Notes and News.

W. T. Sherman post, G. A. R., of Moro, will give a camp fire at that place May 8 h. All comrades are invited.

Gen. Wade Hampton may retain his place as commissioner of railroads, to which he was appointed by President Cleveland. It is said Secretary Sherman has sent Gen. Hampton word that he would not be removed.

The Columbian says bids for furnishing fuel at Vancouver barracks were opened last week. There were 38 bidders, and the lowest on fir cordwood was $1.44 a cord for 200 cords. The second lowest bid was $1.43.

The Oregon News makes the following wall: Poor woman! Over in Idaho, where they have just received equal suffrage, the woman, before they can vote, have to take an oath that they are a "male citizen twenty-one years old."

The laws of Oregon provide that every child between the ages of 8 and 14 years shall attend school at least 12 weeks in every school year, of which 8 weeks must be consecutive, provided they are not taught at home and there is a public school within two miles.

An Eastern country paper says: When a business man dies who has been in the habit of sending his job work out of town to get it done the local papers ought to let his folks get his obituary notice published in the job office that he patronized when on earth.

At Atlanta, Texas, April 12th, high winds from the north brought swarms of buffalo gnats, which attacked the stock, and from 200 to 300 head of horses and mules died from the effects of their bite. They did their work so quickly that the stock was in a dying condition when noticed.

War between the Greeks and Turks has commenced, and heavy fighting has been going on for the past week. Little Greece seems to have the sympathy of all the civilized world in this fight, but the odds are against her, and unless the great powers step in and stop the war, she has a big task before her. Both sides show great bravery in action, and both can claim victory from defeat. The price of wheat has not advanced materially, showing that speculators do not expect a general European war.

Here is a specimen of civil service "reform": Twenty-one special agents employed in the general land office were recently dismissed from the service temporarily, owing to a lack of money to pay their salaries. The appropriations to be made available July 1st will enable the department to re-employ the dismissed officials, but there is some question whether the men laid off will be reappointed. A majority of them are said to be democrats, and it is intimated that republicans will be put in their places after July 1st.

The Dufur Dispatch shows up one of Senator McBride's "relief" bills. D. J. Holmes has a claim against the government for $895 for his land claim included in the Warm Springs reservation. The Dispatch shows that the land is not worth $25, that the survey which included Holmes' land was made at an expense of several thousand dollars to the government and great trouble to the settlers, and that a separate bill introduced by the senator establishing the north line of the reserve, leaves Holmes' land two miles outside.

The members of the Texas delegation in congress claim that not a single district in that state has abandoned the democratic position on the tariff question. Statistics have been compiled showing that in the 12th district of Texas, which is represented by one of the bolters from the democratic position on the Dingley bill, and is the largest wool-producing district in the world, the wool growers will receive probably $60,000 more for their wool under the new rates, but the people of the district will be compelled to pay an excess of more than twice that amount for the goods they consume on account of the general increase of tariff duties.

A. W. Patterson, who has been connected with the Gazette for the past six years, departed for Indianapolis, Ind., on last evening's train and will visit his parents, whom he has not seen since coming to the West, and other relatives and friends. This fall he will enter law school where he will remain till he completes the course. Alvah will continue to take an active interest in newspaper work, however, and may return to Oregon at some future date, though he is undecided at present as to location. — Heppner Gazette.

School Money.
In accordance with law, the April appropriation of the county school fund was sent out from the office of the county superintendent today. The total amount distributed, $7,612.65, after deducting the $50 for each of 60 districts allotted to funds, gives $1.15 per capita on the school enumeration. In April '96, the amount distributed was $10,717, the per capita being $2. The greater percentage of delinquent taxes this year has caused the shortage in the county fund, and as the delinquent roll is now placed with the sheriff for further collection, it is probable that the August apportionment of '97 will exceed that of August '96. — Mountaineer.

Work on the Ditch.

HOOD RIVER, April 22, 1897.—Editor GLACIER: Work is progressing finely all along the line of the ditch. Beginning at the lower end of the work, I will mention those who have contracts, that your readers may have an idea what is being accomplished towards furnishing water to irrigate the large acreage now being set to strawberries. First comes E. Udell with his piece of ditch, which he has completed from the county road west to the line between O. L. Stranahan and Mrs. Alva Howe. M. F. Loy, who has the next piece, has also made a splendid job and will finish in a few days. Fred Howe has the contract to make the ditch from Capt. Blowers' place across S. J. LaFrance's farm; he is doing a good job and will be through by the 1st of May or before. Next comes O. L. Stranahan, who has three-quarters of a mile of flume to build. He says he will show all the rest of the boys how to build flume, and will finish by the 1st of May. D. Gibbons and George Stranahan have their half a mile of flume almost completed. Mark Davenport, with a force of eight men, is building another half mile of flume, which he will have completed by the middle of next week. Next comes John Purser, with his piece of ditch from the Valley Christian church south, who is making a good job. Alfred Ingalls has the next piece of ditch. He has been unable to do much with it, so far, on account of the ground being too wet. Isenbergs & Co. have their contract completed, so the writer understands, and have made a very nice piece of ditch for nearly a mile. Next comes Mr. Kiser and his crowd with a nice piece of work. Mark Davenport, with quite a force of men and teams, is doing splendid work on the main ditch. Scott Bowman has a piece of ditch to work on the main ditch and is getting along finely. From here we jump up to where Bishop & Cox are at work on the big flume. They are working 11 men, are about completing the second mile, building 300 to 400 feet per day, and will be down to Ditch creek in a few days. Davenport Bros., the contractors, have plenty of lumber and nails on hand, are running their mill for all there is in it, and say they are bound to have their contract fulfilled on time. C. A. BELL.

The Work of the Union.

HOOD RIVER, April 21, 1896.—Editor GLACIER: The directors of the Hood River Fruit Growers' Union have elected as a distribution committee, W. J. Baker, N. C. Evans and Joseph A. Wilson. This committee will make distribution of berries to different markets, to avoid, as far as possible, an oversupply to any market. They will see that all members have an equal show in what seems to be the best markets, from advices from dealers and our agents. They will also examine berries to see that poor berries poorly packed are not shipped.

Mr. G. R. Castner will be the agent in Missouri river markets and Mr. F. R. Coon the agent in Montana markets.

Shippers will receive account sales for all shipments and check to cover, on our receipt of same, we having made arrangements with bank by which I can draw on drafts as soon as our bank receives them, by which we avoid from five to ten days' delay, the time usually taken for collection, thus enabling growers to get their money at the earliest possible moment. Every member can see by the books what every other member receives for all shipments, it not being managed as a blind pool. N. C. EVANS, Secy.

Only a Dream.

BELMONT, April 14, 1897.—Editor GLACIER: If you happen to be short of items I might give you a short note to help fill up the paper. I have been pretty sick for the past two weeks with chills and fever, but am better, so as to be up and boss the work again. While I was sick I had a dream. I dreamed that I went to get up out of bed and fell on the floor, unsped three times and was dead. I looked at myself and it was me. My woman came to see if I wanted anything, and when she saw me she rallied the family and the neighbors. But I told them it was all for the best, that they wouldn't have to feed and clothe me. I told them I wanted to be buried in Idlewild, and directed them to put on my best suit, that it was good enough, and get a dry goods box or a boot and shoe box for a coffin, as it was hard times and no one would know the difference after I was buried. When we got to the burying ground, Mr. Frather stepped up and said it was a disgrace to the cemetery and that I would have to be put in the poor man's corner. "Well," I said, "I would just as soon be put there as anywhere, if you prefer." So they went to nailing the box, and I told them not to nail it very tight nor bury me very deep, for I intended to come out in about 40 days. Then I waked up and found I was yet alive. Now, what I want is for some good, inspired man to interpret this dream for me, if they will be so kind, and oblige. E. C. ROGERS.

Dying on the Range.

Blue Mountain Eagle.
The question as to what would be the best use that the horses of Eastern Oregon could be put to was for the past three months and is at present being rapidly settled, as that class of man's wealth has perished this winter in countless numbers. Roaming over the range in Grant county, and in fact all of Eastern Oregon are numberless bands of horses that are dying from starvation and exposure. The winter that we have just passed through has been an unusually long one, and at times most severe in the mountainous regions, and even cattle that have been taken care of, have suffered some. The approach of winter last fall found the range absolutely barren, there being but very little vegetation to sustain life of any nature.

The Eagle is informed, by a resident of Fox Valley that more strange horses have collected in the valley during the past winter, and have perished for the necessary wherewithal to sustain life.

From Slide creek word comes that many a carcass of what was once a beautiful animal can be found on the range in that locality, and especially up in the mountains near the head of Slide creek. The few that are left on the range are so thin in flesh that they scarcely make a shadow.

Valley Center.

"Where is Valley Center?" a stranger asks, "and why is it so called?" We will be pleased to act as guide for half a day and show you where and why. First, we must cross Hood river east of town, and before we proceed further, let us stop, and while gazing down into the rushing, foaming waters of the beautiful Hood river, reflect that success is obtained only by persistent effort. When starting in life, we are placed on the road at a point where one succeeds toward happiness, light and success, the other happens to despair, darkness and failure. So let us remember, as we turn to ascend the hill before us, that it is but a realization of a figure of speech and though the hill be long and steep our reward on reaching the top is correspondingly great. Reaching the top near Foss' bridge, one of the grandest views that can be found in Oregon of Mt. Hood is here obtained. The foot-hills merge from dark green to light, from the blue of the sea to that of the sky and are crowned with the pure white of the everlasting snow, from which, like liquid silver, the river descends, dividing the hills on either side and finally emptying its ice-cold, turbulent torrent into the mighty Columbia. On the left, as far as the eye can see, stretch mountains of beautiful green, with gently rounded crests covered with blue and red and yellow flowers, while here and there a bunch of pine trees stands out in bold relief against a clear blue sky. For seven miles a beautiful level road runs about midway of the river and the hills. On either hand are comfortable homes, well cultivated fields, orchards and strawberries now in full bloom. Five miles, and here we pass the broad fields of Mr. Mohr and Mr. Lage, the very wide and at the Pine Grove school house a road turns west, still practically level and free from rocks and boulders. It is a striking fact that hardly a rock as big as your fist can be found on the fields in the whole section of country. Continuing west, we cross the beautiful Neal creek at Harbison's mills—a more picturesque spot can not be found in Hood River valley. Neal creek divides this section of the country known as Valley Center nearly into equal parts. It is an ideal stream for trout and the tangled undergrowth on its banks afford cover for many a fine brace of grouse and pheasant.

A few miles back, as we passed them, we noticed the thrifty and extensive orchards of Messrs. Rand, Johnson, Sweeney and Sears. Then we come to those of Harbison Bros., Chris Dehman and E. L. Smith. Continuing a short distance further, we turn to our left and soon find ourselves in that fertile and populous section near the Odell school house. Green fields of grass and grain meet the eye at every turn, and the beautiful homes and well-kept farms tell a story of thrift and prosperity. We cross several clear spring branches and find our road again turns east. We pass by the wide-stretching hay fields of Mr. Hinrichs, and a half mile further on, Mr. Rhoad's place. Here we stop and examine a spring of water which has no equal in the country. The spring burs from the hillside full-grown stream several feet wide and a foot or more deep. Its waters are ice-cold the warmest days of the year.

Across the road is the Lenz place, one of the most desirable in the valley. As we near Neal creek again, we pass the well-kept orchard of Mr. F. H. Stanton, and a mile further finds us again at the Pine Grove school house, having traveled through the center and around the boundaries of Valley Center. G. C. B.

The Sheepmen Lose.

In the case of the United States vs. the Tygh Valley Land & Livestock Company, in the United States circuit court, Judge Bellinger rendered a decision overruling the demurrer to the complaint. The government brought suit to recover defendants from pasturing sheep on the Cascade reserve. Defendants demurred to the complaint on the ground that it had been the declared policy of the government to allow stockmen to pasture their herds on its domain. It was also set up that the government had no recourse against persons pasturing sheep or cattle on its domain, because the lands were not fenced, as the supreme court of this state had several times decided that, unless owners of lands had them fenced, they could not proceed against the owners of stock pastured thereon.

The court held that the government, in pursuance of an act of congress, having set aside the lands in question as a reservation, it was no longer a part of the public domain, and that the government had the right to protect them, and that the generally declared policy of the government to allow sheep and cattle to be pastured on its domain does not apply to lands set aside as a reservation. There are several other cases of the same nature in the court, to all of which this decision will apply.

Defendants were allowed 30 days to further plead. The suits against the sheepmen to restrain them from pasturing on the reservation were begun last summer, but were not pressed, and proceedings were delayed so that the sheep were kept on the reservation till the end of the season. It is hardly probable that they will be permitted to drive herds of sheep on the reservation this season.

O. R. & N. Trains.

Two daily passenger trains are now run between Portland and Umatilla. No. 4, the afternoon train out of Portland, is a new through train to Spokane, and arrives at Umatilla in the evening, continuing to Spokane via Wallula without change of cars and connecting direct with Spokane Falls and Northern train for the Kootenai and Great Northern east-bound fast express. Great Northern palace and tourist sleepers are operated daily on this train. This train is the connection for Heppner, branch trains from Heppner Junction, and all branch lines north of Walla Walla. No. 2, the evening train out of Portland, is still the through east-bound connection of the Union Pacific, but now runs via Pendleton and not via Wallula, connecting with Oregon Short Line east-bound flyer at Huntington. Pullman and tourist sleepers, also free reclining chair cars, are operated on this train to Chicago via Granger and Omaha.

Spring

Is the season of newness. New sap is in the trees, new buds on the boughs, new birdlings in new nests, new flowers in the forests, new grass in the fields. Nature cleans house when winter goes, and decks herself in new apparel. And she makes mankind feel the need of a renewing, too. Perhaps you, or some of your family, are suffering from the malady peculiar to the approach of spring. Though not dangerous, it is unpleasant. Unaccustomed languor and disinclination for exertion are among its symptoms. It is NEW BLOOD the system is craving.
