

Hood River Glacier.

FRIDAY, JULY 21, 1896.

Secretary Carlisle, in one of his speeches, made the following statement: "The banks, trust companies, building associations and other similar institutions owe the people of the United States today $5,353,138,521 for money actually deposited, a sum nearly eight times greater than the total capital of the national banks in the country; while the life insurance policies held by the people in the various kinds of corporations and associations and in force today amount to $10,263,804,357, a larger sum than has been invested in all of our railroads, and about 15 times greater than the capital of all of the national banks. In view of these facts, which cannot be successfully disputed, I submit that you ought to seriously consider all the consequences to yourselves and your fellow-citizens before you agree to the free and unlimited coinage of legal-tender silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 in order that these great corporations and associations may have the privilege of discharging their debts to the people by paying 61 or 52 cents on the dollar, for that is exactly what it means. It is a low estimate to say that each one of the depositors in savings and other banks and in building associations, and each holder of a life insurance policy and member of a mutual benefit and assessment association, has dependent upon him or her an average of at least two persons, and, if so, a majority of our people are directly or indirectly creditors of these corporations and associations, and are interested in the preservation of a standard of value which will insure the payment of their claims in as good money as they parted with when they made their loans or deposits, or paid their assessments or premiums. Every dollar the people put into these banks and trust companies and other institutions, and every dollar they paid for insurance, was worth 100 cents, and would procure 100 cents' worth of commodities in the market when they earned it and when they invested it, and they have an unquestionable right to demand that it shall be refunded to them in dollars worth 100 cents everywhere."

The Journal of Hygiene, in a recent number, says: "Forty years ago, Mentone was a happy village in France, where lived peasantry happy in their farms and in their superb physical state, conditioned by the climate. It was discovered that the region was a most healing one for consumptives, and it became the Mecca for the unfortunate of Europe so stricken. The inhabitants abandoned their farms to wait upon the strangers. The strong, healthy women forsook their dairies and became the washerwomen of the consumptives' clothes. No precautions were taken; the disease was not then understood as now; the theory of tubercle bacilli not having been discovered. The place today is bacillus-ridden, a pest hole, death itself. The hitherto strong inhabitants are emaciated, a coughing, bleeding people, filled with the germs of consumption. The soil and air are both contaminated with the tubercle bacilli. It is no longer a health resort."

Bro. Ireland of the Moro Observer has been to the Cascade Locks and inspected the canal and locks. The Observer says: "We took a thorough survey of that 'immense' improvement which the government has permitted to hang like a pall upon the energies of the Inland Empire for 25 long years. There can be no better finished piece of work produced in the world than that completed at cascade locks by the Day contractors. We say completed; for such it is. They set April 10, 1896, as the date to turn the work over to the government complete in every detail, according to specifications. April 15, 1896, they did so notwithstanding the government, and there has not been a time from that date to the present hour that craft of any size suitable to navigate the Columbia river could not have been locked through, with permission from the secretary of war. Besides being finished, there has not been at any time during the recent flood, the least danger that the locks could be injured."

The apple crop all through the Eastern and middle states is reported as looking very promising, and as there is little danger of anything further to interfere with the crops, it is safe to predict a heavy yield of fine quality of fruit.

Thanks, Bro. Ireland. Always give credit when copying from the GLACIER, and you needn't feel ashamed of it. Other papers copy our patent medicine ads without giving credit.

This paragraph appeared in a recent number of an exchange: "Justice must prevail; if not by the ballot then by the bullet. Those who are seeking the true solution of the present economic problem are heaping coals of fire on their own heads when swift retribution comes." Such expressions as this are unjust, uncalled for, incendiary. The American people have resorted for the last time to bullets to right wrongs. The man who advocates resorting to bullets to settle present economic principles knows not what he is talking about.—Mountaineer.

Notes and News.
Maj. Edward McNeill has been elected president of the reorganized O. R. & N. Co.

Ernest Wetherell was drowned at Harlow's fish wheel, Lower Cascades, last Sunday.

Edward Martin, at one time deputy county clerk of Wasco county, died in Malheur county July 20th.

Thomas Monaghan, a pioneer of Skamania county, Wash., died at his home on the Columbia river, July 7th, aged 63.

The Oregon Agriculturist has been spared the snares and pitfalls usually attendant upon the first year of a paper's existence and has entered upon its second volume.

Gov. Lord has issued his annual proclamation warning the people against the crime and penalty involved in the setting afire of timber or other property of the state or of individuals.

General George W. Jones, the oldest surviving ex-United States senator, died at Dubuque, Ia., July 22d, aged 92. He represented as a delegate to congress the territory now included in Wisconsin, Iowa, Michigan and the west, except the Pacific coast. He was the state's first senator, and was prominent in national affairs, especially of the Northwest.

Sherman county wheat, that promised an abundant yield June 20th and 27th, at the time of the musical convention in Moro, will not be No. 1. Wheat that looked fair to middling July 3d and 4th, must now be rated generally inferior, No. 2 grade. All because of those blighting winds that blow nobody any good. However, bad as it is, there is enough to feed everybody; there is no starvation here, and our people have learned to take what God gives thankfully.—Observer.

The Denver Field and Farm has this to say of our Clark's seedling: "The Oregon strawberry known as the Hood River is creating quite a furor, and it is being more extensively set out than any other new or untried variety. That it should have proven such a success in Colorado is something of a mystery, as its range at home is limited to a very narrow strip of country along Hood river, where it is produced without irrigation. It may be that our irrigation as what makes it so successful here. In any event it has come to stay and will be largely planted for commercial purposes, as it is a great shipper."

W. J. Bryan, the presidential candidate, was in The Dalles last fall for a day, coming up from Portland to view the Columbia river scenery. While here, Col. Sinnott told for the 144 thousandth time his famous salmon story. Bryan listened to it without comment or surprise, but the story must have lingered in his memory, for the same afternoon he visited Herriek's cannery. At the time the receiving platforms were full of fine fresh chinooks. Looking at them admiringly for a moment, Bryan said in a sort of a soliloquy, "Wonder if that old man wasn't telling the truth."—Chronicle.

Good Words for Harrison.
The two candidates so far named for president ought to make only a few speeches this year and they ought to put some thought upon them in advance, because both, when called upon two or three times a day, are given to common place sayings. That is, they have here and there fine sentences, interspersed among a great many weak ones. There never was but one man in the United States who could make fifteen or twenty speeches a day and say exactly the right thing, and stop talking when he got through. That was Benjamin Harrison. He made a good president, but the greatest point the historian will rest upon to establish his sovereign greatness will be the speeches he made during his first campaign, because the real scholar, when he looks over them finds out three or four things. The first is that they were exactly appropriate to the occasion; that they did not contain one word too many or too few, and that the brightest man cannot take out of those speeches a word or phrase and substitute the word or phrase by one of his own creation without weakening what was said. About the most subtle mind in all this nation is that of Benjamin Harrison.—Salt Lake Tribune.
