

Hood River Glacier.

FRIDAY, JUNE 19, 1896.

The republican platform adopted at St. Louis is plain enough on the tariff question, and calls for a tariff that will protect. On the money question it is not so explicit. It declares: "We are unalterably opposed to every measure calculated to debase our currency or impair the credit of our country. We are therefore opposed to the free coinage of silver, except by international agreement with the leading commercial nations of the world, which we pledge ourselves to promote, and until such an agreement can be obtained, the existing gold standard must be preserved." This is coming about as near a straddle as could well be done and will be able to call it a gold platform. Our congressman and senior senator will experience no trouble in getting out to it with alacrity. The party pledges itself to promote the bringing about of an agreement with the leading nations of the world for the free coinage of silver. How will this proposition strike the extreme gold men who have been telling us there can be no such thing as a double standard? The free silver republicans will have no cause to bolt; their party is pledged to "promote the free coinage of silver," and all can point with pride to the record of their standard bearer, whose every speech and vote on the money question was on the side of free silver.

The annual reunion of the Pioneers of Oregon, held at Portland last Tuesday, was more largely attended than any previous meeting of the kind. Old pioneers from every part of the state came with their children and grand children to help make what they called the Golden Jubilee a grand success. All who came to Oregon previous to its admission into the Union, February 14, 1859, are entitled to membership in the association. The Pioneers may have their reunions for many years to come, but like the Grand Army of the Republic, the days of the association are numbered. The brave men and women who faced the dangers of the long and tiresome trip to the wilds of Oregon fifty years ago, and saved this country to the great republic, are passing away. Their ranks will thin out faster and faster till the survivors meet at the last reunion.

Hood River is in need of a fruit cannery, one with a capacity capable of taking care of all strawberries over-ripe and under size for shipping. No ripe berries are packed for shipping long distances. The ripe berries are generally the largest and best in the patch, and being in the right condition for canning and preserving, could be gathered for the cannery very cheaply and growers would be glad to get rid of them at a small profit. Our reputation already possessed by our berries would sell the canned product without much trouble, and it would seem to promise a paying business from the start.

The election of Hon. E. B. Dufur as joint senator from the counties of Wasco, Sherman and Gilliam is a big gain for the democrats and highly complimentary to Mr. Dufur. In 1892, Mr. Steiwer, republican, was elected senator from these counties by a majority of 550.

It would be a duty of 5 cents a pound on wool would add $1,000,000 a year to Oregon's income. Who would pay the $1,000,000?

The people nominated McKinley, but the bosses made the platform.

Hood River Berries in Omaha.
The first carload of Hood River strawberries was forwarded to Omaha last week in a yellow Agent refrigerator car. Monday General Agent Baxter, at Portland, received the following message from E. Buckingham, dated Omaha: "The strawberries from Hood River arrived in Omaha this morning. Our people were present when the car was opened. The berries were in first-class condition, and there have never been nicer berries than these Oregon berries put on the market here. They are a big advertisement for Oregon, and you can say to all concerned that the Union Pacific yellow cars will give satisfaction to shippers."

"Hood River" Strawberries.
Rural Northwest.
Clark's Seedling strawberries have been arriving in Portland in considerable quantities from The Dalles and Southern Oregon this year and have been generally sold as Hood River strawberries. The picking and packing has not been up to the Hood River standard, however, and many of the boxes when exposed to sale did not appear to be more than two-thirds full. The reputation of Hood River berries has materially suffered as a result, though it has not been through the fault of the Hood River growers. As the Clark's Seedling has been extensively propagated and sold under the name of the "Hood River," we will probably have "Hood River" strawberries coming into market from California in a year or two.

Convention News.
The republican national convention now in session at St. Louis has done little besides effecting permanent organization and adopting the report of the committee on credentials. The sessions so far have been dull and featureless. The programme which was arranged for today's (Thursday's) meetings contemplates action upon the reports to be submitted by the different committees, when nominations will be in order. McKinley's nomination is certain, but there will probably be a little excitement over the nomination for vice president, which will no doubt be given to Governor Morton. There will be no material change in the platform from the one given out to the Associated Press.

Later—the telegraphic reports received late last night stated that McKinley had been nominated for president and Hobart of New Jersey for vice president.

Origin of the Word Strawberry.

Strawberry vines are often covered with a mulch of straw to protect them from cold in winter, and it is frequently taken for granted that this fact gives origin to the name. But in tracing the origin of words it is dangerous to jump at conclusions on similarity of sound. The name "strawberry" has nothing to do with straw. The most marked peculiarity of the strawberry vine is its spread of straw itself over the ground. From this peculiarity it took its name of strawberry, which by the change of the vowel e to the vowel a has become strawberry. The name is of Anglo-Saxon, which has been successively straw-berie, streo-berie, strewberry and strawberry. Strew, you know, is to scatter or spread. It is a fact worth remembering that in all languages words change in the course of centuries, and that the changes occur mainly in the vowels. The change from strewberry to strawberry is one of the easiest and most natural in the course of centuries, and that the changes from strewberry to strawberry are the most natural in the course of vocal evolution. It is not the easiest, but by the popular notion that the mulch of straw was a vital part of strawberry culture.—St. Louis Republic.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gundersen of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeding a gripple. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption, and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at the Hood River Pharmacy; regular size 50c and $1.
