

Hood River Glacier.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1895.

As we go to press (Friday noon) there has been no election of a senator at Salem. On Thursday's ballot Speaker Moore and Senator Hobson abandoned Delph and voted for Williams. This would indicate that Williams may be elected today, the last of the session. Judge Williams is probably the ablest man in the republican party of Oregon. He will be 72 years old the 23rd of next month. He was elected a district judge in Iowa in 1847. In 1853 he was appointed by President Pierce chief justice of Oregon territory. In 1864 he was elected by the union party U. S. senator from Oregon. He soon became a leader of the republicans in congress and was the author of the reconstruction measures that passed that body over the veto of President Johnson. After his term in the senate he was appointed one of the high joint commission to settle the Alabama claims and other disputed questions. In 1871 he was made attorney general in Grant's cabinet. In 1873 he was nominated by President Grant for chief justice of the supreme court of the United States. His partisanship in congress after leaving the democratic party made him many bitter enemies in his old party. Col. Nesmith was then representing Oregon in the lower house. He had served in the senate with Williams as a war democrat, but returned to his first love after the war. Nesmith had many friends among the senators and he used his influence among them to defeat Judge Williams' confirmation. Williams' stylish wife was at that time too frequently seen on the streets in a government landau, and Nesmith managed to have Williams dubbed "Landau" Williams. The opposition to his confirmation became so strong that Gen. Grant withdrew his name before a vote was taken. In 1875, Mr. Williams resigned as attorney general and has since been engaged in the practice of law in Portland. If elected he will soon become a leader again of his party in congress.

At the city election in Philadelphia, Tuesday, C. F. Warwick, the republican candidate for mayor, was elected over ex-Governor Pattison by 60,000 majority. This shoves Governor Pattison as a presidential possibility. He was twice elected governor of the strong republican state of Pennsylvania, and if he could have been elected mayor of the republican city of Philadelphia it might have started his boom for the presidential nominations next year on the democratic ticket.

Manufactures Needed.

HOOD RIVER, Feb. 18, 1895.—Editor GLACIER: For several reasons we should encourage manufactures here at Hood River. We have the water power and natural facilities hundreds of places have not which carry on manufactures.

A cannery would be of great benefit to Hood River. We raise strawberries quite extensively, and can raise tomatoes, corn, beans, pease, cabbage, cucumbers, squash, etc., to perfection. In the line of canned goods we could put them up here and save the freight on the same and derive a benefit direct, while as it is now we send our money away and never get it back. It goes to build up some Eastern manufacturer. If we had a cannery here we could keep our money at home, which would benefit all and build up home institutions. And we will never prosper until we foster home industries.

The time has come when the farmer must diversify his crops and he must dispose of them at prices that will justify raising them. Fruit being our principal industry, there is always a portion of the apple crop that can not be put upon the market on account of being bruised, small or ill shaped. They could be worked up into cider or vinegar, so that the grower could realize something out of them. If we had a cannery, there would be a large amount of products raised here which are not now raised nor never will be until we have a cannery. As to our fruits, large and small, they are not to be excelled in quality anywhere. We could put upon the market a class of canned goods for which we would have no fear of competition. Let us all unite and put forth an effort to procure a cannery here in the near future.

FRUIT GROWER.

A Handsome Publication.

We are indebted to Capt. Coe for a copy of the Great Northern Bulletin, a publication of 32 pages issued by the Great Northern and O. R. & N. Co. On the front page is an illustration of two apples from the orchards of M. V. Rand of Hood River. From an article on Hood River, in which is illustrated our famous Clarke's seedling strawberry, we take the following:

This river has its source at the base of Mt. Hood, and runs through a valley 18 miles long and 8 to 10 in width. Fruit raising has come to be an important industry. Hood River apples, peaches and berries have a wide reputation. Strawberries attain remarkable size. The town of Hood River overlooks the Columbia and is already notable as a health and pleasure resort. Those mountain monarchs, Hood to the south and Adams to the north, covered with perpetual snow, loom up in full view from the town. It is 64 miles from Portland, and is reached from the East via the Great Northern to Spokane, and the O. R. & N. along the Columbia river. Among the leading fruit raisers of Hood River are the following:

J. H. Shoemaker, W. A. Slingerland, W. P. Watson, John Gibbons, P. D. Hinrichs, J. S. Tendick, T. Chandler, N. J. McCoy, W. J. Baker, H. F. Davidson, J. P. Watson, Wm. Davidson, Charles Chandler, P. G. Barrett and Harrison Bros.

F. C. Smith, Australian commissioner to the world's fair, visited Hood River while on the Pacific coast, and in a letter to the Australasian said: "At Hood River I saw and tasted the finest looking and best flavored apples I think I ever have seen."

The Chinook Wind.

When the earliest explorers and trappers came into the Pacific northwest nearly a century ago they were impressed with the wonderful power of the chinook wind to cut down the deep snow banks of winter. When they made inquiry of the interior Indians respecting this strong and singing breeze, the natives pointed to the southwest and answered "chinook." A populous tribe of Indians along the lower Columbia bore this name, and the interior Indians meant that the breeze blew out of the Chinook country. The native races are passing away, and scores of tribes then peopling the great wilderness have vanished as a wisp of smoke that curls into the summer air, but the chinook wind remains one of the distinct features of the land. The pioneers learned to welcome it as the children welcome the first flowers of spring. There is always joy in the land when the chinook blows off the salt ocean and finds its steady way to the plateaus and highlands through the deep gorge of the mighty Columbia. —Kilckit Agriculturalist.

At the Cascade Locks there are two bands, one composed of brass and the other of string instruments. The members practice nearly every evening. What a terror life must be in that town. —Welcome.

Frederick Douglass, the well-known ex-slave and colored orator, died at his home near Washington, Wednesday, of heart disease, aged 78. Some enthusiastic republicans claim that a democrat can't read, but according to recent advices from Delaware, this malady is contagious and has finally worked its way into the G. O. P. That state not long ago inaugurated a governor who can neither read nor write. For the first time in the history of the state there was no inaugural address, and this set people thinking. Joshua Marvil was the republican candidate last fall and was elected. He is a business man of good repute, and worth at least $150,000; which he made by hard work and shrewd investments. Marvil can sign his name, and, knowing his weakness, he secured the services of N. P. Smithers, a leading lawyer, as secretary of state, and Smithers will virtually be the governor. This is the first time on record where a governor can neither read nor write. Delaware of course is a small state, but it certainly could spare up better gubernatorial timber than this. —Antelope Herald.

From parties who visited the locks yesterday we learn that the work there is being pushed very fast, and any one who has kept any watch of the progress of the work is convinced that if the contractors are not hampered in any way, that boats will pass through the canal before Christmas, and if the high water is not of long duration, probably in November. The gates are being put in place, and a large force of men are employed at that work. —Chronicle.

To Establish Quarantine Stations.

In a few days more the governor will appoint three commissioners on the state board of horticulture, as the terms of that number of the board will soon expire. As soon as the appointments are made the commissioners will call a meeting and elect officers and make new rules and regulations. The new law gives this board greater powers than heretofore possessed, and much more effective work may be expected.

The commissioners will also, as they have received the power, establish quarantine stations. These stations will be placed at every port of entry in the state and also at every point where a railroad enters. They will also be a quarantine station at Portland. This will be the headquarters, and the officers in charge will direct the movements and send orders to the various branch quarantine stations in the city.

These stations will consist of large wooden sheds in which the plants that have been imported and which are suspected of being covered with contagious diseases can be thoroughly disinfected and fumigated. To establish and maintain these quarantine stations will cost considerable amount of money, and this is what the commissioners are not well supplied with. The new bill, which asked for an appropriation of $12,000, was amended so as to reduce the appropriation to $9,000. The old bill appropriated to the state board of horticulture but $6,000. The $9,000, it is expected, will scarcely meet the requirements of the board, as it was supposed to cover all expenditures as well as the salaries of the commissioners for two years. —Portland Sun.

Don't Stop Tobacco.

The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected, impairing health, comfort and happiness. To quit suddenly is too severe a shock to the system, as tobacco, to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. Baco-Curo is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit, in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure, purely vegetable and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want, while taking Baco-Curo, it will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to permanently cure any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent interest. Baco-Curo is not a substitute, but a scientific cure, that cures without the aid of will power and with no inconvenience. It leaves the system as pure and free from nicotine as the day you took your first chew or smoke. Sold by all druggists, with our ironclad guarantee, at $1 per box, three boxes (thirty days treatment), $2.50, or sent direct upon receipt of price. Send six two-cent stamps for sample box. Booklet and proofs free. Eureka Chemical & Manufacturing Chemists, La Crosse, Wisconsin.

Hood River Library Association.

The following laws and regulations of the Hood River Library Association were adopted by the board of control at their meeting February 18, 1895:

MEMBERSHIP.

ARTICLE I.—Any person may become a member of the above named association upon the payment of one dollar, or contributing a bound volume of not less than one dollar in value.

GOVERNMENT.

ART. II.—The business management of the association shall be confided to the representatives of the fraternal, religious and charitable organizations of Hood River valley who have complied with the following conditions of membership, namely: Any of the above named organizations who shall contribute books or money corresponding to their total resident membership, over the age of 21 years, shall be entitled to one member of the joint board of control of this association for the term of one year; provided, that in computing the membership of any such society there shall be deducted therefrom any who may have paid membership fees in any other organization.

TERM OF REPRESENTATION.

ART. III.—The board of joint control, as above indicated, shall have control for the calendar year for which they have been elected and until their successors are elected and qualified; provided, that no society shall be entitled to representation for a longer period than which it has complied with the foregoing terms of membership.

POWERS OF BOARD.

ART. IV.—The board of control shall have entire charge of the business affairs of the library association, shall appoint a librarian, fix his compensation, devise ways and means for raising revenues to defray current expenses, and appoint such committees as they may deem proper to promote the best interests of the association. Whenever three or more societies have elected representatives, they shall effect a formal organization by the election of a chairman, treasurer, secretary and librarian.

MEETINGS.

ART. V.—The board of control shall hold meetings on the first Wednesday of each and every month, and at the last meeting of the year shall submit a report embodying their transactions for the term, which shall be placed on file for the benefit of their successors.

VACANCIES.

ART. VI.—Vacancies in the board shall be filled by the organization entitled to such representation.

LIBRARIAN.

ART. VII.—The librarian shall keep a register of all volumes in the library, describing titles and numbers and from what source received. He shall also keep a record of all books taken from the library, with date of withdrawal and return, and shall comply with all other regulations adopted by the board of control or library committee of such board.

LIBRARY REGULATIONS.

ART. VIII.—Any member failing to return a book within two weeks from date of withdrawal shall pay a fine of 10 cents, and upon failure to return such book within one month shall be liable to forfeiture of membership; provided the society of which he is a contributing member shall be responsible for any book he shall fail to return.

All fines received from such delinquencies shall constitute a portion of current expense fund.

PURCHASE OF BOOKS.

ART. IX.—Purchases of books may be made by the board or by the library committee appointed by them, and such board or committee shall have power to reject any volume contributed of doubtful morality.

NON-MEMBERS.

ART. X.—Any person not a member of the association may take books from the library subject to like conditions, as to term he may retain the same, as are members; provided he shall deposit a sum of money with the librarian equal to the value of the volume taken; and provided further, that he shall pay the sum of 10 cents for the use of such book.

AMENDMENTS.

ART. XI.—These regulations may be amended at any regular meeting by a vote of not less than three-fourths of the board of control.

Anecdote of Lincoln.

Secretary Herbert, in a speech recently before the Scotch-Irish society at Philadelphia, related the following anecdote of Lincoln:

I heard recently an anecdote which I don't remember to have seen in print. It is attributed to Senator Henderson. Very early in the civil war, extremists began to urge President Lincoln to issue a proclamation to abolish slavery. Mr. Lincoln was slow in making up his mind. While the matter was under consideration, the present ex-Senator Henderson went to see the president at the White House just as Mr. Sumner was leaving. Mr. Lincoln said: "Henderson, did you meet Sumner out there at the door?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, that man comes here once a day. There are three of them who have entered into a combination to compel me to issue a proclamation emancipating the slaves. They want it done now, whether I think the time has come or not. Ben Wade comes early in the morning, Sumner comes at noon and Thad Stevens comes at night. I've got so I hate the sight of them. Every time I lay my eyes on one of them, I think about the boy who was put to reading the Bible at school, and got stupid when he came to the names of the three men who walked through the fiery furnace. He read along glibly enough until he came to those names; then he halted. The teacher scolded him, but it was of no use. He trounced him and still the boy could not get out the names. Then the teacher shouted: 'Shadrach, Meshkem and Abednego, you dunce; skip them and go along.' And the boy read along very smoothly for a page and then all at once broke out crying. 'What's the matter?' said the teacher, and the boy blubbered out: 'Here comes them infernal three fellers again.'"

"Do you know," said the Cheerful Idiot, "that it is the easiest thing in the world to tell whether a man is going out on a journey or returning by the way he carries his valise?" "I never thought of that," said the younger boarder. "What is the difference?" The Cheerful Idiot settled himself a little firmer in his chair and gloated a moment before answering. "It is just this way," he went on, "when a man is going away he carries his valise toward the railroad station, and when he is coming back he carries it in the other direction."—Public Opinion, Chambersburg.
