

ON CRUSOE'S ISLAND.

TERRIBLE SUFFERING OF CREW OF THE BURNED SHIP PARTHIA.

One Steals Fresh Water, Leaves Out Plug and Finally Dies From Drinking Brine, States. On Oct. 19 a Chilean man-of Saved by Governor de Rod-Strange Coincidence of Fate.

The three masted ship Parthia of Bath, Me., sailed from Liverpool for San Francisco with a cargo of 3,400 tons of coal on June 25.

On her last trip Captain Charles G. Carter, a down east shipmaster, took charge of the Parthia, sailing with a cargo of American wheat for Liverpool.

When the ship was about 1,000 miles ont on the north Atlantic on the voyage to San Francisco, a carrier pigeon, hungry and nearly exhausted, flew into the rigging. The bird was caught and fed by the sailors. The pigeon bore no message, but around one leg was a silver ring.

It was thought by the seamen that the pigeon would bring good luck to the Parthia. The crew christened the bird Mike, and it became a favorite.

The coming of the pigeon was the only incident to break the monotony of the long voyage around the Horn until the noon of Sept. 27, when a sailor discovered smoke coming out of the after hold, near the mizzenmast. - The ship was then 450 miles west of Chile.

Captain Carter said at once it must be a case of spontaneous combustion in the coal, the beginning of so many fires that have destroyed great ships. The crew couldn't get at the blaze, for if they opened the hatches, the flames would burst forth and every opening would be a volcano.

Captain Carter called all hands aft. There were 27 men. He told them their only hope lay in taking to the boats. Three were at once provisioned and equipped with sails and nautical instruments. Plenty of fresh water was stowed aboard. It was determined to stand by the ship as long as possible, and she was steered toward the land.

The next day the smoke, heat and gas had become almost overpowering. The cabins were too hot to stay in. Nothing could be done inside the ship, and the water in the butts was so hot that it had to be cooled before drinking.

A strong gale had sprung out of the northwest and blew with fury for two days. On the second day of the storm the whole ship became so uncomfortable and unsafe that Captain Carter gave the command for all hands to take to the boats at 6 p. m. The doomed Parthia was then 400 miles from the Chilean const.

Captain Carter and eight men took the longboat. Chief Mate Nicolson and eight men had the second, and Second Mate R. A. Crocker and eight sailors the third.

the governor's treatment of the Parthia's distressed seamen. Governor de Rod, Captain Carter says, has for years befriended from 30 to 35 shipwrecked American seamen a season, and has never received the slightest recognition from the government of the United war put in from Valparaiso to inquire after Captain Carter and the men. The commander brought a tale of suffering from Second Mate Crocker's boatload of sailors more thrilling than that of the others. Mate Crocker had become scared during the first blow after leaving the Parthia, and had steered due east for the Chilean coast. The water in the cask got low, and his men were put on short allowance. There was plenty of salt pork, but they could not eat it without drink. On the sixth day out David Jones, a Welsh seaman, who could not speak English, thinking nobody was looking, stole a long drink out of the cask. He forgot to put back the plug, and all the water ran out of the cask. Next day the nine men had not a drop of water to drink. The lad confessed, and the sailors were for cutting his throat and throwing him overboard, but Mate Crocker told them Jones should stay in the boat as long as he did.

For seven days the boat went with-ut water, and the sufferings of the out men were frightful. Again and again they attempted to take up the salt water, but Mate Crocker restrained them. On the sixth day after the water was exhausted Jones leaned over the side and took a long, deep draft of sea water. He fell into the bottom of the boat in a terrible paroxysm and died after five hours of suffering. They threw him overboard then, fate having worked the punishment they had in mind to inflict.

That same day, 60 miles from Valparaiso, the boat enconntered the steel hull of the burned coal ship Garfield. They recognized her, for the Garfield had loaded with coal for Valparaiso at the next pier in Liverpool and had sailed at the same time.

It was a coincidence of fate. The Garfield had been deserted for the same reason as the Parthia on Oct. 9.

Mate Crocker boarded the hull in search of water, but the butts had burned out of the steel shell. Next day the boat reached Valparaiso, and a war vessel was sent after the other boats.

The American consul sent the men north, and they have just landed in New York and related the above story of their adventures.-New York World.

BATTLE OF KING'S MOUNTAIN. A Notable Contest That Was Fought In the Revolutionary War.

Two or three days later word was brought to Ferguson that the Backwater men had come over the mountains; that the Indian fighters of the frontier, leaving unguarded their homes on the western waters, had crossed by wooded and precipitons defiles to the help of the beaten men of the plains. Ferguson at once fell back, sending out messengers for help. When he came to King's mountain, a wooded, hogback hill on the border line between North and South Carolina, he camped on its top, deeming that there he was safe, for he supposed that before the backwoodsmen could come near enough to attack him help would reach him. But the backwoods leaders felt as keenly as he the need of haste, and choosing out their picked men-the best warriors of the force and the best mounted and armed -they made a long forced march to assail Ferguson before help could come to him. All night long they rode the dim forest trails and splashed across the fords of the rushing rivers. All the next day, the 6th of October, they rode, too, until in mid afternoon they came in sight of King's mountain.

The little armies were about equal in numbers. Ferguson's regulars were armed with the bayonet, and so were some of his Tory militia, whereas the Americans had not a bayonet among them, but they were picked men, confident in their skill with the rifle, and they were so sure of victory that their aim was not only to defeat the British. but to capture their whole force! The backwoods colonels, connseling together as they rode at the head of the column, decided to surround the mountains and assail it on all sides. Accordingly the bands of frontiersmen split one from the other and soon encircled the craggy hill where Ferguson's forces were encamped. They left their horses in the rear and immediately began the battle, swarming forward on foot, their commanders leading the attack.

The march had been so quick and the attack so sudden that Ferguson barely had time to marshal his men before the assault was made. Most of his militia he scattered around the top of the hill to fire down, at the Americans as they came up, while drawing up his regulars and a few picked militia he charged in person with the bayonet, first down one side of the mountain and then down the other. Sevier, Shelby, Campbell and the other colonels of the frontiersmen led each his force of riflemen straight toward the summit. Each body in turn when charged by the regulars was forced to give way, for they had no bayonets. wherewith to meet their foes, but the backwoodsmen retreated only so long as the charge lasted, and the minute that it stopped they stopped, too, and came back ever closer to the fidge and ever with a deadlier fire. Ferguson, blowing a silver whistle as a signal to his men. led these charges, sword in hand, on horseback. At last, just as he was once again rallying his men, the riflemen of Sevier and Shelby crowned the top of the ridge. The gallant British commander became a fair target for the backwoodsmen, and, as for the last time he led his men against them, seven bullets entered his body, and he fell dead. With his fall resistance ceased. The regulars and Tories huddled together in a confused mass, while the exultant Americans rushed forward. A flag of truce was hoisted, and all the British who were not dead surrendered.-"Hero Tales From American History," by Tobacco Manufacturers Losing Ten Millions a Year.

Great Excitement in St. Louis-No Pos sibility of Preventing Still Greater Loss in '96.

Sr. Louis, Feb. 3.-(Special.)-Colonel William Kirchoff, General Western Man-ager of the American Tobacco Company, has been a user of tobacco all his life, and for years has smoked as many as twenty cigars daily. After using a few boxes of No-To-Bac, the desire for tocacco is completely gone, and he is wonderfully im-proved in health. His cure is attracting a great deal of attention and comment and many prominent St. Louis business men are following his example. People are just waking up to the fact that the continued use of tobacco is very injurious.

waking up to the fact that the continued use of tobacco is very injurious. An interview with Mr. H. L. Kramer, the originator of No-To-Bas, develops the fact that within three years it has reached an enormous sale, almost entirely upon merit alone. Over one-million boxes of No-To-Bac have been sold, and 800,000 to-bacco users cured. At the present rate No-bacco users cured. At the present rate No-bacco det in '96 from 200,000 to 300,500, and as Mr. Kramer says, "it is al-ways the worst cases that want a cure; those who have chewed and smoked from those who have chewed and smoked from those who have chewed and smoked from boyhood—some of them thirty, forty and fifty years, and we even have records of cures after sixty years of tobacco using. So, you can see that, if they are spending an average of $50 a year (this is a small amount), the cure of 200,000 tobacco users in '96 would result in the loss of the sale of tobacco amounting to over $10,000 000 tobacco amounting to over $10,000,000 which will be saved to the cured " which will be saved to the cured " No-To Bac is truly a medical wonder, for it not only destroys the desire for tobacco, but invigorates the nervous system and marvelously increases weight and strength. Marverously increases weight and strength. Like all great successes, No-To-Bao has many imitations and substitutes, and the public should be warned against, them. All night the crew, loyal to their ship, stood by to see the last incident in her brief, awful history. One hour after quitting the Parthia flames burst through the decks, the force of expanding gas hurling the hatches skyward with a succession of booms.

The pine spars and hempen lines were food for the flames, which crackled from shronds to yards. The ocean was lighted up for miles about, and the heat was so intense that the three boat crews had to pull far away.

Circling round and round the blazing ship all night was Mike. The pigeon appeared fascinated by the fire, and tried repeatedly to light on the spars. Captain Carter believes Mike finally became a victim to the flames. With a splurge and a prolonged hiss the Parthia sank into the Pacific, leaving only a few sputtering, charred embers tossing on the waves.

On account of the direction of the wind Captain Carter deemed it best to sail with it for Juan Fernandez, Robinson Crusce's island, 400 miles to the northward. The gale blew worse than ever, and the sky was black. Captain Carter lost sight of the other two boats between 2 and 8 p. m. next day, and did not sight them again.

The sailors had constantly to bail the longboat, and their belongings, except bec Knights was unexpected, the comfood, water, clothing and instruments, were thrown into the sea.

After a hall of days and another storm of 24 hours, the captain's longboat landed at Juan Fernandez Oct. 9, after eight days of exposure. The boat with the first mute and eight more sailors arrived at the island the day after.

Without the Fatal Gift of Beauty. A curious confession was overheard in a Market street car recently. Two young men were engaged in a friendly conversation, when one said :

"Well, old man, you have seen my wife. Now tell me what you think of her.

"She seems to be a most lovable woman. I should say her disposition is angelic, and she is the personification of the good, hard, common sense that is required to make a home happy."

"But don't you think she is a beauty?

"Well-er-you know"- the evident embarrassment of the truthful friend was painful to everybody in the car. He did not want to lie; neither did he wish to give offense by telling the truth. "That is a hard question to answer. You know ideas of feminine beauty differ greatly. A woman who is absolutely repulsive to one man is the acme of feminine beauty in the eyes of another."

"Ha, ha! I knew I couldn't be mistaken," laughed the young husband, and his friend flushed painfully. "That's all right, old man. I made up my mind to marry the homeliest girl I could find, and I wanted to get your opinion. I am satisfied now that I made no mistake. You know how many of our friends have had their lives wrecked by handsome little dolls for wives. Well, I made up my mind that I would get a wife who would not fascinate every one who came along."-San Francisco Post.

Mrs. Avery and Dr. Buckley.

Mrs. Rachel Foster Avery is authority for the statement that Dr. Buckley, the anti woman suffrage champion, lacks the sincerity even if he has the courage of his convictions. "'My reasons for mak-ing this statement," says Mrs. Avery, 'are as follows: A summer or so ago Dr. Buckley and the Rev. Anna Shaw met at Chautauqua for the purpose of debating the suffrage question. Aunt Susan (meaning Miss Anthony) and I accompanied Miss Shaw. The evening before the day of the debate Dr. Buckley and Miss Shaw were, in an entirely amicable way, discussing the subject of the future fray, and I myself heard him say, 'Oh, well, there's just one thing-no matter which one of us is right in theory, woman suffrage is certainly coming, it's simply got to come, we can't help seeing that, even those of as who are most opposed to it.' Therefore I say that Dr. Buckley has not the sincerity of his convictions."
