

Hood River Glacier.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1895.

The situation at Salem remains unchanged; Mr. Dolph receiving 42 votes, the balance of the republicans vote scattering, and democrats and populists vote for men of their own parties.

Two patients in Good Samaritan hospital in Portland are being experimented upon with the new germ theory for cancer. The doctors in charge sent to New York for germs of crystals. These germs will, it is conjectured, counteract the effects of the cancer germ. So far the results have been highly satisfactory and the patients are on the road to recovery.

The Dalles Chronicle suggests the name of our fellow townsman, Hon. E. L. Smith, for the consideration of our legislators as an available candidate for United States senator. We rise to second the nomination. It is plain enough that Mr. Dolph cannot be re-elected, and it is time for his supporters to be casting about for a man they can support and who will draw votes from the bolters. Mr. Smith is in accord with Mr. Dolph on the financial question and with his party on the tariff question, and is known throughout the state as a friend to an open river, with no affiliation with corporations or monopolies. His election would be a just tribute to Eastern Oregon. While speaker of the house of representatives in the Oregon legislature, six years ago, Mr. Smith voted for the memorial to congress asking that senators be elected by a direct vote of the people. His election would give us, with Senator Mitchell's, two votes in the senate on giving the people the right to choose their senators, a question that should be uppermost in the minds of the people of Oregon just at this time, when a legislature selected to elect a certain man cannot succeed in electing any one.

G. A. R. and W. R. C. Entertainment.

EDITOR GLACIER: Among the many entertainments given of late in our city, the one in connection with the installation of officers of the G. A. R. and W. R. C., on the 25th inst., is well worthy of mention. The programme and banquet were under the special direction of the W. R. C., which is reason sufficient to insure its success and met the approval of those present. Music was rendered by Miss Anne Smith as organist, assisted by Mrs. Georgia Rand, Miss Callison, Mrs. Woodward, and Messrs. Watt, LaFrance, Rand, Husbands and Nickelsen. Solos, duets and quartets were rendered in a spirited and acceptable manner. Mrs. Woodward recited "Barbara Fritchie," and after repeated encore, favored the audience with the same in broken German.

The following officers for Canby post, No. 16, G. A. R., were installed for the ensuing year by Post Commander A. S. Blowers: C. J. Hayes, commander; Thomas McDonald, senior vice commander; Joseph Frazier, senior vice commander; L. Henry, quartermaster; J. H. Dukes, surgeon; W. H. Perry, chaplain; M. B. Potter, officer of the day; D. G. Hill, officer of the guard; A. S. Blowers, adjutant.

After the installation of these officers the W. R. C. installed their officers elect; Mrs. Dr. Brosius presiding as installing officer. It is but a merited honor when we say the lady performed her part admirably, as did the others. A number of the old soldiers were heard to say, "They beat us," while one affirmed, "They always do."

The banquet was served at the Langille house, and some eighty old soldiers, W. R. C. and friends were made glad by the good things provided. May all live to enjoy many such occasions.

The Grand Army and Relief Corps are starting out with good prospects, and we hope it may be the best year of our organization, new members added and old ones revived, and a new impetus be given to the grand work of perpetuating the memory of what the contest has cost us as well as what it has secured for us. FIDELITER.

The Dishonest Commission Men.

The GLACIER is indebted to Mr. Peter Cordes for a copy of the San Francisco Call which tells of the establishment in Chicago of a depot for the sale of California fruit and wine. The gentlemen engaged in this enterprise are large fruit growers in California who hope to overcome the difficulties under which the fruit growers of that state have labored to secure a liberal market for their fruit and an adequate return for the same. One of them, in discussing the fruit swindlers of the East, said:

"I knew a grower who sent a lot of plums to Chicago for which returns were made to him at the rate of 55 cents a box. He subsequently learned from authoritative sources that his lot of fruit had in reality been sold for $1.25 a box. The scheme which the commission men had worked in this instance is the same that is practiced in almost all other cases. It was a simple process, and necessitated only the selection of the poorest fruit in the lot, selling it for what it would bring and making returns to the grower upon that basis. The good fruit which was retained was placed in cold storage and disposed of as the market would justify and at approximately high figures."

"I know myself," said another gentleman, "that California fruit doesn't get a fair show in the Chicago market. I recollect one trip I made to that city, during which I, as usual, visited the auction rooms. The auctioneer would put up a batch of California fruit, and with but little preliminary work knock it down to an invisible purchaser. Subsequently I learned that it was the custom of certain private fruit auctioneers who did not receive products from our state for sale on commission to drop into these commission houses and bid in the fruits privately, then, taking them to their own establishments, sell them over again at auction. Here we have an instance of two middle-men receiving a profit, all of which, of course, comes out of the producer's pocket."

The Parasitic Fungus.

Special Government Agent Price has given out the following information in reference to the parasitic fungus prevalent on apple trees from Central California to Middle Oregon and north to British Columbia on the west side of the Cascade mountains:

Recent investigations, conducted at this laboratory, following those made in Oregon and Washington, have disclosed the fact that the apple disease prevalent throughout the western portion of these states, and which affects the trunk and branches around the apple trees, is largely due to an action of a parasitic fungus, the life history of which is now being studied. The department recommends that the diseased trees be thoroughly sprayed with Bordeaux mixture, special care being taken to treat frequently those parts affected the preceding season. The treatment should invariably be preventive and not curative. The Bordeaux mixture is best adapted for use during the rainy season, and is made with 10 pounds of lime and 6 pounds of copper sulphate to 45 gallons of water.

All persons knowing themselves to be in possession of a copy of "Triumph Song No. 3," belonging to the Congregational church, are kindly requested to bring them in, as the purchase of a few more copies is contemplated. By vote of the church, Jan. 23, 1895.

A Warning to Cows.

As a warning to careless cows who may read this paper or hear of it from somebody else, and also as a pointer to those who employ cow help about their establishments, I relate the following story for publication:

About a week ago I was returning home in the evening and stopped to warm my feet at the great blazing fire in the fire-place of a neighbor. After a lull in the conversation I whipped out a copy of the GLACIER (which I usually carry in my pocket to ward off sporadic diseases) and began to read aloud some of the items from the old home. I soon came to the notice about Charley Rogers' cow having lost a portion of her tongue.

As soon as I had finished reading the story, an elderly lady of the old school, who had been intently listening to all the reading, quickly turned out the remaining ash of a finished pipe of tobacco with that deliberate and characteristic tap on the jam which has its own voice so definite that those familiar can recognize it anywhere without the accompaniment of sight, and thus unloosed her tongue:

"Just listen to me now, will you? When I wuz a little gyurl about so high (holding her hand about three feet from the floor) my poppy had a black cow. Her right name wuz Betts, but us children called her 'Nigger' cause she wuz so black. I don't think any critter could be a bin blacker. She took the holler horn one time and pawsed her horns off. After that she most generally went by the name of 'old Sawd Horns,' and we called her by that name all the time. She wuz the best cow that ever lived, I reckon. Bless my life, I believe a baby could ov laid down between her feet without any danger whatever. Us children could jest go up and rub and pat her anywhere, and she'd stand perfectly still like she liked it. And for milk, you could jest set one of these big wood buckets under her and milk 't briff full, and 'twould run over. And siew milk, too; we don't get any sich nowadays. But we had to kill her at last, and I tell ye, it mighty nigh broke us all up. It seems like one can't have anything real good without it has to be taken away from us jest when we seem to need it most. I reckon it must be all right, though, or 'twouldn't be so. Well, I'm going to tell you a story about that cow. One morning Jerusha (she was my sister) went out to milk her, and almost before I can tell it she ran back, and I'll declare to goodness I thought her eyes were about to bust outen ther sockets. 'Come quick,' she said, like she wuz frightened near to death. We follered her out, on the run, and bless my life, I never saw a mortal human that looked so much like they'd lost all their friends as that cow. I never seed a person look so woe begone and sad as that critter did. 'What upon this round earth is the matter?' we nearly all exclaimed at once. We tried to see if she would eat, and fixed up every kind of a tempting mixture we could think ov, but it weren't any use. She jest stood there and moved her mouth round occasionally and looked like she was ready to cry all the time.

"Poppy came out, and after watching her a few moments, he pulled her mouth open, and O my! about this much ov her tongue had been cut off jest as slick as if it had been cut with a sharp knife." As the woman made the last remark she placed one hand across the center of the other to indicate how large a slice of the tongue had been clipped off, remarking as she did: "It must ov bin fully three or four inches."

Continuing her story, she said: "All day long we wondered and wondered who could have been so mean as to cut off the cow's tongue. In the evening one of the boys went in the log stable to feed the horses and found the piece of tongue jest below the feed trough. Looking above the trough in a crack between the logs he found some fresh dried blood. When he told us we all went out to see it. We could then understand it all and how it happened. We had a wicked biting horse that was always trying to bite every person and everything that came about him when he was eating. We had often seen the cow reaching her tongue through the crack to try to get some of the hay and corn that was fed to the horse. So this whole matter wuz plain to us then. The cow had been trying to get the horse's feed, and he had grabbed her tongue in his vicious way and clinched it tight, and as she must have pulled back with all her might, ov course the piece of tongue had to come off. We never could get the cow to eat any more. She kept dwindling away and going down until poppy killed her to get her out ov her misery."

Meeting of Northwest Fruit Growers.

The Northwest Fruit Growing Association and the Oregon State Horticultural Society will hold their annual meeting at the city of Portland, commencing Wednesday, February 6, 1895.

The Northern Pacific, the Oregon Railway and Navigation Co. and the Great Northern have agreed for a full fare going and one-fifth returning. Tickets must be purchased within three days of the time of holding the convention. To obtain the reduced rate on return the purchaser must obtain from the agent a certificate that he purchased such ticket for the purpose of attending said convention. He must also receive a certificate from the secretary of said convention that he attended the same. On presenting these certificates to the agents of these roads at Portland he will receive his return ticket for one-fifth of the regular fare. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance from all parts of the northwest, also that there will be every effort made to secure a good display of the fruits of our region. To this all are asked to contribute.

The intention is to organize and harmonize the fruit-growing interests of the entire northwest—Idaho, Washington, Oregon and British Columbia—in the best manner and invite full discussion of all questions involved. The meeting will be made valuable and instructive by practical discussion of many topics involved in horticulture, and the advantages of every section of this broad northwest will be explained by representative men present.

It was hoped to secure the presence of the American Pomological Society in full force, but while disappointed in this, we yet have assurance from Mr. Brackett, the secretary, and other distinguished pomologists from the East, that they will remain on this coast and intend to be present at our convention to read valuable papers and take part in our discussions. The fruit growers of the northwest will be here in great numbers and are abundantly able to lend interest to the discussion of all questions that will come before them. S. A. CLARKE, Sec'y N. W. F. G. Ass'n.

Senator Raley's Eastern Oregon insane asylum bill carries an appropriation of $140,000, which is theoretically the same $140,000 left out of the original appropriation made last session, of $165,000 after the $25,000 for the land has been taken out. It does away with the building commission as contemplated in the original act, and puts the work in the hands of the governor, secretary of state and state treasurer, as the asylum board.
