Mr. Edgar Husbands was engaged Tuesday in mending his child's carriage, by putting in wire braces to make it more serviceable. While thus engaged he occupied a chair part of the time, when head work was needed. His wife happened to move the chair, thinking perhaps it was in his way. Edgar, not perceiving that the chair had been removed, stepped backward to occupy it and sat down very abrupt-ly. Among the spectators who had congregated to look on and give advice in fixing the baby carriage, none en-joyed the joke on the chair more thor-oughly than Doug Langille. Doug was leaning against the outside of the double front door of Edgar's shop. The door suddenly opened and Doug struck the floor with a report that sounded all ones form, while his allow wort all over town, while his elbow went through the big pane of glass in the door and gave him a pain in the region of his pocket book. Wednesday night some miscreants took from the yard of Mr. Joseph Ma-guire a stand of bees, and taking the hive down the street a short distance below Mr. Backus' residence, robbed it of its honey. Two persons evidently were engaged in the theft, at it could be seen next morning where the hive had been handed over the fence. Monday, Mrs. Maguire missed a can of lard, which was taken from the back porch. Mr. Maguire will hereafter keep a load-ed shot-gun and look out for these nocturnal visitors. A man who would steal a hive of bees would steal a red-hot stove and is a dangerous man in the community.

"Hatching the Sage Hen."

The lecture last Saturday evening by Mr. J. H. Cradlebaugh brought out a good-sized audience, though the weather was most disagreeable. The lec-turer was among the first residents of the Sage Hen state, going there when a small boy with his father, who was a territorial judge appointed by President Buchanan. Mr. Cradlebaugh was familiar with all the noted characters of the early days of Utah and Nevada. 1. He gave the names of all the residents in the first settlement of Carson valey and said that every one of them 3. had either achieved fame, was sent to the legislature or hanged. As he had not attained to either of the former, he $\frac{5}{5}$. awaited his destiny with some anxiety. The lecture was enjoyed by all present Every one expected a treat and none Bh were disappointed Mr. Cradlebaugh's Re lecture would take well in every town Sa on the coast, and now that the state of Su on the coast, and now that the state of Nevada has recently been well advertised, it would be a money making scheme for him to travel on the lecture he delivered here and at The Dalles.

Hood River Pharmacy. Where Parents are to Blame.

Prineville Review.

Will some one please explain why it is that during the final examination week in our public school a large num-ber of pupils quit school? This is the time when parents could find out just what their children have learned during the school year. Parents are not doing the right thing by their children or the teacher when for some trivial reason they stop their children. Let them stand their examination and if they fail to pass, see to it that they put in their time the next year in a more satisfactory manner. Church Notices.

the cure of this disease. It acts quickly, thus preventing serious complications and bad effects in which this disease oft-en leaves the patient. Williams & Bro-dus sius.

Some days since a fine duck was found dead on the bank of the fish pond ou Paradise farm. The head, neck and a part of the breast had been eaten off, and all wondered what had killed ita coyote, wild cat, skunk, coon, cata-mount, or some other "varmint." To settle the conundrum, the Dr. sprinkled the dead duck liberally with strych-nine and left him over night. Next morning the duck was lying about two rods away, and by his side lay an owl, breathing its last. It measured 4 feet 6 inches from tip to tip. Hood River takes first prize for apples and strawberries, it now proposes to contest the championship for owls. Fitzsimmons claims to be the "best man" because he beat Corbett. We now see that in a fight between a duck and owl, the latter has also shown himself to be the best "foul."
