Mr. Lyman Smith, who has been engaged for some time in running a planer at Astoria, met with a serious accident last Friday at that place. He was helping to fix the machinery for grinding the knives of the planer, when he was caught by a belt and whirled round about 50 times before he was extricated from his perilous position. His arm was broken and the doctors at first thought he was serious-ly injured internally. Mr. W. J. Smith went to Astoria as soon as word was received by telegram of the accition. dent. He reports his father resting quietly, and the doctors think he will be able to come home in a few days.

The Travers Literary.

The Travers literary club met last Monday evening at the home of Mrs. A. P. Batcham, with a good attend-ance. The topic for the meeting was "Our Thanksgiving Day." Among the contributors were Mesdames Bishop, Langilie, Watt, Rand and Canfield, Miss Wolfard and Miss Maud Bateham and Messrs Gray, Savage and H. C. Bateham. After the close of the reg-ular programme, coffee was served, fol-lowed by mild exercises in literary and scientific guessing contests. After this much of preparation, modern poets (of the club) were introduced and pace set for their flight in these classic lines:

There was an old man who said how Shall I escape from this terrible cow? I will all on the stile And continue to smile, It may soften the heart of this cow.

The free-for-all race that followed was highly successful and interesting. Numerous snap shots were taken, but only a few reproductions secured, and among them were these:

"There was a young man of Hood River, About the size of a sliver, Who married a dame Very much the same, And together they fell in the river."

There was a young man named Clum, Who certainly thought he was some; But the hair on his head— Hush! Enough has been said— On that subject he always is dumb."

A young lady stood Upon Mt. Hood, And gazed aboat a minit, She said, 'Was old Moses here; To him it would appear Mt. Pisgah wasn't in it.'"

Mr. Batcham stood upon the floor, In front of the sitting room door, And made a poor rhyme In dogeral time, Proving himself a great bore.

He ordered that all should write In the manner which he did indite, About an old cow Which kieked up a row And went off in a terrible fright."

There was a young girl in Hood River Who ran her thumb on a sliver; The sliver was long, And she sang a little song, And the next day it snowed."

There was a young man named York, Who tried to eat soup with a fork; But the rest of his lifs He will eat with a knife, And not care what people may tork."

There was an M. D.—'Ach, mein Gott!' Whom every one knows as 'Doc Watt, With his fixings and pills He can cure all our ills, Excepting those very long bills." Prizes were awarded to Messrs E. L. Smith, W. A. Langille and Ralph Savage.

She more about either till his day's work was ended and he was ready to start for home. Then he looked all over the room for his wife's present. It couldn't be found, and he thought of laying it on the shelf at the post office. He rushed to the post office and had the lady assistants turn everything upside down in a search for the missing package, but it wasn't there. He went home, told Mrs. McS. of his ill luck, and received a piece of her mind for his carelessness. Worried in trying to solve the mystery of the lost package, he ate his supper in silence, feeling that he deserved to be sent to bed without any supper. After supper, feeling a little more cheerful, it occurred to him (happy thought!) that he had placed the package in his table drawer down town, where he found it next morning. He will have his tables built without drawers hereafter.

HOOD RIVER, Or., Dec. 16, 1896-Editor GLACIER: Can the following incident be explained by the theory of the 'Survival of the Fittest?"

During the recent storm, a Cooper's hawk (Falco Cooperii, Aud.) swooped down like a falling meteor and siezed an Oregon snow-bird, which was feeding with a lot of its companions on Mr. Jackson's porch, within 4 feet of the store door, where some feed had fallen. Five or six persons were by the porch at the time and witnessed the adroit and daring achievement. This specie is noted for such exploits. EDGAR W. WINANS.
