County politics begin to boil. Hood River is developing a number of candidates for county offices from the different parties. Mr. E. S. Olinger, who stepped aside two years ago to allow T. J. Driver to be renominated for sheriff, will this time be a candidate before the republican convention for the nomination for sheriff, and his friends will be at the convention in force to see that the Dalles crowd fulfill their part of the contract made two years ago. Mr. Olinger has been a resident of Hood River for 20 years and is well known throughout the county. He can carry Hood River valley by at least 250 majority and would make an efficient sheriff. He has been a hard worker in the ranks of his party and deserves the nomination. Among other candidates for the different offices we have heard mentioned the names of Capt. A. S. Blowers and George T. Prather for the legislature on the republican ticket and C. L. Morse for the same office on the union ticket; Capt. F. M. Jackson for county commissioner on the democratic ticket, and J. W. Morton, E. E. Savage and John W. Hinrichs for the same office on the republican ticket. Hood River will be entitled to a commissioner, and either one of the gentlemen named for the office of commissioner will get nearly the solid vote of Hood River, provided the opposition candidate is from some other part of the county. As Hood River goes, so goes the county.

General Nathan Kimball at Ogden, Utah, January 20th. During the siege of Vicksburg General Kimball commanded a brigade of General Bluffs. The soldiers of his brigade were in the habit of going in swimming in the Yazoo river without leave of absence. To discipline the boys the general would order a roll call at any hour of the day, and those not present were given 48 hours on picket. The boys retaliated by yelling "roll call" at the general whenever he appeared, and he was soon afterwards given another command. A year later, while on his way to Little Rock, his train passed through Brownsville Station, where was located one of the regiments he had punished with inopportune roll calls. As the train stopped at the station, General Kimball appeared at the door of a box car, holding in his hand a demijohn. He was immediately recognized by the soldiers on the depot platform when he called out: "Hello, boys; here's 'Old Roll Call.' Come and take something with him." And after drinking from the same canteen, General Kimball had won the lasting affection of his old enemies of the 22d Ohio.

A grocery man in Chicago went to the city hall to procure a license to sell milk. He got into the wrong office and was given a license to marry. He went home and posted up his license and began to sell milk. His two sons read in the afternoon papers that their father and mother had taken out license to get married and came home and demanded to know of their father what it all meant. The father did not have the least idea what they were talking about, and he asked for an explanation. They showed him the papers and he in turn showed them his milk license, as he supposed. The situation was then clear. The joke was so good, however, that they decided to celebrate the wedding over again, and this they did in the old fashioned way until an early hour next morning.

A neat soap swindle is being worked in Willamette valley towns. An agent distributes samples of soap and endeavors to get orders on the local grocery patronized by the victim. Failing to get an order, he asks the person to sign a blank showing that he has at least called at the house. The blank is usually signed and afterwards turns up filled out with a liberal order on the local dealer for soap. With the orders in sight, local dealers are easily persuaded to order a generous supply of soap.

The scheme of union between the three parties—democrats, populists and silver republicans—for the offices, seems to be working smoothly so far. But if it is found after the nominations that the silver republicans have generously given up all the fat offices and ask only the legislative tickets, will the democrats and populists deliver the goods on election day?

In President McKinley's speech at the banquet of the national association of manufacturers in New York, Jan. 27th, he declared that the gold standard must be maintained and a law on that line put on the statutes.

The vote in the senate, January 28th, on the adoption of the Teller resolution stood 47 to 32, with five pairs—showing that the free silverers have a majority of 15 in that body. The resolution will not pass the house, if it ever comes to a vote. The senate contains 10 free silver republicans, according to this vote. If the house contained the same proportion of free silver republicans according to numbers, free silver would have a majority. But the republicans of the house follow more closely the lines laid down by the administration in its entire policy, seeming to know on which side their bread is buttered.

A vote was taken in the house on the Teller resolution, January 31st, and it was defeated by 50 votes. The Oregon delegation voted with the victors.

Four men in San Francisco are making arrangements to go to Klondike in a balloon. They will use the balloon made for the Chicago world's fair.

Dawson City is to have a dandy paper. This will be in part made up by the price, which will be one dollar a copy.

Portland box factories are crowded with orders. One factory is making up a shipment for the Orient, consisting of 180,000 pieces of fir barrel stocks for Hong Kong and 5,000 spruce tea boxes for India.

The country editor is safe. The new counterfeited $100 bill is an inch shorter than the genuine. All that is necessary to detect them is to keep a genuine bill on hand for comparison.

The elections in Wasco on Monday resulted in favor of incorporation and license by a large majority, and the following ticket was elected: Mayor, George N. Crossfield; recorder, W. F. Johnson; marshal, Angus Cameron; treasurer, V. C. Brock; aldermen, W. M. Reynolds, Lucius Clark, W. A. Merchie, B. E. McPherson, W. M. Booth and P. L. Kretzer. Wasco may be high and dry, but it has voted not to be "dry."

Hon. John Minto, the great enemy of forest reserves, in a letter to the Oregon Agriculturist, presents the theory that agriculturist, or rather trees, exhaust the water supply in place of conserving it. He illustrates by showing what one big tree will do in a potato patch by taking the moisture from the spuds. An Irishman was told that feathers made the best pillow. He experimented one night by laying a feather under his head. Next morning he arose with a headache. "Begorra," he said, "if one feather will give a man the headache, what would a pillow case full do?"

Spoiled the Medicine.
AT HOPE, Jan. 29, 1898.—Mr. Editor: Why did you go and spoil a good, strong, sensible editorial by ending about your rheumatic joints? I thought as I read it that I would send the paper to a friend who has an attack of Klondike fever; but its medical qualities were lost, and I fear that even the admonition, "shake well before using," could not redeem it.

Which Brown?
Times Mountaineer.
Several days ago some of the charitable societies of the city were informed that there were two unfortunate women on the hill living together who were in destitute circumstances. The women and their children were promptly supplied with the necessities of life, and one of them being sick the delicacies for her to eat were supplied. A few evenings later the husband of the sick woman, a piece of humanity by the name of Brown, came home (he had been at Hood River) and proceeded to create a famine in the cupboard, by devouring everything nice that he could find. Next morning the Elk's charity committee was notified of his conduct, and they informed him that his presence would not be needed about the premises. Brown has made himself scarce since, and will probably not be of any more annoyance. If he is the authorities will take him in charge.

The Art of Lighting a Pipe.
Sports Advertiser.
Fill the bowl with your favorite brand and press down firmly, but can't drive to see how solid you can pack it. If you make it as solid as wood it will burn like wood and make a coal fire about as hot and ungrateful. Don't "pull" as though you had no more matches and feared it would "go out." Light a small spot directly in the centre. Smoke slowly until it works its way gradually downward. If it undertakes to spread press it down again with thumb or finger. A half minute's care in starting is all that is required. Now, smoke on slowly. The little fire continues downward, delicately roasting the tobacco on the sides, and presently, when you have this off, there will come a revelation in soft, mellow smoke, so cool, so delicious, so soothing, that you will never regret having read this.

State Eucampment, G. A. R.
Times Mountaineer.
On Saturday evening the G. A. R. and W. R. C. met in joint assembly in their hall, to make arrangements for the encampment which is to be held in this city in April. Adjutant-General W. N. Morse and wife of Portland were present, and a reception and banquet were tendered them in connection with the meeting. H. H. Leonard presided and stated the object of the meeting, and the Commercial Club had kindly considered the matter and agreed to appoint committees and help to make the encampment a success and credit to the city. Committees from the Commercial Club, G. A. R. and W. R. C. will be appointed at once, and they will immediately enter into the work.

We regret to learn that Rev. Geo. W. Barnhart of Arlington is still very ill, with no hope of recovery soon. The trouble is in his head, doctors disagreeing as to whether it is paralysis or hemorrhage, and it is being arranged to take him to a Portland hospital for treatment.—Fossil Journal.

The new 1-cent stamp is green in color.

Don't Practice What They Preach.
Oregon Agriculturist.
Our attention was accidentally called a few days ago to a label on a broom. The first line on the label was the good advice: "Patronize Home Industry," and the next line was "Choice Eastern Corn." The last line showed that the broom was made in Portland, Oregon. First-class broom corn is grown in both Oregon and Washington. This reminds us of the story now going the rounds of the Oregon press of a merchant who wrote a letter to the editor of the local paper thanking him for an editorial urging the readers of his paper to patronize home industry—said letter being written on a letter-head printed in Chicago.

Penney's Rival.
The New Age.
It becomes more apparent day by day that General Compton will be Mayor Penney's most formidable rival for governor in the democratic party in this county the general is rapidly becoming a favorite candidate of the democrats. Here, as well as elsewhere in the state, his candidacy is growing every day. He has always been a straight democrat and is the kind of a man the party is looking for, as a leader. He is a great favorite among the old soldiers of the state, who will give him strong support, regardless of party. Penney must look out for General Compton.
