The pension appropriation bill, which passed congress last week, called forth debate that took a wide range. Gen. Grosvenor said he would favor the abolition of all examining boards and allow every ex-soldier a pension. This we believe would be the most satisfactory and economical pension policy in the end. There are about one million pensioners, and the great majority of them receive only from $8 to $8 a month, or a total of from $72,000,000 to $96,000,000 a year. The bill just passed carries an appropriation of $141,203,880. The examining boards and the army of clerks investigating claims and keeping records eat up a good portion of this appropriation; and a big part of the difference between ninety-six millions and one hundred and forty-one millions is paid in exorbitant pensions to the widows of generals and prominent men and others who are placed on the pension roll by special legislation. If a soldier has a friend in congress to introduce a special bill for his pension, it goes through, and he gets a good deal more than the $8 or $8 a month allowed the man who may be more worthy the government's bounty but hasn't even a "hospital record" to help him get on the pension roll. This special pension business is class legislation of the worst kind. Grover Cleveland never vetoed a "special" pension bill without doing the honest pensioner a great service. A service pensioner would stop all special pensions. The newspapers are calling for the publication of the pension roll. It is asserted by some that one-third of the pensioners at present are fraudulent. The publication of the list could hurt no worthy soldier receiving a pension, and we hope it will be ordered by congress. It is also claimed that young women are marrying old men in the soldiers' homes with the sole purpose of getting a widow's pension. It would be an easy matter to deny a pension where the claim showed fraud of this kind. There is really no cause for alarm about fraudulent widows swelling the pension appropriations when we consider what a hard task it is for a legitimate widow to become a pensioner. We have a case right here in Hood River which proves that it is not an easy matter for a soldier's widow to procure a pension. A. K. Isenberg died May 3, 1897. He was a pensioner on account of wounds received in battle. His widow, now an invalid and destitute, who was married to him 25 years ago, has so far been unable to obtain a pension, though her friends have been persistent in trying to assist her in proving her claim to a pension. Her claim will of course be allowed some day, because it is just, but not until the pension office is assured of that fact beyond a doubt. If Mrs. Isenberg had been the widow of a general or of a congressman with a "war record," who had been on the government pay roll at a fat salary all his life, her pension would have been granted as soon as a "special" bill could be introduced in congress, and no paltry $8 a month would be her portion.

Remedy for the Codlin Moth.

An old pioneer of Oregon and Washington, who has been interested in fruit culture all his life, writes as follows:

I have been hearing of the serious damage done to the apple crop at Hood River by the codlin moth, which has impelled me to write and try to benefit your locality by giving you my observations and experience. As nature's insect destroyer, there is nothing better than the centipede, as I have found. The centipede is found all over the world and certainly is the best forest cleanser known. It is a crustacean, with bones on the outside, and is a real vertebra animal, with I don't exactly know how many joints, and a pair of legs to each joint, and is considered poisonous in tropical countries. It cannot swim nor fly and has some very potent enemies, which destroy it in some parts of the world. Flocks of sheep or goats will destroy them where the sheep and goats are pastured in the forests; also, close, clean cultivation of fields or orchards will kill or drive them away. In an orchard they should be protected by giving them nests of rubbish, rotten wood, stone piles or slabs of rotten bark laid under the trees. They also require some moisture and will not stay without it. In this climate they do their feeding entirely in the night time. When I settled here it had been an old logging camp and fires had burnt off the timber. The centipedes had been destroyed and were three or four years in returning. My trees got quite foul with the black scale, fungus and various kinds of aphids. I sprayed a good deal but failed to keep my orchard clean; but the centipedes have come back in force, and now my orchard is clean and bears well, and the fruit is of the best quality. The shrubs and small fruits are cured also.

Strong Points in Favor of Union.

Surely our berry growers have learned a few things by experience. We have learned that war is expensive. Everybody preaches the doctrine that a house divided against itself cannot stand, but what good is the preaching without the practice. Last summer, while representing the Hood River Fruit Growers' Union in Montana, a prominent dealer said to me: "The failure of your growers to unite in one union has cost all of them 50 cents a crate on the whole of the Montana shipments. Other dealers said, "That's so." The greater the number of dealers controlling the sale of our berries and the more numerous the sources of supply, the greater the danger of unprincipled competition and sales ruinous to the grower. Even if we have only the "principled" dealers to handle our fruit, still there may be war at our expense. For what is the first principle of such a dealer? It is this: "We will not be undersold by our competitors; we will meet their price." He must keep his customers and get more. The grower is not a customer, but is often the victim of this rule governing competitors in trade. When his small returns are sent in he is likely reminded of "the great law of supply and demand," that scapegoat of many crimes, and the producer too often believes that he and a few of his neighbors have actually glutted the markets of the world! Such are the chances of war. Now, compare the results of war with the rewards of peace. Last year our growers had war at both ends of the line and received 47 per cent of the gross sales, while the express company that in a few days carried the product of a whole year's labor of about 150 growers, received—that is, "took"—nearly 32 per cent of the gross sales. The express company had no war on its hands. It was at peace with itself and all the world. Express companies, according to my observation, do not continue in business for their health.

Having represented the union in various markets the past three years, I think I understand some things after investigation better than before. There is seldom an over-supply of fine fruit, but frequently an over-supply of poor fruit. The latter is profitable chiefly to the transportation company that hauls it. The commission man scowls when it arrives. The retailer buys it sparingly around like a vulture seeking something to fit his case, and smiles the only smile. I am convinced that the only way to contend against this poor fruit is to "overcome evil with good." The good can be made to crowd out the bad. You know, "Nature abhors a vacuum" and so does a market in strawberry time, if it cannot be properly supplied with fine fruit it will tolerate, even seek for "anything" to fill the vacuum. The real demand is for good fruit, uniform quality, prime condition on arrival, regular and ample supply. The locality capable of meeting these requirements can feed the market. But this requires carloads and co-operation. Only a few localities are favorable for such a business; but a few such places will supply the greater part of the berries consumed in the future. The small shipper will be elected to follow some other business.

Last summer's experience in Butte demonstrated this proposition. When our first car arrived the town was full of berries of all grades from many localities. The car had hardly left Poetello before dealers began to make haste to get rid of everything on hand and peddlers loaded their wagons with berries not generally called "peddler's stock" at great bargains. Damaged berries went at 25 cents a crate in wagon loads, and many thought our car had smashed the market and that ruin would be our portion. But by phone and wire our 600 crates were placed before arrival. We had the only good "shipper's stock" in Montana, and the market was ours for the first time. Straggling shipments from many points ceased. City buyers, seeing the good quality and condition of our fruit, bought liberally, and that, too, at better prices than we could get the day before for express receipts. Yes, the market was "smashed," and the Hood River people have it within their power to occupy in this way several markets which we must feed if our industry is to live. We must go wherever a carload business can be done, including Colorado and all the country west of the Rocky Mountains. The more we can do in this country the less we shall be compelled to do in the Missouri river markets in poor years, such as last year, when the combination of circumstances was more unfavorable than may occur again in many years.

While in Denver, in 1896, the proprietor of the strongest commission house in that city said to me: "There is no locality in the United States that has advantages equal to Hood River for supplying strawberries in carloads." Said he, "Why don't you people raise some berries and combine as one man, so that you can supply the markets?" We have seen bad luck by high water and suffered the effects of hard times; but must we lose our heads? A short time ago the wheat farmers were discouraged; the cattle man were a down cast look; the horse man "threw up the sponge," and the sheep man vigorously entered a national political party to save him from utter ruin. In our situation the best thing to do is to persist with as much nerve as we can command. When the herd is heaviest and the mire the deepest is the time for all to put their shoulders to the wheel. We must maintain harmony in order to overcome the difficulties. Small differences should not be magnified. A little concession and a "whole lot" of unanimity for the common good is decidedly in order at this time.

Don't be persuaded into buying liniments without reputation or merit—Chamberlain's Pain Balm costs no more, and its merits have been proven by a test of many years. Such letters as the following, from L. G. Bagley, Hueneme, Cal., are constantly being received: "The best remedy for pain I have ever used is Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and I say so after having used it in my family for several years." It cures rheumatism, lame back, sprains and swellings. For sale by Williams & Brosius.

Water for 1898.

Parties wishing to purchase water from the Valley Improvement Co. for the season of 1898 are requested to send in their written applications at once, stating how many inches of water are wanted and where the same is to be used.

In order to sell more than 200 or 250 inches of water considerable work will have to be done, and unless we are sure we can sell more than this number of inches next season, we do not wish to incur the expense of enlarging the ditch. Written applications for the exact amount to be used will be required.

Summons.

In the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for Wasco County.

Inez F. Broadbent, plaintiff, vs. Frederick M. Broadbent, defendant.

To Frederick M. Broadbent, the above named defendant:

In the name of the state of Oregon, you are hereby required to appear and answer the complaint filed against you in the above entitled court and cause on or before the first day of the next regular term of the court following the expiration of the time prescribed in the order for the publication of the summons, to wit: On or before the 24th day of February, 1898. And if you fail so to appear and answer or otherwise plead in said cause; the plaintiff, for want thereof, will apply to the court for judgment in the premises, and the complaint filed herein, to wit: That the bonds of matrimony between plaintiff and defendant be dissolved, that the plaintiff be awarded the custody of the minor child mentioned in said complaint, Merle H. Broadbent, and for such other and further relief as to the court may seem equitable.

This summons is served upon you by publication thereof, by Honorable W. L. Bradshaw, Judge of said court, which order bears date of November 24, 1897, and was made and dated at Chambers, in Dalles City, in Wasco county, Oregon, on the 24th day of November, 1897.
