LATEST NEWS BULLETINS.

PORTLAND, March 3.-A late dispatch says it is known positively that the board of inquiry has reported, but it is unable to determine the cause of the disaster to the Maine. The president is determined to find out the facts. Two Klondikers were frozen to death on an Alaskan trail with $100,000.

"Independent as a Hog on Ice." Hood RIVER, Feb. 28, 1898.-Editor GLACIER: As the strawberry harvest is fast approaching, we, as growers, are in a state of nervous prostration in regard to the different methods by which the two unions propose to market our fruit. First it was generally supposed we were to have but one union, but now it seems we are to have two or more, as the case demands, with a score or more detectives at from $4 to $7 a day, cigars and other delicacies included. Then, when the fruit is shipped, we are told the berries are selling for good prices and not to sell on the street at home, but ship all to our detectives, as they can sell for more than we possibly can get here. Of course, we send the fruit; but how is it when the returns are handed us with a bland smile that reaches quite to the ground. We read: "Hood River, June 12; A. B. Fruit Co. sold for acct. of M. R.; where sold, Milwaukee; 20 crates, $000; —— net, $000." After reading the above we do not face about manfully, but take several steps backward until we regain conscious-ness, then turn several corners in order to avoid the stores where we have traded for several years and have never leisure in Hood River during the past week has been down at Rand's block where the excavating is being done for the bowling alley. It is such an unusual sight to see men at work in this town that everybody deserts his place of human and the such as the such of business and sits around guying the workmen or advising them how things ought to be done. Wednesday, while Grant Evans was called away from his barber shop to watch precedings at the bridge of the statement, which reads: "June the barber shop to watch precedings at the statement, which reads: "June the barber statement, which reads in the district, and as many claim a national debt is a n receiving letters daily from commission men who tell us they have a friendly feeling in their throbbing bosoms for Dr. and Mrs. Hines desire in this us, that they will give us the highest way to express their gratitude to the market price, send us statements every day, and that we must break up both unions, do away with middle men and save the commission and expense of the detectives; and further, they will be good to us and remit occasionally, as the case requires, in order to pay for crates, pickers and hay, then will send the balance (if there is any) after self and family return from their seaside outing. No, sir! we don't want any connection with the unloss unless we can be an officer, as we are all invested with talent (that is, enough of it) to travel from town to town, watch commission men, draw our pay, return home and report as to condition of berries.
