Library?

HOOD RIVER, Jan. 3, 1895.—Editor GLACIER: At the suggestion of one of the lodges at this place, there is an effort being made to form a public library. Plans have been matured as follows: Each organization in the valley, whether fraternal, religious or otherwise, is asked and urged to obtain from among its members as many dollars, or in lieu thereof, bound volumes, as there are members in the organization, subject to two exceptions—members not residing in the valley need not be counted, and those persons members of more than one organization may choose the one through which they will contribute, and need not be counted in the others.

Societies thus contributing will have control of the library.
Contributing societies may report their members to the librarian, who will allow them to take books free from the library, under prescribed rules, the organization becoming responsible for the return of the books.
Persons not having access through the different societies may pay the membership fee and deposit one dollar in addition as a guarantee for the return of the books taken. Non-members will have access to the library under certain conditions.

In one way or the other it is desired that every family in town, and indeed of the valley also, become members of the library association and then have free access to the library.

A good public library will not only be a standing advertisement for the place but will be of incalculable benefit to the community itself, and especially to the younger portion. But comparative few persons have access to a library of any size, and books are universally conceded to be the greatest educators of the age. Shall we, then, provide this means of education for the rising generation? The responsibility rests upon each member of the community, and the committee makes an earnest plea that each will do what they can for the library. If all do this, we will have a respectable start toward a well-ordered end. All contributions has been appraised by H. Nickelsen, who respectfully,
CORN. Very

DIED.

At her home in Hood River, Oregon, January 1, 1895, at 11.30 p. m., of paralysis, Mrs. S. A. Buskirk, aged 76 years, 9 months and 28 days. Funeral services were held in the Congregational church January 3d, at 10 a. m.; Rev. J. L. Hirschler officiating.

Sarah Allen Childers was born in Grant county, Kentucky, March 3, 1818. She was united in marriage to William Buskirk July 23, 1840. Eight children, six sons and two daughters, were born to them. She leaves an aged husband and six children to mourn their loss, two sons having preceded her to the spirit world. Two sons and one daughter were with her to administer to her every want in her last sickness. She united with the Baptist Church at the early age of 15, of which church she remained a faithful member through life. She was an affectionate wife, an indulgent mother, a true friend and kind neighbor, loved by all who knew her. Those who knew her best loved her most. She bore her sickness as she did the trials of life, uncomplainingly. She was stricken with paralysis December 23d, and then realized that her life work was done. During her sickness she gave her family and friends bright testimony of her hope beyond the grave, and was anxious to meet her blessed Redeemer in mansions of bliss. Just a short time before her speech left her she grew weary and exclaimed,
"Dear Jesus, how long on earth have I to stay? Roll on the wheels of time and bring the glad-some day."
She also repeated the twenty-third Psalm at 11.30 p. m. She sweetly fell asleep in the arms of Jesus, resting in full hope of meeting her loved one's in Heaven.

A ROYAL DEADBEAT.

How King Milan Filled His Depleted Purse by Shady Methods.

One hundred and sixty thousand dollars per annum is the income conceded to ex-King Milan of Serbia, by his son and by the national treasury in consideration of his quitting the country and betaking himself once more to Paris or some other distant capital. It is now some months since he left the French metropolis to all intents and purposes penniless, numerous judgments out against him and a quantity of so-called debts of honor unpaid. His credit was exhausted and he was, financially speaking, on his beam ends. It may be remembered, says a writer in the Philadelphia Press, that when he first abdicated he stipulated for a large annuity, which was granted to him. On two occasions subsequently he obtained large lump sums from the Serbian army to defray pressing debts. Then he commuted his annuity for a third lump sum of large dimensions, sold his office and dignities in Serbia for a fourth sum, his Serbian citizenship for a fifth and finally obtained from the czar a gift of two million rubles in return for a solemn undertaking never to return to his native land to return to Serbia. It was not very long before he had squandered all his money at the card table, upon the turf and in the demi-monde.

Finding himself without resources, he effected a reconciliation with his wife in the hope of inducing her to come to his assistance, she being very rich. Queen Natalie, however, knows her husband too well and declined to do anything whatever for him until he had eaten humble pie by himself demanding the annulment of that divorce which he had taken so much trouble to obtain, and even then she refused to give him any of her own money, but merely offered to use her influence with her son to grant him a new allowance. Seeing that young Alexander was somewhat slow about complying with the request, and his position at Paris without either money or credit being absolutely untenable, he, in defiance of all the promises which he had made alike to the czar, to the Austrian government and that of Serbia, returned to Belgrade, where his presence brought about a couple of ministerial crises and led to no end of difficulty. And he has refused to budge from there until his financial exigencies are complied with.

I suppose that unless the tired Serbians depute some one to put him out of the way by means of knife, pistol or poison, we shall in course of time see him once more going through the same process. That is to say, he will commute his present income for a lump sum, squander it and then return to Belgrade and upset one or two more ministries, disturbing things generally until again bought off.

KEPT AHEAD OF THE TRAIN.

A Moose Able to Travel at the Rate of Forty Miles an Hour.

The morning express on the Bangor & Aroostook from Houlton had a race with a moose one morning recently, says the Boston Herald. Between Island Falls and Crystal, about thirty miles out of Houlton, the engineer saw a huge moose on the track, watching the approaching train and evidently undetermined whether to derail it or jump off and let it go about its business. The engineer blew a succession of sharp blasts with the whistle, and the moose evidently took for the word and ran. At first he turned, and with the train not more than a dozen rods from him, he started down the track. The train was moving at the rate of forty miles an hour, but the moose flew like the wind and kept his distance. The passengers heard the warning blast of the whistle, and knew that something was on the track, but not until the train reached Crystal station did they learn that they had been racing with a moose.

For a quarter of a mile the big animal kept up the almost incredible pace necessary to keep ahead of the train, and then, as if satisfied that he had convinced his competitor that there wasn't anything in the steam engine line that was coming into Aroostook could outdo him in a sprinting match, he left the track and plunged into the woods without so much as looking behind him.

THEY ARE MEN AT TEN.

Coreas Have But a Short Childhood in Corea.

In Corea the boys are called men as soon as they reach the age of ten. They receive their final names at that age, and assume the garments of full-grown men, all except the horsehair hat, which they cannot put on until they have passed through a period of probation. Permission to wear the horsehair hat is the final act of transforming the small boy into a real, sure-enough man—though he doesn't look it.

Such a short childhood may, at first thought, possess a charm for boys in our colder climate. But it will be quickly understood that making boys into men as soon as they are old enough to feel that they would like to be men is not a wise idea. The Coreans, although possessing a certain degree of a queer kind of civilization, are not a people to be patterned after. In Corea, if a young man's parents are not rich, he can never hope to become so by his own efforts. And, if he is not a member of a noble family he can never hope to reach an exalted position. As for courage the Coreans have never shown much of that. The Corean men are not in themselves a good argument for a brief childhood.

Frogs Are Wonderful.

The toad is a higher animal than the frog, because it gives birth to little air-breathing toads, whereas the frog lays eggs that produce fish-like tadpoles. But the frog in certain respects is the most wonderful creature in the world. Think of a vegetable-eating fish with gills that turns into an air-breathing land animal, developing teeth and becoming a carnivorous quadruped. That is the life history of the frog.

Runaway.

A runaway occurred Saturday afternoon that was quite exciting. Mr. Boardman had started for his home on the East Side with a load of wheat, and when he got opposite Mrs. Oiler's residence, in the eastern part of town, discovered that he had forgotten something and went back to Hanna & Wolfard's store, leaving his team standing in the street. A railroad train crossing the bridge frightened the team and they started to run, turning up the state road. John and W. H. Buskirk were walking along the road, and the team was close upon them before they were aware that it was without a driver. John Buskirk threw up his hands and tried to stop them, but only succeeded in making them shy towards the side of the road, by Grant Evans' house, where the wagon struck a big oak tree. The wagon was wrecked and wheat took a tumble. The horses freed themselves from the broken harness and dashed on, but were soon afterwards caught. John Buskirk managed to save himself by dodging behind the big tree, while his brother jumped the fence into Grant Evans' yard. If the team and wagon had passed between the tree and fence, both men might have been crushed to death, as the team, a powerful one and a heavy wagon, were under full headway. W. H. Buskirk was somewhat bruised in getting over the fence, and as he landed a single-tree from the wreck of the wagon came whizzing near his head. It was a narrow escape. Both men had served through the war of the rebellion, but say they never had a closer call in their lives.

H. C. Bateham of the Columbia nursery announces that any person who has varieties of apples which he is desirous of learning the names of, may be accommodated if he will leave specimens at the nursery, and if they cannot be correctly named here, they will be sent to Washington, D. C., to the national pomologist, free of charge. If those who had specimens in the box sent Nov. 10th, which was lost in the mails, will try again we hope no like accident will occur.

The St. Louis Republic Free.

The "twice-a-week" St. Louis Republic will be sent FREE FOR ONE YEAR to any person sending, before January 31, 1895, a club of three NEW yearly subscribers, with $3 to pay for the same. Already the clans are gathering for the fray in 1896, and 1895 will be full of interesting events. The skirmish lines will be thrown out, the maneuvering done and the plans of campaign arranged for the great contest in '96. The remaining short session of the democratic congress, to be followed shortly by a republican congress with a democrat in the presidential chair will be productive of events of incalculable interest. In fact, more political history will be constructed during 1895 than in any year since the foundation of the government, and a man without a newspaper will be like a useless lum in the movements of public opinion. You can get three subscribers for the Republic by a few minutes' effort. Remember in the Republic subscribers get a paper twice a week for the price of a weekly—only $1 a year. Try it, AT ONCE, and see how easily it can be done. If you wish a package of sample copies, write for them. Cut out this advertisement and send with your order. Address the St. Louis Republic, St. Louis, Mo.

A FRIEND

Speaks through the Boothby (Mo.) Register, of the beneficial results he has received from a regular use of Ayer's Pills. He says: "I was feeling sick and tired and my stomach seemed all out of order. I tried a number of remedies, but none seemed to give me relief until I was induced to try the old reliable Ayer's Pills. I have taken only one box, but I feel like a new man. I think they are the most pleasant and easy to take of anything I ever used, being so finely sugar-coated that even a child will take them. I urge upon all who are in need of a laxative to try Ayer's Pills. They will do good." For all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels, take
